Tomatoes Canned Whole: Pack tomatoes whole without peeling in a wide mouthed jar, half fill with cold water; put the jars in a large saucepan with water to reach halfway to the jars. Bring water to the boiling point and boil 30 minutes. Take the jars out, fill them to overflowing with boiling water and seal. Done in this way the full value of the tomato is retained.

Pepper Pot: Boil three pounds of trine, cut it in pieces and put on the fire with a knuckle of veal, and a sufficient quantity of water, part of a pod of pepper, a little piece of sweet herb according to your taste, salt and some dumplings. Stew until tender and thicken the gravy with butter and flour.

Baked Hash: Grind left-overs in meat (beef, lamb or ham) and to each cup add one medium sized onion, two small potatoes and one carrots, if desired. Grind all together. Moisten with a little water, add salt and pepper. Bake 15 or 20 minutes in a slow oven. When you use ham, milk and egg beaten together it is an improvement.

Beef Tongue With Mushrooms: Boil a beef tongue until tender, take off the outer skin, then rub with butter and beaten yolk of an egg. Put in baking dish, add 1-2 cup of water in which the tongue is boiled, 1-2 glass of wine, 1-2 can of mushrooms. Sprinkle with salt and pepper; let bake until brown; served garnished with the mushrooms.

A SUGGESTION

Dear Corner Members: It has been sometime since I have written but with going here and there and having company have been busy. I have a suggestion to make. When a Corner sister passes on couldn't her real name be printed? So many times it happens it might be some one we have met or heard about but knew her only by her pen name. I was much interested in Red Clover's accident and when I read of her death just wondered if it was any one I had ever met. My sympathy surely went to whatever family she left.

Billie: Have you been on a vacation. Do send some more of your interesting letters.

Tatis: Your nice letter received this morning. Had begun to think my long letter had laid you up for fair.

I suppose many are busy with the last of the canning. It sure is nice to have a well filled cupboard.

I suppose many of you will attend one or more fairs. I would like to have gone to Hartford fair but could not. Springfield fair is a fine one to go to. Those of you who have never been do try to go this year.

CLUB NO. 3 MEETS AT GOSHEN HILL OCT. 15.

Dear Social Corner Members: Club No. 3 will hold its next meeting Thursday, Oct. 15, at Goshen hill either on the green or upstairs in the schoolhouse, according to the weather.

Bring food as usual. We have dishes we can use.

The Goshen members will act as hostesses and cordially invite members from other clubs or anyone who wishes to attend.

I hope we won't have such a thunder shower as we did the last time the club met with us. Cordially yours,

ONE MORE.

GREETINGS FROM CALLA LILY

Dear Cornerites: What a nice day after the rain, and the flowers so pretty in the yard! Our Corner coleus flower is in full bloom and every time I see the budding of it (goldenrod) is say "Oh, dear, now fall is coming on." Our summers are so differently from those when I was a school girl. Then there was so much hot weather and nights so hot to sleep, and now they are so cool. Well, time changes all, so we must take it and let it go at what it brings forth.

Our visitors in our homes are going or gone. I had four visitors Social Corner day, so couldn't come out as I expected to. In lots of ways I was very sorry I couldn't come, but we can't always do as we expect to.

Eclipse: I'm going to try your pickle recipes. They look easy, and we like pickles better than preserves.

Pen-a-way: Son saw your corn fritters and will have to try them for him.

Balsam Fir: Got your card. The clippings were nice. If everybody saw pleasure in sending out jokes and clever sayings, how much better than the false reports about innocent people. Do I owe the letter to you?

Scottie: Hear you just returned from Groton Long Point Friday. Hope you enjoyed your few days' stay there.

Yankee in Crackerland: You surely ought to find Connecticut folks in Florida, for quite a few from here have headed their noses and autos that way. Enjoyed your letter of Florida very much, gives people going an idea of what is ahead of them. Write some more.

We hope to see a good sized party at Club No. 3 in our new and larger meeting rooms, Oct. 7 in Odd Fellows' hall, where we hope the work will be easier for the hostess by each bringing their own dishes to use at the table, such as plate, cup, knife, fork and spoon, not forgetting the articles of food for dinner.

Scottie and her helpers will be on hand to receive food.

Chocolate will direct the entertainment part of the program.

So don't forget the place, Odd Fellows' hall, third building from post office toward Franklin square, on Main street.

CALLA LILY.

READY FOR MORE GOOD TIMES

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I have just finished canning peaches and while I am cooling off, I think I can write a few lines. Last Saturday it was so nice and cool (?) I made Baltimore pickle and catsup, finished up about four o'clock, took a bath, and went to Atlantic beach, got home about ten, got a lunch for five of us, and called it a day.

I was glad to see such a nice Corner page Saturday morning. I am glad it is settled, where we will meet and hope all the sisters will come, and unite together for a good old time social again. If all work together in sisterly love, we can't help but have a good time.

I wish Stillwater was here, to give us one of her good talks. She will never be forgotten, always ready to do her part and help others.

Mrs. Dan: I want to send you my green tomato mince meat recipe. It is a grand one, and will never fail. I hope, to meet you some time and tell you about it. Here goes:

Green Tomato Mince Meat: 1 peck green tomatoes, 1 peck apples, 2 pounds raisins, 1 cup water, 1 cup vinegar, 4 pounds sugar, one and a half cup suet, 2 tablespoons each of allspice, cinnamon, and cloves, half pound citron. Put tomatoes through food chopper, then put in a colander and put boiling water over them three times, drain well, then put all things together and simmer slowly, until tender. I only use half of this recipe.

Now I must stop I am afraid Mr. Editor will think I am taking too much space.

If not too late, I would like a pin. (Thank you.) Long live the Social Corner.

CELIA LOUISE.

TOMATO MINCE MEAT RECIPES

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I was disappointed in not seeing more of the old members at our September meeting. However, we had a good time and broke up early.

True Blue: I want to thank you for the little gift; it is appreciated.

Necia: I counted 17 Cornerites at the Wigwam, including myself. How pretty everything looked under the white birches.

Mrs. Dan asks for

Green Tomato Mince Meat Recipe: Chop fine, drain off the juice, then measure 8 cups green tomatoes, add 6 cups sour apples chopped, 4 cups brown sugar, 2 cups molasses, 1-2 cup butter, 1-2 cup vinegar, 1 tablespoon salt. Cook 3 hours; when nearly done, add raisins and spices to suit taste, put in glass jars while hot.

Here is another recipe—both are good:

Mock Mince Meat of Green Tomatoes: Chop fine 8 quarts of green tomatoes, drain off the juice, then add as much water as juice and scald in that water and pour off, then in another water and pour off, add 3 lbs. of light brown sugar, 3 lbs. of raisins chopped fine, 1 teacup of chopped suet, 2 tablespoons of salt, 1-2 cup vinegar, 1 cup clear cold coffee, juice and grated rind of 1 lemon, 1 whole nutmeg grated, 2 tablespoons cinnamon, 1 tablespoon each of cloves and allspice. Cook till tomatoes are the color of the raisins and put into glass jars hot.

Wishing you success, yours for the good of the Corner.

JOAN.

GRAVY WITHOUT LUMPS

Dear Corner Members: To the sister who wanted to know how to make gravy without lumping try this please:

Take two tablespoons of butter and two tablespoon of flour, work it together in your pan you are to make your gravy in until well blended together. Take 1 cup of milk heat it hot and pour over your well blended flour and butter and by just stirring constantly the flour will dissolve with the butter and it will be like cream. Boil on the stove two minutes (I do all milk or water off of the stove). Now take your one-quarter pound shaved beef cut up fine with scissors until your teacup is full, pour hot water over, let stand ten minutes—pour water off of beef, add to your gravy with a few grains of pepper. Then

WESTERLY

The Rhode Island World Wide Guild, with representatives from twenty Baptist churches all over Rhode Island, about 120 in all gathered at the Wigwam hotel at Pleasant View Beach Friday for their "House Party" planned for Friday, today (Saturday) and Sunday.

Among those present are four from Auburn, five from Arlington, two from Broadway, Providence, two from Calvary, Providence, two Centredale, Georgiaville, two from Central Falls, six from Federal Hill Italian Center, Providence, eleven from First Westerly, twenty from Calvary, Westerly, three from Mount Pleasant, one from Meshanticut, seven from Quidnesset, eight from Phenix, four from Plainfield street, Providence, eight from Pawtucket First, five from Pawchet, two from Cranston street, Roger Williams, eight from South, Providence and eight from the Warren churches. The registration is in charge of Miss Mary C. Wilcox of Westerly, while Miss Sallie Coy, also of Westerly a state secretary of the World Wide Guild has general charge of the program. Other associate secretaries of Rhode Island present are Mrs. Andrew Gardiner, Mrs. Allan D. Hunter of Providence, Miss Louise Madison, East Providence and Miss Dorothy Kitchner of Providence. Among others present is Mrs. Leslie L. Swain of Providence, president of the Rhode Island Baptist Missionary society.

In the Friday morning session of the Third District court, Clerk M. Walter Flynn, Jr., read the following:

Judge Michael J. Turano came into court and called the first case, state vs. Michael Algiero, charged with having liquors in his possession, as the result of a raid made on his place on Pierce street. He pleaded nolo. Town Solicitor Ferguson told the court that by virtue of a search warrant Chief Brown with officers had visited the place of the defendant and had found 262 bottles of beer, one pint of whiskey and a half pint of gin. The raid was the result of a number of complaints and the samples sent to the State Assayer Fenner in Providence showed between 40 and 50 per cent. alcohol. Algiero was found guilty and fined $50 and costs which he paid.

Morris Saxs of Providence was called and it was represented to the court that word had been received from Providence that illness prevented the man's appearance and the speeding case was continued one week.

Arthur F. Noon, 20, of Providence, was presented on complaint of Frank H. Brown, chief of police of Hopkinton, charged with operating an automobile on Broad street, Hopkinton, at a rate of speed unreasonable and improper. He pleaded guilty. Solicitor Ferguson informed the court that the defendant Sept. 12th operated his automobile at 36 miles per hour, on the new stretch of state highway and that he passed three children on one side and two on the other, in some traffic, without warning and there were some adult pedestrians. Judge Turano inquired if there were sidewalks on that particular stretch and when told there were, found respondent guilty and fined him $5 and costs, which he paid.

Jewish residents of Westerly at their synagogue on Union street, beginning Friday at sundown and continuing through the week-end, will mark the observance of Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year. Jewish merchants in Westerly will close their stores all day today (Saturday). They will also suspend business on Monday, Sept. 28, which is observed as the solemn Day of Atonement.

Thursday evening a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Nancye Lanphear, whose marriage with M. Walter Flynn, Jr., will take place next week, was given at the home of Mrs. William St. Onge. About thirty were present, including guests from Norwich, New London, North Carolina and Providence. Miss Lanphear received many beautiful gifts. A social evening was spent and lunch was served.

It is expected that a number of Westerly men and women will be among the 500 who will appear next week in the United States district court in Providence, to be naturalized. Judge Arthur L. Brown will preside at the special session. Next week on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday there will be special fall naturalization classes, and the following week the court will make new citizens on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

The early session of district court began with Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown as court officer, but when court recessed until 2:30 to take up the cases of Lockwood vs. Deutch, in which damages were asked for, as the result of a collision of automobiles at Thompson's Corner and the second case in which damages were sought for injuries to a child, Sheriff Fred T. Mitchel acted as court officer until the noon adjournment at 12:30 and again in the afternoon session when court came in again at 1:45.

Previous to the morning recess, the cases for card playing on the first day of the week, following the arrest of seven young men on Pierce street by Patrolmen George H. Champlin, Sunday afternoon, was called by Judge Turano. Last Sunday evening three of the young men pleaded guilty and were fined, but four pleaded not guilty and had their cases continued, and surety in the sum of $25 was required for their release. The four cases called were Antonio Gippone, Nicola Trebessanti, surety; Joseph Salemano, Santo Nigrelli, surety; James Gingerelli, Salvat or Palidino, surety, and Louis Pingalore, Mary Pingalore. Judge Thorne asked if there was any appearance for these cases, if not he would default each case, and direct the bonds be surrendered. A capias was issued in each case and Officers Champlin and Kessel started out to begin service. At noon Officer Kessel returned with James Gingerelli and he was placed on the stand at 12:30. "Why did you not appear in court today?" asked Judge Turano. The defendant replied that he was not summoned until next week, as was the case with the others. Looking at the warrant, Judge Turano found the return date Sept. 15th in the clerk's entry. "This will not prevent your pleading now if you care to," said the judge, and Gingerelli changed his plea to one of guilty and was fined $5 and costs of $7.80, amounting to $12.80, which he paid.

When the automobile damage cases of Ray L. Lockwood, p. a., vs. Louis Deutsch and Ray L. Lockwood vs. Louis Deutsch, came to a close late Friday afternoon, Judge Turano rendered his decision, for the plaintiff to recover in the sum of $50 in the injuries to the child and $75.75 in damages to the Lockwood automobile. Representing the plaintiff was Attorney John Ferguson Jr., while Attornies William A. Gunning of Providence and A. T. L. Ledwidge represented the respondent who took an appeal.

The suit grew out of an automobile collision July 25th and was brought for $500 in the first case and for $200 in the second.

The John A. Taylor farmhouse located on the elevation east of the old Weekapaug road, overlooking the Atlantic ocean and Weekapaug pond was totally destroyed by fire which broke out at about 9 o'clock Thursday night. The fire is believed to have been purposely set or started from a match or cigarette dropped by someone who had frequented the place during the evening. The old house had stood unoccupied for a period of 18 years and was rapidly going to ruin.

The original section of the old farm house was built over 200 years ago by a man named Dodge, who came over to the mainland from Block Island. A little less than 100 years ago the place was rebuilt by Oliver Wells, who built a small wing on the original old farm house owned by Dodge, and this section remained with the original shingles on its sides.

CAMPBELL'S MILLS

Benjamin Cole, residing near Orleco is an expert when it comes to serving a real clambake. Mr. Cole recently entertained 35 relatives and friends representing New Haven, New Bedford, Mass., Norwich, Plainfield, Sterling, Voluntown and this place, when he served a most appetizing bake.

Mrs. Jessie Burdick who has been spending three weeks at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Wilcox has returned to her home at Yantic.

The Wylie school opened last Tuesday with Miss Margaret E. Tanner teacher and with an enrollment of 35 pupils.

Mr. and Mrs. George Tanner recently entertained Mr. and Mrs. Harry Holmes and children of Willimantic.

Mr. and Mrs. Rosebers of New York are visiting at the home of Joel Williams.

Savel Nikunen has gone to New York where he has entered Brooklyn Technical high school and William Lintbers has entered Norwich Business college. Both boys are graduates of the Wylie school this year. Young Lintbers is a talented musician and will continue the study of music while at Norwich. During the four years he attended the Wylie school he was absent only one session.

Mrs. Thelma Robertson has sold her farm to parties from New York.

Many from this place attended the Grange Fair at Pachaug.

GREETINGS FROM E. M. R. C. P.

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Corner Page: A few words to show you all that we are in the land of flowers and sunshine yet. So many of the sisters have favored me with letters and cards that when a week goes by and I haven't any letters that week it spoils.

Social Corner: How many times has it proven so to me. The writers are wonderful, young, new and old. They each have their charm.

Anna Z.: Are you still sick? Have not heard from you in so long.

Aries: Get every paper O. K. Will write later. Wish I could be near to sample some of your goodies.

Eve: Your letter was fine. Know how it is to get caught in the briars by your skirts. Here the northern ladies wear knickers in the "tall sticks" or back country. I know how my Adam can talk while we are out in the woods. Ha! Ha! But how about when you go fishing? That's the time for patience, isn't it? I know I am not a good angler. But I love our motorboat on the St. Johns.

Polly Peppermint: How are you? No doubt you've been busy a whole week at your trade. Wish you lots of luck for the year. Write soon.

Must close by sending best wishes to all the sisters of the Corner. Also inclosing letter for that "Yankee in Crackerland." E. M. R. C. P.

SOCIABILITY ITSELF

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I was so pleased to meet you all at the meeting at the Buckingham. What a lovely time we did have, and so much good things to eat. I think I enjoyed it the best of any I ever attended for it was surely sociability itself. Shall hope to meet you all again at our next meeting Oct. 7 and as many more as can come. Best wishes for the success of the Social Corner.

INK.

SEPTEMBER BIRTHDAYS

Social Corner Sisters: As this is a real hot day will cut the housework short and write a few lines to let you know I am still in the land of the living. Haven't been very much all summer so haven't anything interesting to write about in the line of a story.

Some one tells me of so many birthdays among the risters this lovely month of September. Some ask their neighbors in and have a grand feast as well as good fun. Hope I will be able to attend one of the meetings before cold weather. I wonder if Naomi ever attends now. On account of the trolley being taken off her line it may be it isn't so handy to go out.

So sorry Crimson Rambler is troubled with rheumatism. Isn't it a blessing we never hear of rheumatism in our tongue though? How terrible that would be!

I can sit by my kitchen window and smell the lovely ripe grapes on my vine. Hope the frost waits a while so I can eat them first. Hope with cooler days the sick ones will feel better and the shut ins won't feel the heat so much.

Best wishes to all.

DEARIE.

MEETING A PROBLEM

Dear Social Corner Sisters: There is a serious problem every mother seems to meet—the lack of harmony between the father and mother in regard to correcting the children. It is a big problem with me and I am afraid I have not met the situation fairly. I suppose I should put myself in the background more and instead of being so intolerant of father's methods with the children try and co-operate with him to enforce obedience. My husband and I are of entirely different dispositions—he will do anything for the sake of peace, while I am very aggressive and of course this is not a good thing for the children. This difference in our ideas is causing us to drift apart and keeps us from having heart to heart talks. But I am going to try, although it will be hard to look just for the good points in his methods and be more tolerant, and in this way we will undoubtedly be able to work together for the good of the children. I realize this is necessary for an atmosphere of harmony in the home and the only way to expect respect from our children. This family game is a serious one and I sure want to play it like a good sport.

I wish some of the sisters who make mint jelly would send in their recipe for it. I have looked high and low but cannot find one.

Yours for the Corner.

NOANK

Schooner Sarah Weems was launched from the ways at the local ship yard Wednesday, after being recaulked and painted.

Many changes have been noted in the Fishing Town of Noank. New houses have been built, old houses have been modernized and sold for summer homes. Another change that has interested the old fishermen and older residents of the village is the old lighthouse, built in 1868, situated at Lighthouse Point. This was a guide to many of the fishermen until two years ago when it was sold by the government to a New York man. It is constructed of natural stone which had kept its color. It has now been painted brown.

The Silver Links met this week at the home of Mrs. Duncan McDonald in Chesebro court. A work hour was held later in the day. Refreshments were served by the committee.

The Camp Fire Girls of the village had a hike to Hadly Woods recently. Miss Adlene Bentley was in charge and about twenty took the hike. A hot dog roast was enjoyed. This is the first hike of the season. One is planned for every week.

Orrin Hodgson of Boston has spent a few days with his family here.

Elmer Rathbun of Point Judith was in Noank this week.

Salvatore Curacusa, a former resident of the village, who has made his home in New London has moved back to Noank to the Caracusa block on Pearl street.

The road along Riverside is being put in shape by the town men.

The Ladies' auxiliary of the Noank Fire company held a meeting at their rooms. The roll call showed twenty members present. It was voted to have a day's outing next week at Mrs. Horron's, at Groton Long Point.

George Moore, of Essex was in Noank Wednesday.

Carl Ashcraft spent a day in Saybrook recently.

Mrs. Lewis Main is spending a few days in New Haven.

Mrs. Dora Main has received news of the death of her father-in-law, Thomas F. Main, 90, of North Stonington. He leaves four grandchildren, Mrs. Ida Sheffield of Saybrook Point, Mrs. Gertrude Tourgee, Lewis and Edgar Main of the village, also two great-grandchildren.

The boat Alice, Captain Chris Christinen, came into port with 21 barrels of mackerel this week and shipped them to New York.

William Chappell has been at Block Island.

Alfred Crowell is employed by the West View Boat company.

Captain Everett Davis is having his boats hauled out for the winter, at the West View yard.

Mrs. Lizzie Potter is spending a week in Waterford.

Charles T. Potter of Norwich has been visiting at his cottage on Riverview avenue.

Miss Charlotte Main has gone to Boston, where she is attending Boston university.

Mrs. James Thompson and daughter Jessie, have left for Jacksonville, Fla. for a month's visit.

CHESTNUT HILL

Mr. and Mrs. J. Rohan of South Manchester spent a day or two last week with their aunt, Miss Lucie Doubleday.

M. F. Davoll, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Davoll and family and Miss Abbie Goodrich visited Mr. and Mrs. James Cochrane in Webster, Mass., Sunday.

Mrs. George Robinson returned to her home in New Haven last week after a month spent with her daughter, Mrs. E. W. Stiles.

Mrs. Ella B. Peckham of Hartford is the guest this week of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Peckham.

Mrs. W. Phillips her daughter, Miss Alice Phillips and sons, Chester and Newton, of Glastonbury, visited the family of Mrs. Phillips' brother, G. B. Dinnon several days last week.

William Diele and family also their Brownfield and mother of New York City were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. Oehlers recently.

Mrs. George Robinson, Mrs. William Robinson and Walter Robinson of New Haven were recent callers on Mrs A. S. Peckham.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jones and Miss Dorothy Jones of Providence spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Stiles.

G. T. Chappell and family were visitors in Salem Sunday afternoon.

Edmund P. Johnson of Norwich spent a few days last week with his sister in this place.

No jeweler has ever been able to improve on the setting of the sun.

A. H. Snively, a farmer of Keedysville, Md., found a pigeon sitting on two eggs in his coop. He noticed that one of the eggs was unusually large, but thought no more about it until he went to the coop again to find three squabs. The large egg was evidently a double one from which two well-developed pigeons were hatched. The three birds are alive.

Fall Showing of the Lovely

COATS and FROCKS

Wraps and Coats still cling to the slender silhouette, with rippling sides. Front and back flares are very graceful. Some Coats are almost entirely circular. There is clever sleeve treatment which is decidedly new. There are new methods of applying the touches of ornamentation, which distinguish them as the smartest wraps of many seasons. The new Sleeve Frocks, too, are slenderizing in effect emphasizing in the skirt the inserted godets and straight flares. The new fabrics in their rich tones, too, are lovely, rich satin finish effects. Crepe Back Satins and Velvets are general favorites.

BROMO QUININE

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

The chief interest in Norwich fifty years ago this week was the annual three days fair of the New London County Agricultural society. The fair had the largest attendance in its history, up to that time, the Bulletin giving 4,000 as the attendance for the second day. The Norwich Horse Railroad was sold at auction to George P. Brastow of Somerville, Mass. the purchase price being $10,500. The same week Lorenzo Blackstone was elected president of the Chelsea Savings Bank at the bank's annual meeting. Interesting events taken from the files of The Bulletin of September, 1875, are as follows:

Monday, Sept. 13, 1875—A very enjoyable picnic and reunion of the Sunday school of Park church was held Saturday afternoon on the grounds owned by Daniel Ripley on Sachem street. The place is admirably adapted for such a purpose and recalled to not a few participating in this festival memories of Sabbath school gatherings held there in the days of the Sachem street Congregational church. William C. Gilman and kindred spirits were the leaders in every good work. The grounds were tastefully decorated with flags, an extemporized tent adding to the novelties of the occasion. With games balloon ascensions and social intercourse the hours passed pleasantly away. From a large table refreshments were provided for all scholars and teachers and members of the congregation had a very pleasant time.

The Norwich Horse Railroad was sold Saturday. There were only a few bidders. It was purchased for $10,500 by Geo. O. Brastow of Somerville, Mass., who was quite a large stockholder. Possession will at once be given to him. Probably some change will be made and the road be properly equipped. After the sale a meeting of the directors of the road was held and the sale was ratified.

The Chaplin Paper Company has been foreclosed on first and second mortgages, which more than cover the value of the property. It is again reported that Fuller has committed suicide, this time in Canada.

Tuesday, Sept. 14, 1875—County Fair. The fair opens today with a favorable prospect. The entries are very large and with pleasant weather will undoubtedly be a success. Prof. Allen arrived yesterday and is completing his arrangements for the ascension tomorrow.

There is a pond near Watch Hill which is popularly supposed to have no bottom. It is said that no sounding line ever was long enough to measure its depth, and there is tradition that a man and a horse and wagon were lost in it one night and no traces of them were ever seen afterwards.

Hislop, Porteous and Mitchell have enlarged their store by taking the second floor of the building on the Water street front, and building a very easy and convenient connecting staircase from their main salesroom. This enlargement not only gives them more room for their new wholesale department, but a very elegant and commodious salesroom for their domestics and woolen departments.

Wednesday, Sept. 15, 1875—The county fair began yesterday, but as usual the first day was devoted to making preliminary arrangements for today and tomorrow. Very little in the way of entertainment is expected on the opening day and the grounds and buildings are given over mainly to exhibitors. These were on hand in force both in the exhibition hall and in the stalls, and the indications pointed to a large display today. The department of poultry promises to be well filled in all its branches; also that of cattle. Owing mainly to the early period of the fall at which the fair is held this year the number of entries of fruit is not large, but this is to some extent compensated for by the presence of colossal pumpkins, beets and other produce of the vegetable gardens and cornfields. The introduction of steam power has made the display of operative machinery possible and several interesting machines are established in working order on the south side of the building.

The annual meeting of the New London County Baptist Association will be held with the church in Lebanon today. Carriages will be in waiting at the depot for those who go by rail.

On the road to the fair grounds yesterday, a small boy named Bryan Murphy, whose parents live on Thames street, was knocked down and run over by a farmer's team. He was considerably bruised but not much injured.

Thursday, Sept. 16, 1875—The second day of the County Fair opened yesterday with the largest attendance ever recorded in the archives of the institution. The difficulty of judging of the number present by the eye was not small as it was impossible to view the entire ground at once, and the estimates made varied generally from 3,000 to 5,000. Probably, however, 4,000 people were present on the grounds during the day.

This was a large crowd, but fortunately it was an extremely well disposed one. There was no disorder and little drunkenness. Lewis' Band was stationed in the bandstand in the afternoon and blew manfully almost without intermission, giving some very pleasing and comfortable music. The balloon was surrounded by a large crowd all day. Precisely at three o'clock Prof. Allen, the aeronsut and his daughter, Miss Lizzie Allen, took their places in the car and the lines were cut. Thirteen minutes after it left the ground it began to descend and soon after reached the earth in Preston, a mile and a quarter from Greeneville.

While Dr. F. A. Tillinghast and wife of Taftville were riding out of the fairgrounds yesterday afternoon, there was a rush of teams coming out in a heedless manner and someone ran into the doctor's team, throwing out his wife between the carriage wheels, bruising her considerably, both wheels running over her.

Friday, Sept. 17, 1875—A Pleasant Event.—At Taftville last evening, at the residence of the bride's parents the Rev. E. P. Stanton married Daniel Preston, an engineer on the Norwich and Worcester road to Miss Fanny Blackman. After the ceremony was performed the bride and groom received the congratulations of their friends and then drove to their new home on Laurel Hill.

Maggie Mitchell appears in Breed Hall next Wednesday evening in the "Pearl of Savoy." She is accompanied by a good company and the play will be put upon the stage with the necessary accessories.

At the annual meeting of the corporators of the Chelsea Savings Bank the following additional members were elected to the board of trustees: David A. Wells, Edward Harland, Frederick A. Camp, Henry W. Kingsley, Charles M. Coit, Charles W. Gale, Elisha H. Palmer, James Allyn, Chester S. Prentice, Joseph Hutchins, John M. Thayer, Henry H. Gallup, William H. Cardwell, William Loring, Sanford S. Stoddard. The officers elected for the ensuing year are:

President, Lorenzo Blackstone; Vice Presidents, Henry Bill, Learned Hebard, John T. Wait; directors, S. T. Holbrook, John P. Barstow, James A. Hovey, O. J. Lamb, John F. Slater, John W. Stedman, Oliver F. Avery, Edward Harland, Charles M. Coit.

Saturday, Sept. 18, 1875 — J. de T. Blackstone of this city and Miss Lidie Whittaker of New York, were married at the church of the Transfiguration, Thursday by the rector, Rev. Dr. Houghton. A reception was given subsequently at the residence of T. P. Earle, the bride's uncle.

The second excursion of the Odonks Rifle club was made to Allyn's Point yesterday, about a hundred active and honorary members being present. While the chowder was cooking a number of the party took a ride down the river on the propeller Burnside.

Mrs. Betsey Rouse of South Killingly, a lady ninety years old, tried to strike a match and fell down, injuring her hip, so that she is now entirely helpless.

A horse with one of Cardwell and Watts wagons in tow, ran away on Union street, last evening, but did no damage, except frightening several elderly ladies.

HANOVER

All were inspired by the fine sermon preached by Edwin Hill of Norwich in the Hanover Congregational Church Sunday morning.

On account of the small number out Sunday evening, the Christian Endeavor service was omitted.

A meeting of the Ladies Guild was held in the Parish House Tuesday night to plan for a supper to be given Saturday night.

Rev. D. C. Stone's brother and sister-in-law from Bethlehem, Conn., are visiting at the parsonage.

Miss Elsie Freeman spent the week end with her grandmother, Mrs. Oscar Allen.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Broderick, of Lawrence, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Babbitt of Fairhaven, Mass., and Mrs. Mame Buteau of Fall River, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Banford.

Reno's First Church Sold

RENO, Nev., Sept. 18—(AP)—When the old Reno Methodist church was closed recently, after it had been sold, the last person to walk down its steps was Mrs. Carrie Harris. As a young girl, 55 years ago, when the church was opened, she was one of the worshippers at the first service. The congregation has erected a larger church to replace the abandoned one, which was the first church erected in Reno.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Year of Jubilee

Mr. C. J. Fekel of Brooklyn, New York, will lecture on the above subject at G. A. R. hall Sunday at 3 p. m. The lecture is under the auspices of The International Bible Students Association. The seats are free and there is no collection.

This lecture will set forth God's plan by which His chosen people were to be kept from poverty. In principle it was somewhat like our present bankruptcy laws, which permit a man who has failed in business to make a fresh start.

But with the Hebrews the arrangement was an involuntary one, as far as the people were concerned, and applied to all classes, rich and poor. From the time they entered the land of Canaan they were required to keep a series of what might be termed land sabbaths.

Once every seven years was a rest year, in which the land was allowed to lie fallow. In this year no work was done. The rest was to be so complete that no reaping was to be made of crops, which were allowed to grow of themselves. Not even the grapes were to be picked.

This led up to a still greater sabbath or rest for the land. After seven times seven years had passed, and had been duly observed, the fiftieth year was not only a rest year for the land, but in that year all slaves were to go free, all debts were to be cancelled, and, most important of all, every family in the land was to return to its ancestral inheritance.

It is the opinion of Bible students that altogether there were to be seventy jubilees of fifty years each in the pictorial arrangement, and that at their end would come the Grand Jubilee, the day when all the slaves of sin and death would go free, when humanity's debt to justice would be paid, and there would begin the recovery of all that was lost in Eden.

Moreover, the best part of it is that these seventy jubilees are ending in the fall of this very year, 1925; and therefore wonderful things for humanity, and especially for the Jews, are just at hand. These subjects will be fully discussed at the lecture.

Putnam Trade School

Preparation for the annual evening school work at the State Trade School at Putnam is being planned with a view to providing supplementary training for men employed in the various industries. Thus a cotton weaver may wish to take up loom fixing or a cotton spinner may be desirous of taking up yarn calculations. Operators of machines in the industries have an opportunity in the machine shop to take up specialized training on questions definitely related to their work. The complete outline of subjects offered in the various classes is as follows:

General Cotton Manufacturing—Plain weaving, dobby and box loom weaving, loom fixing, cloth analysis and design, yarn calculations, carding and spinning, doubling and drafting, cost finding.

Drafting—Mechanical and architectural, shop math, building estimating, blue print reading.

Machine shop practice—Definite instruction in the operating of machine units, such as milling machine, grinder, lathes, planer, shaper, tool making and bench work.

Carpentry, shop—Training will be given in the use of steel square and its application to problems in carpentry work. Cabinet making, mill work.

Electrical work—Elementary and advanced, principles of D. C., principles of A. C., battery work, motor and general operation, armature winding.

Home Economics dept.—Dressmaking, millinery, cooking, household management as in previous years.

Men in Putnam and near vicinity have in past years embraced the opportunities which these classes afford and to many the instruction received has proved of definite benefit in the way of advancement in the industry in which they are working.

Those interested in these courses should enroll as early as possible so that class may be definitely organized and school work satisfactorily begun with as little delay and confusion as possible. Classes in this work will open on October 5th at 7:30 p. m.

Broadway Theater

Imagine Bebe Daniels as the cutie who cuts your cuticle!

She's just that in her latest Paramount starring picture, The Manicure Girl, which opens Sunday at the Broadway theater.

The Manicure Girl, directed by Frank Tuttle, who made Miss Bluebeard and A Kiss in the Dark, is an original screen story, adapted by Townsend Martin. Bebe, as Maria Maretti, is a manicurist in an exclusive New York hotel. Her daily duties bring her in touch with "the four hundred," one of whom, a wealthy married business man, played by Hale Hamilton, becomes interested in her.

Edmund Burns, who was Gloria Swanson's leading man in The Humming Bird, plays opposite Bebe in this one. As Tony Lucas, Burns builds up quite a business of manufacturing and installing radio receiving sets. Bebe—as all women do—loves beautiful things, and before Burns, her fiance in the picture, "strikes it right" he is unable to keep pace with her. A falling out is the result, during which time Bebe sees the wealthy James Morgan (Hamilton) quite a bit—until she learns he is married.

A call from Morgan's wife for a manicurist brings Bebe to her home. Some great scenes follow when each learns the identity of the other. The two women hold a council of war and by a clever plan straighten things out for all concerned.

Other big names in the cast of the picture are Dorothy Cumming, Charlotte Walker, playing Mrs. Morgan; Ann Brody, Marie Shotwell and Mary Foy.

Additional attractions will be an augmented orchester giving this feature an exceptional musical interpretation and a comedy and new Kinograms.

Man likes to hug a delusion, especially if it comes in the form of a pretty woman.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

One Way Street, one of the year's sensations in the literary field, is coming in screen form Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday to the Breed theater, with Ben Lyon and Anna Q. Nilsson in the featured roles. The picture was produced by First National from the novel by Beale Davis—a novel which, within a month after its publication, had bounded up into the best-seller class.

If it is true that "the story's the thing," then One Way Street, should be the success of the year, for it boasts of a plot that is unusually strong and unique. The author has fashioned a tale that, while gripping in its suspense and universal in its theme, yet was particularly adaptable for screening.

Ben Lyon, whose rise toward stardom was one of the outstanding features of the year in the cinema world, in this drama attains the highest level of his climb as the woman's amatory victim.

Anna Q. Nilsson, noted for the variety of her portrayals in the past, achieves new honors in her impersonation of the difficult role of the woman.

John Francis Dillon, who made Flaming Youth, Lilies of the Field, and other big successes of the past, directed One Way Street.

The supporting cast includes such notables as Marjorie Daw, Lumsden Hare, Thomas Holding, Dorothy Cumming and Mona Kingsley.

Palace Theatre

Five good Paramount acts and Bebe Daniels in her latest Paramount feature, Wild Wild Susan, the Palace Symphony orchestra of eleven playing the 2nd Regiment Conn march as they did for the governor at the Wauregan last Thursday is the program at the Palace today.

Starting Sunday this popular playhouse will offer for the first time in Connecticut a picture acclaimed as a monumental screen achievement and hailed as the greatest historical western since "The Covered Wagon," "The Pony Express," James Cruze's titanic frontier production.

In this picturization of the story by Henry James Forman and Walter Woods, Cruze has opened another chapter in the history of America. It is a chapter filled with the glorious romance, the authentic incidents, the thrilling episodes, and above all the wonderful humor of the uncivilized west that has gone, molded together into a great pictorial epic of our national life, as only Cruze can do it.

Under the magic hand of this directorial genius, the days of 1850 spring to life. Once again the phantom riders of the Pony Express thunder out of St. Joseph, Missouri, and Sacramento, California, carrying the fast mail. Once again sinister political forces plot to gain control of California.

This wonderful production at the Palace, Norwich, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 20, 21, 22, 23.

Brooklyn Fair

The 76th annual exhibition of the Windham County Agricultural Society—the far-famed Brooklyn fair—will be held at Brooklyn, Conn., Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 22, 23, 24.

This will be good news to the thousands that flock to this sterling agricultural show each fall. Tuesday will be entry day, Wednesday and Thursday the big days of the fair.

The Brooklyn fair has deserved its ever increasing patronage, and this year will be more deserving than ever. Retaining all of the old and fixed features that a truly agricultural show must possess to be other than a carnival, the Brooklyn fair has earned the right to talk of its being staged by the oldest agricultural society of the United States.

It is primarily a show for the exhibit of the products of the farm, the dairy and the orchard. It brings together fine herds of cattle. Its ladies' department is always of alluring interest. There is a poultry show, exhibits of farm machinery, horse racing, band concerts and a score of other things to interest those who are pleasure bent. This year an added special feature will be a dog show arranged by the newly organized Windham County Kennel club.

Though it stresses its exhibits as in the interest of agriculture and dairying, the Brooklyn fair has kept pace with the times and furnishes modern amusements and diversions in the making of a complete show. It has its midway, its barkers, its band concerts and scores of other things to hold the interest of young and old. First and last it is a snappy little fair—and the gathering of thousands there makes wonderful Old Home days. Wednesday and Thursday of next week are the big days of the fair. They are dates worth remembering.

Chevrolet introduces a new one-ton truck, built according to the fundamental policy of this company to provide "Quality at Low Cost".

It has a fine appearance and is specially designed and constructed for commercial service. Its deep 6-inch channel steel frame, hung low to the ground on long semi-elliptic springs, allows the platforms to be placed at the right height for easy loading and unloading.

The powerful Chevrolet motor is famous for its ability to stand up under heavy service. It has well balanced crankshaft thoroughly lubricated, standard 3-speed transmission, fully enclosed dry-plate disc clutch, extra heavy rear axle with large spiral bevel driving gears and rigid one-piece pressed steel housing, heavy truck-type wheels and large tires, full running boards and fenders, Remy generator, starter and distributor ignition, and other quality features.

This truck is not only well adapted to city work but also for use in hilly country and over difficult roads.

For lighter loads there is a Chevrolet commercial ½ ton chassis possessing the same quality features, price $425 f. o. b. Flint, Michigan.

WILY NEW LONDON TAXICAB MEN PLAY TRICK ON POLITICAL LEADERS

NEW LONDON, Sept. 18—Duplicity of taxi cab operators in this city during the recent election is being revealed and the operators of the cars may yet be called on to answer. Machines hired to take voters to the polls for certain candidates did not perform the duty for which they were hired, but instead are alleged to have brought up voters who cast ballots against the candidates who hired the taximen. The deception will cost the faithless operators some patronage in the future, if it does not have a more serious result.

The Jewish feast of Rosh Hashanah began this evening at sundown and will continue through Saturday till the sun sets. This evening at 5 o'clock the Hebrews gathered at their synagogues on Bilhman and Shapley street and there participated in prayers. This ceremony was followed by feasting. The same course will be followed tomorrow. All the stores conducted by Jews were closed at 5 o'clock today and will remain with doors locked throughout Saturday.

The Odd Fellows lodges of this city are endeavoring to raise a sum sufficient to erect an infirmary at the home of the order in Groton. The plan is for the members to buy the bricks which it is estimated will be necessary for the construction of the building at a cost of $1 a brick. The members are subscribing generally for one or more bricks and in this way the funds needed are expected to be secured.

In the police court this morning John Harrington was sent to jail for a stay of thirty days. He pleaded guilty when presented for intoxication, his condition being such that it was for his physical good to place him where he would be cleaned up and be treated. There are three John Harringtons that get into the court, but this one has a shorter court record than the others. James Shea, a New Londoner, was fined $5 for intoxication. He had the money to pay and settled.

Mrs. Robert Pease and infant daughter, of 214 Huntington street, William Cross 39 Lincoln avenue, Westerly; John Kern, United States Coast Guard service; destroyer Ericson; Mrs. Clifford Dean, and infant son, Sound View; Frank Johnson, Oakdale; Master Edward Desaingue, Brooklyn, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were dismissed today.

George S. Palmer, today sold two dwellings and two small parcels of land on Pequot avenue to Neva F. Palmer. The price paid was given as $50,000.

The funeral of John F. Higgins of 41 Sherman street, whose death occurred several days ago at the home of his mother, Mrs. Mary Higgins Washington, D. C., was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church and was attended by many mourners. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons. The bearers were Donald Bain, John Tansey, Benjamin Hyde, James Eckford, Herman Appledorn and Benjamin Boylan, members of Pequot Hose company of which organization Mr. Higgins was a member. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Edwin Hopkins, 38, of 36 Ashcraft road, died this morning at Lawrence hospital where he had been under treatment but a short time. He is survived by his wife. Mr. Hopkins had been employed about three years as clerk at the New London line pier in this city.

An automobile owned and driven by Santo Ferro, 10 Chelsea street and a machine owned and operated by Reuben Lubchansky, 217 Main street, were in collision this afternoon at the corner of Main street and Stoney Hill. Both cars were damaged.

The hearing scheduled to take place at the post office building, New Haven next Tuesday for Willie Mar, Lee Dick, Lee Haland, Lee Jung, charged with violation of the narcotic act, has been indefinitely postponed. Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray and Patrolman Edward Daniels, who with narcotic agents participated in the raid which resulted in a seizure of opium at May's residence, were notified by a federal officials at New Haven this afternoon of the postponement of the hearing. It is not known when the hearing will take place, but it is believed that the date will be fixed for some time next month.

Philip J. Rosen, 107 Square street, an insurance agent, parked his Velie brougham in front of his residence late last night. When he rose about 6.30 o'clock this morning, Rosen discovered that his machine was missing. He naturally believed that the car had been stolen and reported it as such to the police. While the police were making a search for the automobile, C. E. Beach, proprietor of the Velie sales station, Howard street, communicated with the police stating that he went to where the automobile had been parked late last night and took re-possession of the car, because Rosen had failed to make the payments for the purchase of the machine according to agreement.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today caused the operator's license of William W. Brooks, 30 Steward street to be returned to the owner. The license was suspended two weeks ago following Brooks' automobile being in collision with another car.

Mrs. Mary Bates, 18 Mahan street, communicated with the police shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon stating that the little son of Mrs. Ruth Heikel, wife of John Heikel of Norwood avenue, was at the Bates residence, and had informed Mrs. Bates that his mother was lying on the floor of the kitchen of the Heikel home and that he believed his mother was dead. Sergeant John Cavanaugh and Patrolman William Riordan went to the Heikel home and repeated alarms at the door were not answered. After waiting about 15 minutes the door was opened and Mrs. Heikel appeared before the officers. When the officers made known their mission to the house, Mrs. Heikel ridiculed the story relative to her having been observed lying on the floor and declared that there was nothing the matter with her, nor had there been. She also declared that her son had not made the statement accredited to him at the Bates home. Mrs. Bates and Mrs. Heikel are sisters.

Peter J. Espolito, 668 Main street, will be in the police court tomorrow morning charged with reckless driving. He was ordered into court this forenoon by Traffic Officer Frank Linehan, following the machine Espolito was operating being in collision with another car and smashing two plate glass windows. The car that Espolito was operating was trailing a machine owned and driven by Frederick Cobb, Goshen Point, Waterford on State st. As the two cars reached a point corner of Main street and the drivers received a signal from Officer Linehan. Espolito is rounding the corner of Main street, attempted to pass the machine operated by Cobb. The front wheels of Espolito's car struck the bumper of Cobb's machine. The collision caused Espolito's car to climb upon the sidewalk and before Espolito could bring his car to a stop it crashed against the supports of the windows of the Economy store, caused the marble supports to be damaged and the two windows to be cracked.

The police are to make a determined effort to round up the gang of bums, who are employed from time to time at Fishers Island, but who spend the greater part of their time in New London drinking, and loitering about the pier of the Fishers Island Navigation company. This forenoon Courtland Brown, special agent in the employ of the Central Vermont railroad, encountered a trio of the bums on railroad property. When he ordered them off, he was set upon by the laborers. Brown fought off the three, but while he was doing so Traffic Officer William Corcoran, on duty at the corner of State and Bank street, was informed of the fight and hastening to the union station, one of the gang, Fred Clark was taken into custody, but the other two fighters made their escape when they spied Corcoran approaching. Clark was in the police court this morning charged with intoxication and trespassing upon railroad property. His case was continued to tomorrow morning and he was held for trial in bail of $200. Later the two bums who escaped, William Reidy and Patrick Welsh were arrested and they also will be given a hearing Saturday.

New London is acquiring a reputation for elaborate electric signs at business places. State street reminds one of the largest cities at night, and Bank street is not ar behind in the display. Some of the ornate signs blaze with electricity like the noonday sun.

No report has been received here as to the condition, mentally, of Charlie Moore, diminutive hustler who was conspicuous about the streets for a long time as a bootblack and later as a polisher of the metal on automobiles. He was taken into custody as a suspicious person some weeks ago when he was sent to the Norwich State hospital for the insane, that his mentality might be considered. At the conclusion of the period of adjournment of his case the information came that it was desired to retain him at the hospital for three weeks or so more and there he has been.

Herbert Fern, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Fern, of Ocean Beach, and Norwich, has gone to New York, where he is pursuing studies at New York University.

Edward Pierce, Providence real estate dealer and a summer resident at Eastern Point, will be in the police court tomorrow morning charged with evasion of responsibility. Pierce is alleged to have operated his automobile through Main street Wednesday evening and at a fast rate of speed, the car striking and damaging a motorcycle owned by Everett Sylvia, a sailor attached to the United States Coast Guard, state pier and almost felling Patrolman Howard Sloan, who was off duty. Officer Sloan lodged complaint against Pierce because the latter did not stop to determine the extent of the damage he had caused. This evening Pierce appeared at the police station in response to a summons and was ordered to present himself in court. Pierce declares that he was ignorant of his car having struck the motorcycle, neither does he recall his car having a close call from hitting a pedestrian.

Raymond C. White, of Willetts, avenue, and Miss Lydia Page, of Crystal avenue, were married yesterday afternoon, by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, at the parsonage of the First Church of Christ. Mr. White is a carpenter; his bride was until recently employed by the Bingham Paper Box Manufacturing company.

The condition of Mrs. Malcolm Mollan, of Boston, who has been spending the summer at Oswegatchie, is reported as being considerably improved at Home Memorial hospital, where she underwent an operation this week.

Miss Genevieve Baldwin has returned to her home in Brooklyn, N. Y. having visited her aunt, Mrs. Arthur L. Smith, 38 School street.

George Lubow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Lubow, 32 Montauk avenue, will enter the freshman class at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, and will begin his studies next Monday.

Mischievous youths were evidently operating last night, for this forenoon Mrs. Gilooly, 4 Union court, complained to the police that during last night some one entered her premises and mutilated a clothesline so that it was practically worthless.

Isaac Nurminen, of Main street, Niantic, was ordered to appear in the police court tomorrow morning charged by Traffic Officer Frank Philopena, with blocking traffic tonight. Nurminen was driving his machine on Bank street, near the corner of State street where he parked it in such a manner as to tie-up traffic for several minutes. Officer Philopena observed Nurminen's act and immediately served notice on him to present himself in court.

Patrolman Carlos Selesnitsky has been granted two days' leave from duty on account of the observance of the Jewish holiday, Rosh Hashanah, which started tonight. Officer Selesnitsky left for New York this afternoon where he will spend the holidays with his mother.

MICHAEL SALOMON DIES— FORMER NORWICH RESIDENT

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 18—Michael Salomon, 66, died early this morning at his home, 73 Montauk avenue, death resulting from a malignant condition of the throat, with which disease Mr. Salomon had been afflicted for several months. He is survived by his widow, a son, Harry Salomon, formerly of Norwich, now of this city, and a daughter, Mrs. Harry Feltcorn, also of this city. He was a member of New London lodge of Elks and Herweigh lodge, Sons of Herman. Mr. Salomon was a tailor and worked at his trade for many years, giving up work several weeks ago when his health became impaired. Mr. Salomon had taken extensive treatment for his affliction both in this city and New York, but since about three weeks ago his recovery was despaired of.

CITY'S 62ND RESTAURANT AND LUNCH ROOM OPENED

NEW LONDON, Sept. 18—With the opening of the Far East restaurant, State street, this week, New London is supplied with its 62nd restaurant and lunch room, a number that it would appear sufficient to take care of the population of a city twice the size of New London. Yet they all appear to be making money.

DANIEL M. CRONIN'S SIGHT SHOWS LITTLE IMPROVEMENT

(Special to the Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 18—The condition of Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin, who has been under the care of physicians and eye-specialists for several months at his father's summer home in Neptune park, does not improve. It is probable that within a short time Mr. Cronin will go to New York and obtain further treatment hoping for the restoration of his sight, which is greatly impaired.

Hogs firm; shipping demand urgent.

MARKET WAS ACTIVE

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—(AP)—Revival of activity and strength in the railroad shares the general average of which touched the highest level since the war, and the buoyancy of the high priced public utilities, featured the upward movement in today's stock market. Call money opened at 3 1-2 per cent., the lowest renewal rate since last May, and then moved upward to 4, 4 1-2 and 5 as banks began to call loans, but this appeared to have little effect on the rally, which reached its peak in Baldwin and several of the other popular industrials and rails in the last hour.

The closing time was advanced half an hour to 3.30 p. m. out of respect for the memory of Seymour Cromwell, former president of the exchange, whose funeral was held this afternoon. Trading ran well above one and one half million shares for the abbreviated session.

Except for the publication of more favorable trade reports there was little in the day's news to influence the market movement, which appeared to be under the domination of professional speculators for the advance. The weekly mercantile reviews reported further improvement in business.

Bradstreet's states that "improvement is still the keyword in trade and industry," adding that "in quite a few western centers reports are that buying ahead, while conservative, is a shade better than formally, and some large eastern and Middle Atlantic states note that distribution is larger and buying better than a year ago." Dun's reports that "dispatches from widely separated sections of the country and from diversified trades are, in the main distinctly favorable, either disclosing a further increase of activity or giving promise of future gains."

The renewed demand for the rails was in anticipation that the August earnings statement, which will begin making their appearance next week, will show substantial increases in earnings as a result of the record breaking freight traffic last month. Atlantic Coast Line jumped over four points to a record top at 201 and then sagged below 200 on profit taking, while net gains of a point or more were recorded by Great Northern preferred, New York Central, Frisco Common, Seaboard Air Line, Wabash Common, Western Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Texas & Pacific and a few others.

Railroad equipment issues moved in opposite directions. Baldwin was run up four points to 124 and American Locomotive, General American Tank Car, General Electric, Westinghouse Air Brake and Lima Locomotive closed one to 3 1-3 points higher. Pullman broke over eight points to 165 and then rallied to 168, the selling being inspired by an official denial of rumors that a capital readjustment was impending. New York Air Brake broke six points to a new low record for the year at 39 on rumors questioning the safety of the dividend. General Railway Signal and Railway Steel Spring each fell back about two points.

Detroit Edison was the outstanding features of the public utility group, scoring an extreme gain of over 13 points at 158 1-2, a record top, and then slipping back to 147 3-4 on realizing. Brooklyn Edison, Madsa, Montana Power, Market Street Railway preferred and Prior preferred, Western Union, and West Penn company, all closed 3 to 4 points higher.

A sudden outburst of buying in International Harvester carried that stock up over eight points to 133 1-4, the highest price in five years. Hudson Motors assumed the leadership of the motor group by jumping five points to a new top to 70 3-8. Other outstanding strong spots included Kelsey Wheel U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, Dupont and Frank G. Shattuck, all up 4 to 6 points. Weakness cropped out in Brunswick-Balke Collender, Famous Players and White Rock. Time money an Commercial Paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges moved irregularly lower. Demand sterling eased to $4.84 5-16 but French francs were slightly firmer aroun 4.73 1-2 cents. Italian, Belgian German and Danish currencies showed moderate recessions but Norwegian krone and Spanish pestas were slightly better.

NORWICH TOWN

The weekly religious services at the sheltering Arms, are to be resumed Sunday afternoon, when Rev Samuel H. Howe, D. D., pastor of Park Congregational church, will be the officiating clergyman, assisted by that church choir. The last regular service was held the last Sunday in June.

There is to be a religious service at Scotland Road hall, Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, (daylight saving time), under the auspices of Scotland Road Christian Endeavor society. This is a postponed meeting, announced several weeks ago. Clyde M. Beebe of East Town street, will deliver the address and conduct the meeting.

By special invitation of the Norwich Town Congregational Christian Endeavor society, the Young People's C. E. society of Jewett City Congregational church, will attend the meeting Sunday evening at Norwich Town, when Miss Elizabeth Avery, of the entertaining society will be the leader.

Elmer Browning son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Browning of New London Turnpike, who has been passing the summer at his parents' home, is to leave today (Saturday), for Ithaca N. Y., to take up his senior work at Cornell University. Mr. and Mrs. Browning's eldest daughter, Miss Doris Browning N. F. A., 1925, left Thursday, to enter the Women's College at Brown University, Providence.

A fine Collie, the second to lose its life as the result of being struck by an automobile, on West Town street, within only one day's difference in time, was dispatched by Frederic H. Wyant, district agent, of the Connecticut Humane society, the early part of this week. The animal received a broken hip, and when the extent of its injuries was made known to Agent Wyant, about eleven o'clock in the evening, he immediately visited the location which was near the former Adams Tavern, and put the dog out of its misery.

Thursday, the opening day of the New London County Fair, Supervisor of Agents Walter H. Phelps, of Hartford, representing the Connecticut Humane society, visited Norwich and in company with District Agent Wyant visited the Fair Grounds and made special investigations in the interests of the society.

MOOSUP AND STERLING MILLS IN PROSPEROUS CONDITION

MOOSUP, Sept. 18—An addition to the Aldrich Brothers cotton mill here which is nearing completion at a cost of about $100,000 is expected to give opportunity for several hundred additional employes. The plant produces silk and mixed cotton goods.

The mills of the United States Finishing company at Sterling, Harold B. Mowry, agent, have increased the working schedules to five full days a week, instead of three which has prevailed much of the past year.

Theatre Party for Scouts

Scout Executive F. A. Benton and Manager E. L. McEvoy of the Palace Theatre are giving a theatre party to the scouts and officials of Norwich Council next Monday night, when The Pony Express will be shown. The boy scouts are requested to attend in uniform and be on Shetucket street at 5.30 o'clock.

Detroit Convention Reports

Reports from the Universalist national convention at Detroit are to be made when the Young Peoples Christian union of the Church of the Good Shepherd meets on Monday evening at the church.

Will Tell Sunday Experiences

Members of class 32 at the Central Baptist Sunday school are to enjoy hearing Mrs. Lucius Brown tell some of her Sunday experiences while abroad at the class session on Sunday.

Traffic Beacon Moved

The easterly traffic beacon on Franklin square has been moved 15 feet westerly which places it between the main line trolley tracks and the switch to Franklin street. It is believed this will be a better place for the beacon than the former location.

NEW ST. JOSEPH'S SCHOOL
Where Cornerstone Is To Be Blessed

CEREMONIES FOR BLESSING OF ST. JOSEPH SCHOOL CORNERSTONE

With favorable weather an attendance of from 3,000 to 4,000 is expected on Sunday afternoon at the blessing of the cornerstone of the new St. Joseph's school on Cliff street for which Rt. Rev. Bishop John J. Nilan is coming here from Hartford.

Rev. I. C. Iciek, pastor of the church, has made the arrangements for an impressive programme for the interesting occasion and is extending a general invitation to the public to attend the dedicatory exercises at the school and the free band concert by Swahn's band in the parish park where refreshments will be served during the concert.

The opening event of the afternoon will be a parade from Pulaski hall, starting at 3 o'clock. Besides the local Polish societies, the third and fourth degree, Knights of Columbus will participate in the parade. The St. Joseph society, Holy Rosary society and the Polish band from Willimantic will attend in a body. The St. Casimir's society with a very large delegation is expected from Jewett City and many will come from New London, New Britain, Meriden and other cities in Connecticut.

It is imperative that all members of the various societies and organizations should be at Pulaski hall on North Main street at 2:30 p. m.

The line of march will be from the hall to Franklin square to Willow street, to Broadway, to Main and Cliff street. On Cliff street the societies will form in line to await the coming of Bishop Nilan who will arrive at 3:30 from Montville. Upon the arrival of Bishop Nilan the parade will escort him to the school where the exercises are planned to begin at 4 o'clock with the blessing of the cornerstone by Bishop Nilan.

The dedicatory sermon by Bishop Nilan will be followed by a sermon in Polish by Rev. Joseph Janowski and a sermon in English by Rev. W. A. Keefe of St. Mary's Memorial church.

The afternoon programme will conclude with a concert in Parish park, until 7:30, by Swahn's band, when refreshments will be served. The following will be the programme rendered by the band:

Polish National Hymn; overture, Golden Dragon, King; Medley of Polish Songs and Dances; Idyle, Mill in the Forest; Nautical Fantasies, Toban; Medley of Southern Songs; Patrol Guard Mount; Star Spangled Banner.

Vespers and sermon at St. Joseph's church at 8 o'clock will conclude the programme.

The handsome new school building which is being erected at a cost of approximately $150,000 has 17 large class rooms, besides a large basement which will be adapted for bowling alleys, society rooms and social purposes. It is a three story brick building, which will be supplied with all the modern school equipment, and it is expected that it will practically be completed in November.

WILL HOLD CELEBRATION OF INDEPENDENCE DAY

Monday night at 7:30 at Union square the Dante's cultural club will celebrate with an appropriate program the 55th anniversary of the Italian Independence Day. The speeches will be both in English and in Italian. Dr. Antonio Magnano, D D. professor in charge of the Italian department of Colgate University, recently returned from Italy, will speak in English on "The Value of Freedom." Rev. Valentino Panizzoli, pastor of the Italian Baptist Mission, will speak in Italian on "The Meaning of the 20th of September." Mayor Milo Water will be on the platform and will bring the greetings of the city.

The 20th of September is for Italy just what the 4th of July is for America. On that glorious day, the Italians were inspired by the same spirit which prevailed in the 13 original colonies of this country in 1776. It was the spirit of freedom and unity.

The well known Baltic band, directed by Prof. Joe. Berghinzo, will march through several streets and at Union Square will play the following musical program:

America, Sempre Fidelis, Sousa; Royal March, Gabotto; Overture, A. Hayes; Selection, Carmen, Bizet; March, Peerless, R. Perry; Selection, Stabat Mater, Rossini; March, Pasadone Day, Vassella; Selection from Faust, Gounod; Italo American Popular songs arranged by Berghinzo; Star Spangled Banner.

B. Romano, president of the Dante Club will preside.

AUTO CRUSHED AGAINST LAUREL HILL ABUTMENT

Late Friday afternoon a G. M. C. truck owned by the Norwich state hospital and driven by John Morley collided with a Reo Speed wagon owned by the American Confectionery Company and operated by Henry L. Cloutier of No. 566 North Main St. The accident happened near the Laurel Hill bridge, on the Laurel Hill side, where the speed wagon was jammed into one of the stone abutments there, sustaining damage, to the extent of about $50, it was reported.

Swat the Fly Now.

Fly-swatting campaigns are usually staged in spring, it being assumed that if you kill one fly in April you automatically destroy her entire progeny, which under favorable conditions should amount to many millions later in the season. In the fall, however, it is equally important to swat the fly, for it is the fly that manages to hibernate through the winter that starts the new crop in the spring. Flies are especially dangerous in carrying the germs which cause diarrheal diseases fatal to so many children, according to Dr. Donald B. Armstrong of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

LEGION POST HEARS REPORTS ON COMPENSATION

At the regular meeting of Robert O Fletcher Post, No. 4, American Legion, held Friday night in the post rooms, Rev. E. C. Dunbar, chairman of the hospital compensation committee, reported that adjusted compensation for the 60 men at the Norwich state hospital has been applied for by members of his committee, entailing considerable work. In his report he stated that it was necessary to apply for papers from guardians and relatives before the compensation could be applied for but that this wrok had now been practically completed.

The relief committee was instructed to take up with proper authorities the question of assistance for the family of a disabled veteran, who with his family has been cared for by the Legion nad other local organizations.

Other busines sbefore the meeting was mostly of routine nature and a number of committees were discharged, thei rwork having been completed.

MARRIED IN WAUREGAN HALF CENTURY AGO

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Thoin, who were married in Waregan, Sept. 19, 1875, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Friday at West Springfield, Mass. They attended mass at the French Catholic church and on Saturday evening there was to be a dinner at their home for 40 relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Thoin have been residents of West Springfield for nearly 20 years. Until a year ago when he retired, Mr. Thoin was owner of the West Springfield Chemical company. Mr. Thoin approaches his 75th birthday and his wife is 73.

JEWETT CITY MAN'S TOURING CAR STOLEN

A Ford touring car, 1925 model, owned by Hugh Davis of Jewett City, was stolen from in front of the Broadway theatre early Friday evening. The number of the missing car is N-6030. The machine is a 1925 model, has a spare tire on the rear and the initials H. R. D. on the door. Mr. Davis reported the theft of the machine to the police and all officers on duty were requested to be on the watch for it. Police in surrounding towns were also requested to keep a lookout for the stolen machine.

NORWICH FIREMEN ON DUTY AT FAIR GROUNDS

The local fire department has its part in caring for the safety of people and property at the New London county fair. On the opening day, Thursday, the department had four firemen on duty about the grounds. Fire extinguishers and small portable hand water pumps were available for instant use in the various departments. Two firemen were on duty Friday and there will also be two firemen on duty at the grounds today (Saturday), the final day of the fair.

Eastern Connecticut Health Report

One case of diphtheria and one case of typhoid fever were the only communicable diseases reported from Norwich during the week ending September 12, according to the weekly morbidity report issued by the state department of health. From eastern Connecticut towns during the week the following cases of communicable diseases were reported:

Diphtheria, Norwich, 1; scarlet fever, none; typhoid fever, Stafford Springs 1; Norwich, 1; measles, none; whooping cough, Groton, 1.

Unclaimed Letters

Unclaimed letters in the Norwich Conn., post office for the week ending September 19, 1925: Mr. Jack Gallgar, Betty Greenstein, Arthur W. Pierce, Miss Phyllis Wagner.

COMMUNITY CHEST IDEA WILL BE CONSIDERED

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce held a meeting Thursday and considered several matters of civic interest for Norwich. It is expected that a general conference will soon be held for the purpose of discussing the question of having a community chest in Norwich. Representatives of the Merchants and Manufacturers associations, the Central Labor union, and the Rotary and Lions clubs will give consideration to this question as a meeting to be called in the near future or just as soon as all the committees are appointed. After this initial discussion representatives of the various charitable and philanthropic organizations in Norwich will in all probability be called to a second meeting in order to ascertain the sentiment of the organizations that would be affected.

The directors were informed that the new state park project to be known as Fort Shantok park has been practically assured for New London county. This will give New London county the first and only state park in this section of the state.

The directors considered the proposed relocation of the highway which will eliminate several railroad crossings and dangerous curves between Norwich and Danielson. Because the proposed route will do much to minimize these dangerous railroad crossings and curves, the directors approved the proposition as it was presented to them.

On Sunday, September 27th, daylight saving time will come to an end for 1925. It is customary for the railroads to make some changes in their schedules, and Norwich will be affected by the change. It is understood on reliable authority that the State of Maine express from Portland to New York will pass through Norwich daily, making two stops, going and coming. For several years past the Maine express has been routed via Hartford and it has again been placed on the Norwich schedule. A revised schedule for Norwich will be as follows according to reliable information received: Southbound, the Maine express will arrive in Norwich at 3:48 a. m. formerly some years ago this express left Norwich a few minutes after 4 a. m. The second train will leave Norwich for New London and connections at 7:25 a. m. This will be a bus and will run daily except Sundays. The Worcester train will arrive in Norwich at 11:56 a. m. daily. A bus will arrive from Putnam at 2:55 p. m. daily except Sundays, and a bus will leave Norwich at 4:50 p. m. daily except Sundays. The last train will be from Worcester arriving at 8:50 p. m. daily. Going north, the first train to reach Norwich will be at 5:10 a. m. daily except Sundays, when it will arrive at 5:42 a. m. A bus will arrive in Norwich from New London at 8:40 a. m. daily except Sundays. A second bus will arrive at 12:30 p. m. daily except Sundays from New London. The Worcester train going north will arrive in Norwich at 3:07 p. m. daily. A bus from New London will arrive in Norwich at 6:35 p. m. daily except Sundays. The State of Maine express going to Portland will arrive in Norwich at 10:45 p. m. daily. The addition of the State of Maine express to the local schedule will provide the business men of Norwich and vicinity an opportunity to arrive in Norwich by train at a much later hour than has heretofore prevailed for a number of years. The Chamber has been informed that the New Haven railroad has contracted for several new busses of the electric type. Heretofore they have been of the gasoline type, and these will not run for several weeks. Until that time the steam trains will run and the express package delivery will continue as at present. The directors instructed the secretary to await developments of the expresr service when the busses are put on the schedule. The express deliveries of freight is very important to local industry and business, and the Chamber will make every effort to have an efficient handling of express deliveries to Norwich when the new busses are put into operation.

Preparations are also being made to arrange for the annual meeting of the Chamber which will be held in October. The directors authorized the appointment of a committee to co-operate with other cities for a fire prevention week, which this year will be conducted nationally during the week of October 4th. Fire prevention week has been nationally adopted by all the large cities throughout the country as a week of warning the general public about the carelessness in creating fires and the consequent tremendous fire losses which annually occur throughout the United States.

JAIL SENTENCE FOR DIAMOND RING THEFT

In the city court Friday morning, Judge Arthur F. Libby on the bench, Thomas Gilchrist, 5, of this city, entered a plea of guilty of the theft of two diamond rings. He was sentenced to six months in jail and ordered to pay costs of $11.65. The stolen rings were the property of Miss Eva Pippin of Willimantic and were taken from the mantlepiece at the home of Mrs. William Gilchrist, 717 Boswell avenue. Miss Pippin's sister. After Gilchrist was arrested here and confronted with proof of his guilt by Chief Linton, he surrendered the two rings, producing them from between his toes where he had been carrying them.

A local man was given a suspended jail sehtence of 15 days on a charge of breach of the peace.

Adam had his childish experience with little green apples after reaching manhood.

fair grounds, where she will be given admission. It is hoped also that the baby winning honorable mention will be there with the two cup winners.

Every baby that was entered was weighed and measured, and its entire physical condition was taken note of as to heart, lungs, spine, etc. The show was held throughout the day in a large tent systematically arranged for the convenience of the baby entrants and their mothers under the efficient general supervision of Dr. Ingraham, ably assisted by the United Workers Public Health Nursing department. Dr. Charles C. Gildersleeve was in charge of the examining doctors for the baby entrants and about 75 per cent. of the local physicians were present at different hours throughout the day lending their services in examining of the babies.

A number of Public Health nurses in charge of Miss Kate M. MacKenzie, supervisor, including Mrs. Josephine Riordan, Miss Margaret McNamara, Miss Tongren, all of this city, Miss McGibbney and Miss Siswick, both of New London, and Mrs. Nancy Kromer of Montville, ably assisted with the babies.

Mrs. Albert M. Chase, chairman of the United Workers Public Health Nursing Department, was present throughout the day, with the following corps of assistants: Mrs. Phillip T. Welles, Mrs. Thomas B. Leahy, Miss Edith E. Young, Miss Mariann M. Campbell, Mrs. Harvey M. Briggs, Mrs. John H. Williams, Mrs. J. N. Rosenberg, Mrs. Leonard O. Smith, Miss Kate A. Rudd, Mrs William L. Clark, Miss Mary H. Paddock, Miss Rozycki, and friend, Mrs. F. Peduce Mrs. Joseph N. Weymouth, Mrs. John B. Walsh, Miss Marion Peduce, Miss Margaret Sayles and Mrs. John Peckham. State Department of Health Nurses present included Miss Ruth Chase, supervisor, Miss Teresa Vincent, Mrs. Helen Van Meter, Miss Margaret Lewis and Miss Madeline Shipton.

FAIR NOTES

Louis Talbot, the Providence jeweler came back to his old time concession with an interesting exhibit Friday.

During the visit of Governor Trumbull Thursday, he warmly congratulated Supt. Fred G. Prothero on the attractions of the grounds, pronouncing this the best of the small fairs which he has ever visited.

The public appreciated the action of the management in making the woman's building and rest room free this year. The room has been well cared for by Miss Mary Fenton.

Visitors to the W. C. T. U. booth Friday included Miss Smith Starr, president of Uncasville W. C. T. U., and Miss Jeanette Starr.

Under direction of James J. Moore two big busses and the State Hospital car brought 251 patients from Norwich State Hospital to the Fair Friday afternoon, where they were guests of the Association. There were 131 women and 120 men in the big party in charge of a number of nurses.

Today (Saturday) the association will have as guests the children of the County Home on Smith avenue, Norwich with their matron, Miss Gibson and her assistants. Each year Supt. Prothero provides the visiting children ice cream cones as his personal treat.

An addition Friday was a booth for marcel demonstrating.

As on Thursday, the members of the Connecticut Council of Catholic Women were kept busy serving lunch, the fame of their good things having gotten abroad. The committee felt very well satisfied with the receipts toward their undenominational charity fund.

The Delco light line, shown by Carl W. Brown, Inc., had the same exhibition spot it has had for eight years. Carl W. Brown and L. W. Mitchell were in charge, showing the Delco power and light plants and Delco water systems. Much interest was manifested in the new low priced Delco light plant and in the Frigidaire, the electrical ice plant for modern homes.

Through an error it was stated that the Hudmobile Eight, entered in the automobile show at the New London County Fair, was being displayed by a New London concern. The Hudmobile Eight is exhibited by C. V. Pendleton of Norwich, local dealer, and has attracted wide attention during the show.

Auto Pageant Saturday.

The executive committee of the Norwich fair after fully considering the matter of holding the automobile float pageant Saturday afternoon have decided in fairness to those who have gone to some expense and effort to decorate their machines, to go through with the event and will pay the advertised first prize of $100 pro rata on an entry of 50 cars. Merchants who have kindly agreed to donate the remaining prizes have been released from their agreement, subject to their resumption if the number of entries reaches a sufficient figure to warrant. The parade will be started on the race track at 1.30 o'clock in charge of Superintendent Ballou.

Indifference sometimes wins where manifest desire stands no show.

"DRY" SURVEY HAS AROUSED THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

Declares That the Report of Conditions Should Prompt All Friends of Prohibition to Action—Asserts That the Recent Survey Has a Tendency to Underestimate the Benefits and Overestimate the Weaknesses of Prohibition—To Conduct a Joint Program of Its National and State Leagues.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20. (AP)—Making their first comment on the recently published prohibition survey of the research department of the Federal Council of Churches, ranking officials of the Anti-Saloon league joined tonight in declaring the facts disclosed should be regarded by all friends of prohibition as a challenge to action.

The league itself, it was disclosed, is preparing for a renewed campaign to "back up all officials from the president to constable" in rigid enforcement of the prohibition laws.

The following joint statement was made at the league headquarters here over the signatures of Bishop Thomas Nicholson, president of the league; F. Scott McBride, general superintendent; Dr. Howard H. Russell, founder, and Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel:

"The report of the research department of the Federal Council of Churches contains many facts which will challenge the friends of the 18th amendment to action. There is nothing in the report which justifies the use which the opponents of prohibition are making of it to bolster their claim that prohibition is a failure. The report itself shows that prohibition has bettered conditions when contrasted with the wet period.

"The conditions in 1924, as set forth in this report, compared with some other dry years, shows losses in some respects and gains in others. But when any dry year is compared with any wet year, allowing for the population increases, the advantages of prohibition are clear. Prohibition is not required to beat its own record. It does, however, beat the best records of the license period. The tendency of the report is to underestimate the benefits and over-estimate the weaknesses of prohibition.

"Wherever there is a partial failure in law enforcement, with accompanying bad results, it simply proves the necessity for the friends of prohibition to redouble their efforts to enforce the law. When the church was ready to demand prohibition the 18th amendment and the enforcement laws were written. When likewise the churches with equal emphasis demand prohibition enforcement it will be secured.

"The Anti-Saloon league believes in pitiless publicity on liquor lawlessness and its attendant evils. This league has now under good headway a joint program of its national and state leagues, effectively to back up all officials from the president to constable, in rigid enforcement of the law. The league's national convention in Chicago in November has been called to perfect and proclaim this program in full to the whole country.

"We challenge the majority which wrote the 18th amendment into the constitution to continue the fight, arouse public sentiment, cure existing defects, stop the leaks and enlist the people for law and observance and law enforcement."

NEGRO BURNED AT THE STAKE IN MISSISSIPPI

NEW ALBANY, Miss., Sept. 20. (AP)—L. Q. Ivy, negro timber cutter, was burned at the stake by a mob which had taken him from officers near here this afternoon. Ivy, according to Sheriff John W. Roberts, confessed that he attacked the daughter of a farmer in Etah community, 18 miles from here, Friday. He was returned to the scene of the attack and burned to death.

More than a thousand persons were in the mob which took the negro from sheriff Roberts, of Union county, and Sheriff Reese, of Lee county. While about 400 were lynching him, many of the others were searching for three negroes alleged to have been implicated in the crime by Ivy.

The negro was brought here from Aberdeen this afternoon so that the girl could identify him. Before reaching a hospital, where the girl is in a serious condition, the negro confessed the crime, Sheriff Roberts said.

Members of the mob blocked every road leading out of New Albany. The two sheriffs started at a high speed in the direction of Holly Springs, followed by hundreds of automobiles.

About eight miles from New Albany, the sheriff's car ran into a barricade of automobiles stretched across the road. The mob closed in from every direction.

Not a shot was fired by the officers. Sheriff Roberts declaring later that resistance was useless.

Ivy was one of a crew of timber cutters who were working Friday near a corn field in which the girl was attacked.

Two negroes, named by Ivy as accomplices, were captured by members of the mob but they convinced the mob leaders they were innocent and were freed. A third man also named by Ivy was captured by Sheriff Roberts' deputies but later released.

'FIERY CROSS MEN TO BE' DEPORTED FROM GERMANY

BERLIN, Sept. 20. (AP)—Gotthard Strohschein, a German born American charged with an attempt to organize the "Knights of the Fiery Cross" similar to the American Ku Klux Klan, will be deported. The same fate awaits his father, Otto Strohschein, if it should be proven that he also is an American citizen.

Others implicated in the movement have been released pending a further investigation.

The Strohscheins were brought to Berlin Sept. 11 from Silesia. Both denied that they had any connection with the "Knights of the Fiery Cross" organization, but the police asserted that documents proved that they had received funds for that purpose from Illinois. The two men in America were Lutheran ministers, but they posed in Germany as airplane technicians.

NATION'S FIRE LOSS THE HEAVIEST IN HISTORY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20. (AP)—Concern over the increase in the nation's fire loss, which in recent months has been the heaviest in history, is expressed by President Coolidge in his annual fire prevention week proclamation.

The proclamation, made public today at the White House, recommended that the week beginning Sunday, October 4, be observed as national fire prevention week. Appealing to state and municipal officials, civic organizations, school authorities and all citizens and organized bodies for fullest co-operation in improving conditions, the president declared that there is need "for earnest study of the principles of fire protection as a practical measure of national economy."

A FARMHAND AT CLARK'S FALLS COMMITS SUICIDE

CLARK'S FALLS, Conn., Sept. 20. (AP)—Charles E. McCleary, 21, a farm hand for John J. McGaughrin for the past two months, killed himself last night by firing a revolver shot into his heart. McGaughrin said that the youth left the house about 11 o'clock and a short time later he heard a shot. On going out to the barn he found McCleary dead with the revolver in his grasp. He was said to have been despondent.

STOCKBRIDGE TAX COLLECTOR HAS ADMITTED $25,000 SHORTAGE

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 20. (AP)—Michael Flynn, 2nd tax collector of Stockbridge, for 24 years, today admitted to a representative of the Springfield Republican that there was a shortage in his accounts with the town amounting to about $25,000. His statement following the visit of the auditors of the state division of accounts who have been here since Friday going over the town books.

Mr. Flynn, aged 68, stated that he began taking money from the town five or six years ago when he was forced to pay certain notes that he had indorsed. He admitted that he had failed to turn over to the town treasurer all the money that he had collected for several years. He stated that he had admitted the shortage to the auditors and was doing what he could to aid them. He will meet the board of selectmen tomorrow and says he ill file his resignation or follow such course as the selectmen may indicate. He is bonded for $15,000.

TO CUT GOV'T. TELEGRAPH BILL $13,000,000 A MONTH

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20. (AP)—Officials of the budget bureau have under consideration a suggestion that congress be asked to authorize establishment of a general federal telegraph message system.

A voluntary organization in which ten agencies of the government have employed the army and navy communication systems already has been tried out, and has been found satisfactory.

Director Lord of the budget estimated today that a saving of more than $13,000,000 a month in the cost of handling government dispatch traffic has been accomplished, and he believed that a small appropriation, in addition to that already in use for leased wires, would result in virtual elimination of dispatch traffic bills to private communication lines.

There would be, he said, an important net saving as a result of maximum employment of the systems already set up.

TO DEVELOP 500,000 HORSE POWER AT PASSAMAQUODDY

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—Development of power from the tides of Passamaquoddy Bay, a project approved by the people of Maine in a referendum vote, would result in formation of an electrical system costing $100,000,000 and covering New England according to engineers who surveyed the situation. It would be linked with the power lines from Niagara on the west, the report said, "thus forming a great reservoir of power for the most densely populated portion of the United States."

W. S. Murray, representing the engineers who made the investigation, announced today 500,000 horsepower could be developed from the bay tides. He expressed confidence adequate financing could b arranged on the basis usually followed in electric utility promotion.

LIQUOR VALUED AT $15,000 WAS SEIZZED IN STAMFORD

STAMFORD, Spt. 20—Liquor valued at $15,000 was seized here early today when a truck bound for New York, was stopped and two men on it arrested on charges of transporting liquor. They gave their names as Patrick Shannon, and William Major, both of Brooklyn. Shannon was the driver. There were 250 cases of Scotch whiskey and six small barrels of wine in the truck which was halted for investigation by a state policeman who found the truck running without lights.

AN UNIDENTIFIED MAN KILLED AT PLAINVILLE

PLAINVILLE, Sept. 20—An unidentified man was killed here late today on Whiting street by a truck driven by Angelo Certani, 19, of Plainville. Certani is being held for manslaughter.

A pay envelope bearing number 6406 a gold watch on which were the initials A. M. and $32 in bills were found in the dead man's clothing. He is believed to have lived in New Britain.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

Steamer Leeds City Wrecked.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—(A. P.)—Loss of the steamer Leeds City in the Illyria Sea was reported today in a Batavia dispatch. The ship sank within 45 minutes of the time she went ashore. Thirty-seven members of the crew were picked up by a Dutch ship.

Prince of Wales in Los Andes.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Sept. 20. (AP)—The Prince of Wales, who was marooned in Chile for the past week because of savy snostorms in the Andes, left Vina Del Mar at 1 o'clock this morning for Los Andes, arriving there about four hours later. He left for the frontier on his way to Argentina at 6 o'clock in the morning.

HAVE FOUND BODY OF J. BREWSTER PRATT

CHESTER, Conn., Sept. 20.—(A. P.)—Held in the mud of the Connecticut river by parts of the seaplane in which he had been a passenger and which had caused the death of the pilot when it fell into the river above here Thursday, the body of J. Brewster Pratt, 27, of New Haven, was found today by searchers who had dragged the river unceasingly since the plane took its nose dive and collapsed.

The body which was mangled was found only a short distance downstream from the scene of the wreck. Near it was found parts of the seaplane's radiator, other parts of the plane, and its anchor.

Taken to the undertaker's establishment in Middletown the body now awaits funeral arrangements. Coroner L. A. Smith, who had persisted in the search for Pratt's body after it had been established that another man had been in the plane when Harry Ludwig, 30, of Hartford, the pilot, was almost instantly killed, will hold an inquest into both deaths tomorrow in Middletown.

Pratt, said by his brother to be the owner of the plane, and Ludwig, left Branford, Thursday morning for Hartford where Ludwig was to take an examination for a pilot's license. Pratt's car was left in Branford, and the two flew to New Haven where they took on gas. They followed the sound until they came to the mouth of the Connecticut river and were flying about the river up to Hartford when the accident occurred.

Witnesses of the crash said that when about opposite the home of Harry Bond, the plane settled low over the water and suddenly went into a nose dive to fall into the river.

The first person to reach the wreckage found Ludwig in the pilot's cockpit, but no trace of a second man. It was learned later that there had been another man in the plane and by late that night it was almost established that the man was Pratt.

A shoe found yesterday, which was identified as one of Pratt's, caused the searchers to continue their efforts with new hope, and today the body was found.

A number of witnesses have been summoned by the coroner for the inquest tomorrow.

The coroner was aided in the search for the body and for Pratt, if he were alive, by aviators from Brainard field, Hartford, and many residents of Chester and vicinity.

FAMOUS WORK BY SCULPTOR PAUL WAYLAND BARTLETT

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(A. P.)—Paul Wayland Bartlett, of New York, who died today at Paris, was the sculptor of the big statues on the front of the New York Public library. He also designed the pediment over the house wing of the United States capitol at Washington, D. C. Other statuatory which made him famous was the statues of Benjamin Franklin and Patriotism at Duluth, Minn., the statue General Joseph Warren at Boston, the Equestrian statue of Lafayette in the square of the Louvre, Paris, and the statues of Columbus and Michael Angelo in the Congressional library at Washington.

Mr. Bartlett, who was educated in the public schools of New Haven and Boston, began sculpture when a boy under the instruction of Fremiet. When he was 14 years old he exhibited in Salon a bust of his grandmothers, and in 1880 entered Ecole Des Beaux Arts where he became a pupil of Cacelier. In 1887 he received praise at Salon for the group, The Bear Tamer (now in the Metropolitan Museum of Art at New York). At the Paris exposition in 1900 he represented the United States on the international jury of awards for sculpture.

He was made a Cheveller of the Legion of Honor of France in 1888. Mr. Bartlett is represented at the Boston Museum, Philadelphia Academy of Design, Chicago Art Institute, Luxembourg Gallery, Paris; and museum of Decorative Art, Paris. He was born at New Haven, Conn., in 1865.

MORE THAN 1,500,000 ENGLISH WORKMEN ARE UNEMPLOYED

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(A. P.)—There are 1,500,000 English workmen unemployed today with no indication of any immediate improvement in the labor situation, acording to Sir Henry Maybury, director general of roads in the british ministry of transport who is here studying transportation.

"The happiest man in England today is the one in work," he said.

There is an entirely erroneous impression regarding the so-called unemployment "dole". Sir Henry asserted, and explained that the recipients "merely are sharing in a fund which they themselves helped build up prior to the war and which still is being sustained, in part by the employed workingmen."

"When these unemployed men again succeed in obtaining employment, they will resume contributing to the fund and thus repay what they have withdrawn during their period of unemployment," he said. "I cannot speak too highly of the spirit of the British workingmen. In my official capacity, I have directed much public work which was created primarily to give much needed employment. We have given occupation to about 250,000 of these men. Of this number we have had to discharge very few indeed for malingering. Most of the men are anxious to work. In fact, many come and beg tearfully for employment."

17 DEATHS FROM AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS IN MASS. LAST WEEK

BOSTON, Sept. 20. (AP)—Automobile accidents caused 17 deaths in the state last week, according to the weekly statistics made public today by Frank A. Goodwin, state registrar of motor vehicles. The number is the same as the preceding week, but an increase of seven over the corresponding week last year.

A total of 485 drivers lost their licenses for violation of the automobile laws and of this number 131 were convicted of driving after drinking intoxicants.

Building Aircraft Carrier For Navy

Huge Ship to be Launched at Foreriver Shipyard October 3—Vessel is 888 Feet in Length.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20—(A. P.)—The navy will launch its second aircraft carrier, the Lexington, on October 3 at the Foreriver Shipyards at Quincy, Mass., it will be christened by Mrs. T. Douglas Robinson, wife of the assistant secretary of the navy, as she starts down the ways ultimately to join her sister ship the Saratoga.

Although the Saratoga was launched on April 7 at Camden, N. J., she is no nearer completion than the Lexington, work on both having progressed at the same speed. They are 62 per cent complete and will be ready for commissioning late next year the Saratoga probably joining the Pacific battle fleet and the Lexington going to the Atlantic scouting fleet.

The Lexington, exactly like her sister, will be 888 feet long over all of 105 feet beam, and electrically driven, as are the newer battleships. She will have a speed of 33 knots and a displacement of 43,000 tons. Each ship will be able to carry 72 airplanes.

Originally designed as battle cruisers, the two ships were changed to airplane carriers under treaties as of the limitation of armament treaty. Four other cruisers then under construction were scrapped by that treaty.

Completion of the Saratoga and Lexington, naval officers said, will give the navy two carriers beyond comparison with those of any other power. Japan has two similar carriers under construction but they are smaller and have less engine power.

The Lexington's motor power will be produced by four 45,000 horsepower motors, or sufficient to provide heat and power for a city of 700,000 population. Eight 22,500 kilowatt turbine generators will drive the motors, and steam for them will be supplied by 16 boilers, the equivalent of 100 locomotives.

In addition a number of auxiliary motors and generators will be installed for a variety of uses ranging from steering the ship to operating potato peeling machines.

The ship's major armament will consist of eight 8-inch guns mounted in four turrets, and these will be supplemented by anti-aircraft and machine guns.

Her radio equipment will be of the latest design with a single antenna leading to the deck from a lowering mast able to lower within itself when the ship passes under a bridge.

The smokestack, elevators and navigating bridge are grouped amidships at the extreme starboard side of the deck, giving the planes a clear sweep from stem to stern for their activities.

The Lexington will weigh approximately 36,000 tons when she sinks from the ways and will be the heaviest ever launched in this country. The Saratoga was about 2,000 tons lighter. Special arrangements have been made at the shipyard to check the Lexington's speed down the ways and to bring her to a full stop within 200 feet.

REPORT ON RESIGNATION OF COMPETITIVE PROVISO

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(A. P.)—The government's policy toward business is undergoing a significant change, according to the National Industrial Conference Board, which today made public a report on "regulation of competitive practices," based on a ten year review of the Clayton and federal trade commission acts.

"Big business," no longer is considered "bad" because it is big, the conference board found, but on the contrary "recent administrative and judicial policies reflect a growing tendency to recognize that the larger corporations are as a rule among the most honestly and fairly conducted business organizations."

Comparatively few of the corporations cited for violations of the law have been firms popularly known as "trusts," the report pointed out. Most of the orders to "cease and desist" from predatory practices have been issued against obscure firms of slight importance in their respective lines of trade.

During its ten years of existence, the trade commission has taken under advisement 3,632 requests for action to prevent unfair competition. There have been 933 complaints finally disposed of, of which 635 resulted in orders "to cease and desist."

Murder and Suicide By Man Aged 72 Years

Strangled Mrs. Grace Snow, 71, His Lifelong Friend, and Then Drowned Himself.

EPSOM, New York, Sept. 20—(A. P.)—While apparently insane, Charles Sumner Hall, 72 year old lumber dealer and realtor, shot and strangled his life long friend Mrs. Grace Snow, 71, early today and drowned himself in a bath tub in his hotel next door.

The body of Mrs. Snow, a widow, was found in her bed by Hall's nephew, George M. Hall, who went to her cottage when his uncle left their house and failed to return. Mrs. Snow had been shot through the temple and strangled with a towel, and her head had been battered, evidently with a revolver butt. Young Hall summoned help from Concord, and he and the officers who arrived went next door to the Sumner hotel, owned by the old man and closed for the winter September 1. They broke in, found the bath room door locked, and again forcing their way discovered the body of Hall partly clothed in a half-filled bath tub.

In his hand was clutched a revolver, from which had fallen into the water four loaded cartridges and a discharged shell. The authorities believe that Hall had tried to shoot himself and then resorted to drowning.

COMMUNIST SAKLATVALA IS GOOD STREET ORATOR

LONDON, Sept. 20.—(AP)—"The amazing Saklatvala," is the way English newspapers are accustomed to describe the communist member of parliament, Shapurji Saklatvala, who though a member of the British delegation to the conference of the interparliamentary union at Washington, has just been refused permission by the American government to enter the United States.

Saklatvala is a Parsee who has been in England for twenty years. Like many other young Indians he came to London to engage in Anglo-Indian trade. But the counting house was too slow. He was a clerk for a time in the firm of Sir Ratan Tata, merchant prince, and rose to the position of department manager.

But Saklatvala was a natural born speaker. He was always in arguments. He joined societies and debated with great energy. Then he drifted into politics and became a liberal. His skill as a stumper carried him into socialist ranks where there was great scope for speakers who were discontented with the government's Indian policy.

Saklatvala later joined a society organized to forward Russian propaganda, and when this society was absorbed into the communist party he became an accepted communist, and is rated as one of the whirlwind orators of the red forces. However, the house of commons is not fond of whirlwind oratory of the Saklatvala sort and has never listened to him with much patience.

Saklatvala lacks the majesty and dignity of many a shamble. There is little that suggests power when he is in repose, as he is mild-mannered and quiet in his bearing. But he has a high, raucous voice and an emotional manner which enables him to carry street corner crowds off their feet.

Prior to the order of disbarment issued against him, British conservatives were speculative as to whether Saklatvala would be required to make an affidavit before he entered New York that he is not affiliated with organizations which are seeking to undermine constitutional government.

Any member of the British parliament willing to pay his own way could attend the Washington conference as a member of the British group. As Saklatvala was a communist member from Battersea there was no way of keeping him out of the delegation except as the United States government thought fit.

MOTION PICTURE MADE WITH ENTIRE CAST OF BUGS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—(AP)—Motion pictures with bugs composing the entire cast have been completed by the cinema laboratory of the department of agriculture.

In contrast with the usual production with their heroes and heroines, these pictures feature only villians.

In one film the calosoma beetle plays the lead, chasing a gypsy moth, decapitating it and then dragging it to its lair. In other pictures the boll weevil performs on the cotton plant, the clothes moth does its antics on a piece of wool and the bed bug demonstrates its liking for human association by crawling on an attendant.

While the acts were being recorded the warble developed stage fright and the picture could not be completed until the performer was reduced to semi-consciousness by chloroform.

Temperament also was in evidence. Bees so objected to being photographed that they chased the camera man into a cellar and the boll weevils insisted upon closeups. Several times the grinding of the camera had to be stopped while the weevils were extricated from the lenses.

HARVARD MEN WAITERS IN FRESHMAN DORMITORIES

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 20.—(AP)—A plan of employing student waiters this year in one of the Harvard freshman dormitories was announced tonight. From 30 to 35 students will be enabled to earn their board in return for waiting on table three and a half days a week in Gore hall. It is understood that upon the success of the innovation will depend the extension of the system to other freshmen dormitories.

The students will be given their meals on the days when they are employed and in addition will receive a bi-weekly payment of eight dollars.

FRANCE TO START PAYMENT OF WAR DEBT IMMEDIATELY

Proposal to be Made by Finance Minister Caillaux to the American Debt Commission—Would Start Off a Substantial Payment in 1926, With Increasing Amounts Annually During the Next Twenty Years.

ON BOARD STEAMSHIP PARIS, Sept. 20—The debt proposal which Finance Minister Caillaux is understood to have prepared for submittal to the American commission in Washington contemplates immediate steps by France to reduce the principal of her account.

Caillaux's program would offer a substantial installment payment in 1926, with increasing amounts annually during each of the next 20 years.

CONJECTURE ON OFFER FRANCE IS TO MAKE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20—The indication that France was prepared to begin immediate liquidation of her debt to the United States upon conclusion of the forthcoming funding negotiation here stirred a new current of interest among American debt commission officials at the trend of events.

To some observers, the information in an Associated Press despatch from the liner Paris bringing Finance Minister Caillaux to this country came as evidence that France's mission would seek to negotiate solely on the nation's capacity to pay. Such a policy it was thought contemplated removal from the negotiation of every phase of the French financial or political situation, including the tentative agreement with Great Britain and the reparations payments.

The American commission policy of secrecy with respect to the attitude it will take toward any French proposal caused most of the officials here to refrain from public comment, but they interpreted the stand taken by M. Caillaux as evidence of his intent to obtain an immediate settlement if possibl.

It obviously was too much for officials here to attempt to calculate what the French payments would be, although M. Caillaux previously has made known that he hoped to arrange a settlement that would wipe out the entire $4,000,000,000 obligation in 62 years, or in the same period accorded the British government for payment of its debt. Chief interest centered, however, in the information that immediate steps were to be taken to reduce the amount of the principal. It was construed to mean that France would not seek a moratorium, as had been expected in some quarters, and which had formed the oasis of much editorial comment.

It was assumed, however, that M. Caillaux was expected a minimum interest rate and therefore would propose to increase the annual amortization payments in consequence of a concession in the interest charge.

Out of the discussions resulting from M. Caillaux remarks there developed the belief that France will be satisfied with optional provisions in any funding agreement by which she can delay some of the payments if need arises. Provision for such delay—a postponement of two years—was accorded the British contingent only on the service of notification a ninety days in advance of the date on which payment on interest or principal is due. Such an arrangement, it was said, when the British agreement was signed, safeguards the debtor government from hardships that might conceivably arise in such sudden or serious economic changes in world affairs and there seemed to be no doubt here that the American commission would be willing to go as far in this respect with France.

AIRCRAFT INVESTIGATION WILL BEGIN TODAY IN WASHINGTON

LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 20.—Independent of the general aircraft investigation by President Coolidge's special board, the navy will seek through a court of inquiry opening here tomorrow to develop the facts with respect to the wrecking of the huge dirigible Shenandoah in a line squall over Ohio on September 3.

From a public point of view, the principal witnesses to be examined will be Colonel William Mitchell of the army air service, and Captain Anton Heinen, German dirigible expert, both of whom have made charges of a more or less sensational nature against navy management in connection with the destruction of the only lighter-than-air fighting craft the nation possessed.

The naval court undoubtedly will give Colonel Mitchell the fullest opportunity to support his charges of negligence and almost criminal mismanagement of aircraft affairs by the navy. At the same time the prosecuting officers before the court are preparing to subject the colonel to a severe cross-examination with respect to these and other shafts he has directed at the navy in the long controversy of which he has essayed the central role.

Naval officers say it is not to be expected that Colonel Mitchell will be able to shed much direct light on the cause of the collapse of the Shenandoah; that for this court must look to the surviving officers of the ship and to the technical experts who either supervised her construction or examined the wreckage scattered over the Ohio fields.

A detailed report of the disaster will be presented in the court by Lieutenant Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, navigator of the Shenandoah, and the senior surviving officer, in the usual course this would be one of the first bits of evidence to be received by the court. Incidentally it will be the first public official report on the catastrophe.

Other survivors besides Commander Rosendahl will be heard and then will come the technical testimony from which the court may reach conclusions as to the exact causes of the crumpling of the great airship.

PREPARING FOR PULITZOR AIRPLANE RACE OCTOBER 20

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—(A. P.)—In preparation for the Pulitzer trophy airplane race on October 30, Lieutenant Cyrus Bettis, who will represent the United States army, today made a test flight of an hour and a half.

The navy has selected Lieutenant Alvord J. Williams to pilot its plane. The men will fly identical airplanes.

Lieutenant Williams last Friday achieved a speed of 302.3 miles an hour, in the same Curtis pursuit airplane today Lieutenant Bettis failed to equal his competitor's five-mile-a-minute spurt but on his third flight attained a speed of more than 260 miles an hour. The best previous Pulitzer trophy time is 230.20 miles and hour and was established in 1923 by Lieutenant S. Callaway.

237,324 MOTOR VEHICLES ARE REGISTERED IN THE STATE

HARTFORD, Sept. 20. (AP)—On the first of August there were 237,324 motor vehicles registered in Connecticut and 244,279 telephones in use in the state. This shows that almost every family in the state that has a telephone has also an automobile or motorcycle.

The number of telephones in a state is a good index of the number of motor vehicles in that state, according to the results of a study made by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. In more technical words, there is a high correlation between telephone and automobile use by states. The telephone and motor vehicle totals are close in all of the other New England states, except Massachusetts.

Motor vehicles sold at a list price of $800 or less were responsible for 139,807 of the 224,771 registrations in Connecticut last year, so nearly all can be approximately. Cars which sold for prices between $800 and $2,500 constituted 79,569 more of the registrations and the remaining 5,395 registrations were of cars which cost more than $2,500 each. Of the first classification, that is the cars that sold for less than $800; 109,137 were listed at prices under $400.

TEN AUTO ACCIDENTS IN NEW HAVEN OVER WEEK END

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 20—(A. WILLIMANTIC

An Elmer Coach owned and operated by Joseph Brunelle of Worcester, Mass., sustained a damaged front fender and tire about noon Sunday, in a collision at Lincoln Square on Main street with a Maxwell touring car owned by Mary L. Tarrioni, of Chaplain and operated by Alfred Prudentte of 160 Main street this city. Prudentte notified the police that he would assume the responsibility for the accident.

Dr. R. Bullock Jones of this city, and Miss Grace Frances Bennett were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Bennett of 84 Rochmandy Avenue, Rochester, N. Y., at six o'clock Saturday evening. The house was attractively decorated with palms, asters, gladioli and larkspur. The ceremony was performed under a floral arch by Rev. Edwin Fulcomer of Millin, Penn.

As the bridal party entered the room walking with her father, George W. Bennett, who gave her in marriage, Miss Florine Reynolds of the Eastman school of Music played the Wedding March from Lohengrin. During the ceremony Miss Reynolds played "At Dawning" and "O Promise Me," which were sung by Miss Helen Kelley, soprano of the Eastman School of Music. The bride was gowned in white chiffon beaded in silver. She wore a tulle veil caught up with pearls and organ blossoms. Her bouquet was of bride roses and orchids. Mrs. R. R. Fulcomer of New York City, as matron of honor, was modishly gowned in ecru georgette over peach. She carried pink roses and blue larkspur. The bridesmaids were Miss Helen Jones of Millville, N. J., sister of the groom, and Miss Lois Weller of Rochester, N. Y. Their frocks were of peach colored georgette. They carried bouquets of pink roses and blue larkspur. R. R. Fulcomer of New York, was best man. The ushers were Gordon Henderson and George W. Bennett Jr., of Rochester, N. Y. Following the ceremony a reception dinner was served the bridal party and twenty-five friends at the Hotel Seneca, Rochester. The bride and groom left later to spend two weeks at Nantucket, Mass., and New York City. After October 4th, they will occupy a recently purchased home at 72 Prospect street, Willimantic.

The bride is prominent in Rochester social circles and there were numerous pre-nuptial events, including showers, tea, bridge parties and luncheons at which the bride-elect was guest of honor.

Dr. Jones is a graduate of Philadelphia School of Dentistry. He came to Willimantic in August, 1923, upon the retirement of Dr. D. Everett Taylor and took over the latter's practice. He is a member of Willimantic Rotary Club and the Chamber of Commerce.

Impressive funeral services were held at St. Joseph's church Saturday morning as a final tribute to Former Postmaster John O'Rourke. A solemn requiem mass was celebrated at nine o'clock by Rev. Henry E. Quinn, the pastor. Rev. Paul Bartlewski was deacon and Rev. Charles M. Kelley subdeacon. The funeral procession headed by a delegation of Willimantic Lodge No. 1311, B. P. O. E. in charge of Exalted Ruler Albert J. Fournier, entered the edifice as Chopin's Funeral March was played on the organ by Mrs. Edmund R. Portelance. Following were relatives and friends from this city, New York, Hartford, Norwich, Rockville, and Holyoke, Mass., and a representation of the old baseball team of which Mr. O'Rourke was a member and former captain. In attendance were Mayor George W. Hickey representing the city and Postmaster Walter R. King who succeeded Mr. O'Rourke in the postmastership. At the offertory Mrs. Henry Mathieu sang Haggart's "O Salutaris," Miss L. Monica McKeon sang "Pie Jesus" after the elevation and as a waiting hymn, Arthur Roy rendered "Farewell". For a recessional Mrs. Portelance played Mendelssohn's Funeral March. The Gregorian mass was sung by a quartet, Mrs. Mathieu, Miss McKeon, Mr. Roy and William A. Costello. The bearers were, John S. Sullivan, George Tinsmins and William Kelley representing the Elks, and Daniel Cremin, John J. Sullivan and Daniel Sullivan, representing San Jose Council, No. 14, Knights of Columbus. A large representation of present and ex-firemen who served with Mr. O'Rourke when he was foreman of the old Montgomery Hose Company, attended in a body. There were scores of beautiful floral tributes. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery where Rev. Father Quinn read the committal prayers.

P. G. Harding of Brooklyn, N. Y., delivered a lecture on "Year of Jubilee" in the G. A. R. Hall Sunday afternoon before a large and appreciative audience. He stated that wonderful things for humanity, especially for the Hebrews, were just at hand as the Full Atonement year, 1925, marks the ending of the seventy Jubilees established when the Jews entered the land of Canaan. According to Mr. Harding, Bible students hold the opinion that there were to be seventy Jubilees of fifty years each in the pictorial arrangement of the Hebrews, and that at their end would come the Grand Jubilee, the day when all the slaves of sin and death would go free, when humanity's return to Justice would be paid, and there would begin the recovery of all that was lost in Eden.

August Anderson, of Babcock Hill, pleaded guilty to operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor, when presented in the Windham county town court Friday night. Justice of the Peace Albert M. Gilman imposed a fine of $100 and costs, remitting $50 of the fine. Anderson paid a total of $52.13. Deputy Sheriff Allison L. Frink of Andover placed Anderson under arrest near the Hop River town line, after he had received a complaint that men were fighting in that vicinity. Shea were also on hand. The list of the "to be made voters," includes 150 applications, 89 men and 59 women. The final session of the board will be held next Saturday.

The replevin action instituted by Archie Berkowitz against Deputy Sheriff Allison L. Frink, of Andover, acting for Meech & Stoddard a Middletown grain concern, was heard before Justice of the Peace George H. Champlin in the Columbia town court Saturday night. The defense introduced no evidence in the case and after Attorney Brown of New London, had submitted his case without argument, Justice Champlin rendered judgment for the plaintiff to recover the property under dispute. The evidence for the plaintiff, who was represented by Attorney T. J. Kelley of this city, was heard in full. After judgment had been rendered Attorney Brown announced that his client would take an appeal to the Tolland county superior court. Bonds were fixed and furnished. The case in the outcome of the attachment of the property presumably owned by Frank Weinberg of Leonard Bridge by Deputy Sheriff Frink on behalf of the Middletown concern for the recovery of an unpaid grain bill. Among the several head of cattle which were placed under attachment was a heifer to which Berkowitz claims he holds title.

THREAD STRIKE'S 30TH WEEK—COMMISSARY STORE OPENS

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 30—Monday, marks the closing of the thirtieth week of the strike of the employees of the American Thread Company. There appears no indications which hint at any definite settlement of the controversy. The thread company has hundreds of employes brought here from a number of other cities now weighing at the plant and occupying tenements vacated by strikers. On the other side, hundreds of strikers, have gone to other places, some having made permanent removal, while others are occupying temporary quarters and planning to return, in the event of a settlement of the strike.

To care for strikers who are still in the city and unemployed, the local leaders established a commissary store at 108 Jackson street Saturday afternoon. Tickets will be issued at strike headquarters to needy persons. The tickets are returnable at the store for groceries and meats. It is planned to keep clothing on hand, later in the fall.

PUTNAM

Arthur C. Keith is receiving congratulations on his appointment by Governor Trumbull as County Commissioner for Windham County to succeed John A. Dady, who died a few months ago. Mr. KelKth is a resident of Putnam, a graduate of Putnam High school, class of 1912. He was in the military service during the war. He is the son of Luther M. Keith, supervisor of state roads in this district, is treasurer of Keith Garage, Inc., and a partner in the firm of L. M. eKith and Sons, dealers in monuments. Mr. Keith is married, has one child and lives on Fremont street in this city.

John B. Byrne, State Bank Commissioner, has gone to Nova Scotia to spend two weeks' vacation in fishing and hunting.

Leonard Gilman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Gilman has entered Assumption College at Worcester, Mass.

Mrs. William T. Fletcher of Worcester, Mass., has returned to her home after having spent the summer with her mother, Mrs. Mary A. Clark at Putnam Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Gilpatric, and two children of New Britain, spent the week end with Mr. Gilpatric's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Gilpatric.

At the meeting of the Executive committee of Putnam Chapter of the Red Cross, plans were made for the ninth roll call which will begin on November 11, Armistice Day. The production committee are working on Christmas bags to be sent to soldiers in the Philippines, China, Alaska and other places. The quota for the Putnam Red Cross is twenty-five and appeal is made to local knitters. Information concerning instruction and the purchase of yarn are obtainable from the chairman of the production committee, Miss Ellen Wheelock.

The American Red Cross has launched the first national campaign it has ever undertaken solely in behalf of ex-service men. There are 30,000 sweaters needed by the men still in hospitals under treatment. The government does not furnish sweaterers and the was supply is now practically exhausted and the Red Cross workers at the government hospitals urge the need of sweaters.

The Putnam Evening school, will open Monday, October 5. There will be classes in commercial branches, naturalization, and grammar school subjects.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth and little son, Vincent, who have been spending the summer with relatives in Putnam, have returned to their home in Winthrop.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Rankin of New York have returned from a trip to Europe and are in Pomfret for the autumn months.

Mrs. Margaret McCullough, Worthy Matron of Jassamine Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, was presented a white-gold emblem ring by the members of the order at their last meeting. After the presentation there was a reading by Mrs. W. N. Barrett and refreshments were served by the committee.

At the business meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association, held at the Israel Putnam school a program of educational and social activities for the coming year was completed. This program will be ready for distribution at an informal social to be held at the High school auditorium on Tuesday evening, October 13.

Miss Viola Snyder, Putnam school nurse, has returned from a short visit with her brother at Holyoke, Mass.

Miss Bell Gloria Jacobson of Norwich, is the guest of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Diamond of Grove street.

Mrs. Rose Lavine and son have returned from a month's visit at Revere Beach, Mass.

Miss Mary Carpenter has been appointed physical instructor in a girl's school at Andover, Mass.

In superior court Friday afternoon, Judge Frank D. Haines sentenced Stanley Budwick and William Kaminski, minors of Willimantic, to the State Reformatory. They pleaded guilty to an information charging them with several burglaries committed at Willimantic. The places entered were: the Polish Bakery Shop, Gillett's store at 57 Broad street, Grant's grain store, Hillhouse and Polo's store and Benjamin Cotter's store. Budwick pleaded guilty to all of the counts and Kaminski to but two of them.

Special State's Attorney Bradford was willing to nolle the other counts against Kaminski, but said that he had been informed that both boys had been emplicated in a series of other breaks and that under the circumstances he could do nothing else but recommend a reformatory sentence. Judge Haines asked them if they had any explanation to offer. Budwick said nothing; Kaminski replied that he stole because he wanted to secure enough money to go to New Bedford to learn a trade.

"That is not an explanation," declared Judge Haines, "neither of you look like a bum or crook and you certainly must realize that such a course as you have started on will not pay. I hope that you are both sorry for it," he added in an inquiring tone.

Budwick still maintained silence but Kaminski, the younger of the two but who seemed to have more mentality, said that he was sorry, but that it was too late now.

"It is too late to wipe out the past," replied Judge Haines, "but it isn't too late to try and resolve to do better." At the reformatory, you will be given an opportunity to learn a trade, probably a better opportunity than you would have gotten at New Bedford. I would like to have you promise me that you will try to do better and make something out of your lives."

Kaminski gave the court the promise he asked for but Budwick persisted in his stolid silence.

Eva Anderson of Putnam was granted a divorce by Judge Haines in superior court, Friday, from James Anderson on the grounds of desertion. They were married March 14, 1903 and one child was born to them. In 1909 she left her husband, she testified, because of his intemperance and cruel treatment of her. She went to New Bedford, Mass., and made her home with her mother and heard nothing of her husband until he came to the house, in 1917, and said that he would like to effect a reconciliation. He said he had been in the wrong and promised to do better. After three hours' talk, Mrs. Anderson said she agreed to his wish to have her live with him again.

He remained there during the night but left the house in the morning and she did not see him or hear from him again until October of last year when she met him on the street in Holyoke, Mass., and he told her that he was married again. She made some inquiries, learned who the woman was and went to see her. She said that she asked her if she was married to Anderson and she replied that she was not. For the past four years plaintiff has lived in Putnam.

Two other witnesses, Mrs. Boulay, with whom she makes her home, and William Calsse, who collects insurance premiums once a week, testified that they had never seen Anderson here and that they would know it if she had lived with him. Charles L. Torrey was her attorney.

Loren A. Barnes, of Willimantic, sued for divorce from Miriam E. Barnes, of Brooklyn, N. Y., charging desertion. William A. King, his attorney, said that suit had been instituted once before, but that because of the demand for alimony, which the plaintiff could not meet, the suit had been withdrawn. Afterwards he received a letter from Mrs. Barnes, which he exhibited in court, saying that she would not oppose the action nor ask alimony, so a new suit was begun.

Barnes has lived in Willimantic for twelve years. He was married in 1892. They lived in Hartford and because of a surgical operation that he had to undergo in 1908 plaintiff said that he was unable to work for five years. On April 1, 1918, his wife left him without giving him any previous notice or any explanation. Since then he had not seen her or had any communication with her. Willimantic citizens testified to his reputation and standing and the court granted the decree.

There was an attendance of about 500 at the field day and outing of the Hemingway Silk company held at Wildwood park Friday afternoon. The outing included a program of sports, with refreshments and dancing in the evening. It was one of the most successful affairs ever conducted by the company.

The results in the program of sports were:

50-yard dash—Won by Charles Murphy; R. Nelson, second. Prizes, fish-pole and cigaret holder.

Running high jump—Won by Francis Murphy; Charles Carlisenr, second. Prizes, baseball bat and flash-light.

Relay race—Won by Charles Murphy and Eva Riel; R. Nelson and J. Authier, second; Victor Morin and Bernadette Bassinet, third. Prizes, $5, $3 and $2.

In the baseball game the Dyehouse team was victorious and was awarded a box of cigars. During the dance in the evening a number of vocal solos were given by Eva Riel, Victor Morin, Janet Lacroix, Janet Authier, Mr. Baker, Mr Sharpe and Mr. Strout. Miss Labonte was accompanist.

STANDARD OIL CO. FIRE SPREADS TO F. & M. SHOP

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Sept. 20.—A spectacular and menacing fire that started shortly after 10 o'clock Saturday noon destroyed the large storage house, office and sheds as well as gasoline tanks and trucks owned by the Standard Oil company, on Mechanics street. The flames spread to the blacksmith shop of the Putnam Foundry & Machine shop and it was consumed at a loss estimated at $10,000. The loss of the Standard Oil company will probably amount to $25,000.

Because it was feared that the direction of the wind might change and spread the flames, the Webster Fire Department was called on for aid and a fire truck equipped with a pump reached the fire 18 minutes after the phone message was received at the Webster fire station. It was of great help in checking the flames as well as confining the blaze.

Due to the diameter of the mains in this section of the city, the water pressure was very limited and proved a serious handicap in subduing the fire. The members of the fire department did everything possible under the circumstances.

The three tanks were damaged as much as a fierce fire could damage metal. The top of one of them blew off [illegible] out from it through the dense volume of smoke like a blast furnace in operation.

The heat was so intense that it could be felt for a distance of several blocks.

What started the fire is not known, but it was first noticed inside the building. Filled and empty barrels of gasoline and oil were inflammable fuel and the large structure was soon a seething mass of flames which also produced a volume of black smoke that could be seen for miles. The storage tanks were not destroyed but the gasoline they contained burned rapidly and fiercely.

The buildings of the Foundry company, only a short distance away, seemed doomed; but aside from the blacksmith shop, none of them was damaged much. Under the direction of Sauel Reynolds, the superintendent, the entire force of workmen was employed in keeping the roofs and walls of the plant drenched with water. Mr. Reynolds estimates the loss at about $10,000.

Everett Davis, manager of the Standard Oil, was not prepared to place a figure on the loss, but practically all the company's property, including the contents of the office, which was located in the storage building, was destroyed.

Watchmen guarded the burned buildings Saturday night and Sunday to see that no smoldering embers burst into flames.

Increase Your Beauty and Look Younger

Delightful New Vanishing Cream Containing True Buttermilk Must Make You Look Years Younger or Money Back.

The old-time application of Buttermilk and Cream to whiten and preserve the skin and remove harsh little wrinkles and ugly sallowness is grandmother's recipe and women throughout the country are again using it to ensure a beautiful complexion and snow-white hands and arms.

Buttermilk, however, is not always obtainable, but a specialist has at last perfected a method of concentrating buttermilk and combining it with a perfect cream, which you can buy in small quantities ready for use at any first-class drug store by simply asking for "Howard's" Buttermilk Cream.

There is no secret about it nor is there any doubt about the result—it's just a common ordinary buttermilk in the form of a wonderful cream, gently massaged with the finger tips around the corners of the eyes and mouth.

Buttermilk Cream is only sold by Lee & Osgood Co. and all good druggists on a positive guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

Rev. and Mrs. G. Keene Gray, Charles D. Wolf, Mrs. Frank Wilcox, Byron Kinnie, Joseph Montague, Mrs. Herbert Hurst, Mrs. John Morgan, Earl Robinson, Lawrence Peterson, united with the Congregational church Sunday morning. Five children were christened: William, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Dealtrey, and Elizabeth, Catherine, Myrtle and Flora, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hurst. Rev. C. H. Ricketts of Greenville, officiated at this service.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Roode attended the funeral of Dr. John K. Bucklyn in Mystic Saturday.

Saturday morning about 8:30, the fire whistle alarm blew, for District 14. In two minutes the Main street was alive with men, women and children, and automobiles were running to find the fire. On inquiry, the telephone operators had not rung in the alarm. It was found on investigation of the pole near the postoffice, where there is the one street fire alarm box, that the glass was broken and some malicious person had pulled the alarm. To the simple-minded this might seem like a joke, but it would be a serious affair if the hose company refused to make a run because it might be a case of "wolf! wolf!" again.

POETRY

Gifts

"O World-God, give me wealth!" the Egyptian cried.
His prayer was granted. High as he'en behold
Palace and pyramid; the brimming flow
Of lavish Nile washed all his land with gold.
Armies of slaves toiled ant-wise at their feet.
World-circling traffic roared through mart and street.
His priests were gods, his spice-balmed kings enshrined.
Set death at naught in rich-ribbed chamber dim.
Seek Pharaoh's race today, and you shall find,
Rust and the moth, silence and dusty sleep.

"O World-God, give me beauty!" cried the Greek.
His prayer was granted. All the earth became Plastic and vocal to his sense; each peak,
Each grove, each stream, quick with Promethean flame,
Peopled the world with imaged grace and light.
The lyre was hit, and his the breathless night
Of the immortal marble his the art
Of diamond pointed thought and golden tongue.
Go seek the sunshine race. Ye find today
A broken column and a lute unstrung.

"O, World-God give me power!" the Roman cried.
His prayer was granted. The vast world was chained
A captive to the chariot of his pride.
The blood of myriad provinces was drained
To feed that fierce, insatiable red thirst.
Invulnerably bulwarked, every part
With serried legions and with close-meshed code,
Within the burrowing worm had gnawed its home:
A roofless ruin stands where once abode
The imperial race of everlasting Rome.

"O God-Head, give me truth!" the Hebrew cried.
His prayer was granted, he became the slave
Of the idea, a pilgrim far and wide
Cursed, hated, spurned and scourged with none to save,
The Pharaohs knew him, and when Greece beheld,
His wisdom were the hoary crowns of Eld.
Beauty he hath forsworn, and wealth and power
Seek him today and find in every land.
No fire consumes him, neither floods devour:
Immortal through the lamp within his hand.

—Emma Lazarus.

Keys

I danced along the rainbow paths of song
The gorgeous colors changed before my eyes.
I'd tried to open with but leaden keys
The golden gates that limit paradise.
The key of silver made by toil I chose,
Which opened for me many an earthly gate;
But still the shining doors would not unclose,
For finer metal did high heaven wait.
Forgetting self, among the poor I sought
To follow Him, who lived by Galilee
And then one day a shining angel brought Death's message, folded round the golden key.
The Gates of Life to me so long denied
With sound of heaven's trumpets opened wide.

—Catherine Cate Coblentz in the Boston Transcript.

An ounce of flattery goes farther with some women than a pound of pity.

A good reputation is sometimes useful as a parachute to the man who rises rapidly in the world.

You can usually gauge the depth of a man's love by the silliness of the letters to the girl in the case.

It is useless to worry; but it is useless to tell a man that it is useless to worry.

Silence may be golden, but sometimes silver will shut a man's mouth just as effectively.

NEGLECTED CEMETERIES

In a recent communication concerning country cemeteries and their upkeep, attention was called by Allen B. Lincoln to the act which was passed at the last session of the general assembly concerning funds for the care of cemetery lots, which makes provision for the placing of funds in the hands of county treasurers the income of which is to be turned over by them to the treasurer of the towns in which the respective cemeteries may be located for the purpose of caring for such cemeteries or any lot therein.

This appears to be a piece of legislation about which all those who are interested in country cemeteries should know. It should aid greatly in overcoming the condition too often seen of having cemeteries grow up to briars and thick brush. With the knowledge that there has been a legal agency established for the purpose of caring for trust funds of such a character much encouragement should be given to creating such funds.

For the benefit of the many who may be interested it seems well that the act should be published. Chapter 168 follows:

Section 1. Money which may be declared by an instrument in writing to be intended for the perpetual care, maintenance, improvement or embellishment of any cemetery in this state, or any lot or plot therein, to an amount not less than $100, may be deposited with the treasurer of the county in which such cemetery may be located, who shall in the name of such county, receive and receipt therefor. Each depositor shall, at the time of making such deposit, file with the county treasurer and with the secretary of state a copy of such instrument.

Section 2. Each county treasurer shall invest the money that may be deposited with him under provisions of section one of this act in the name of the county, in bonds or other obligations of the state or other securities in which he is authorized to invest mongy in behalf of the county; and, on the first days of February and August in each year, he shall pay over the accrued interest thereon to the treasurer of the town in which the cemetery is located, and the same shall be expended in the same manner as the income of funds donated to towns under the provisions of section 1042 of the general statutes. At the time of paying such interest the county treasurer shall inform the person to whom it shall be paid of the purpose to whom it is to be applied, as stated in the copy of such instrument, and such person shall thereupon apply it to such purpose.

With such a means of providing for the perpetual care of country cemeteries it is to be hoped that advantage will be taken of it to such an extent that country cemeteries which are well kept today will never be permitted to be forgotten, and that those interested in some of the neglected cemeteries will see in this a chance to overcome a long standing and deplorable condition.

BE MADE A VOTER

With one session of the board of selectmen and town clerk held for the purpose of making voters, there remains but one other opportunity for those who are eligible and whose names are to be found on the "to-be-made" list to qualify this fall. That will be next Saturday and it behooves those who really value the franchise to get it without further delay.

Many there may be who would like to be made voters but who cannot for various reasons. Only those, in fact, who put in their applications by the fixed date can get the chance to qualify at this time, but it should be remembered that even though the applications have been gotten in on time and the names appear on the "to-be-made" list the right to vote cannot be obtained without appearing before the registration board, answering the questions and taking the elector's oath.

There are several details which have to be complied with in being made a voter, but they are easily complied with and should not be neglected. What is worth having is worth getting and all that is now required of those who have signified their desire to become voters is to spend the necessary few minutes in answering a few questions, giving proof of the ability to read and taking the oath.

Those who are made voters at this time can participate in the town election next month and of course in any subsequent elections. Interest in good government, town, city, state or national should stimulate a strong desire to have a voice in supporting it. It is through the participation of large numbers that public sentiment in the best expressed.

There is a duty resting upon each and everyone to become a voter and thereafter to use the franchise whenever opportunity is offered. Many there are who would give most anything if they could become a voter, and many are the occasions when non voters have expressed the wish to be one. Those on the to-be-made list should not fail to make the most of the one chance which is offered them to become voters this year. Saturday the 26th is the last day.

CONSIDERING THE DEBT

This week the French debt commission will arrive in this country and as the result it is expected that there will be an adjustment of the French debt to the United States. It is readily appreciated that this is a matter which ought not to be kept hanging fire. There is no question concerning the existence of the debt. It was created with the understanding that it would be paid and now while neither interest nor principal has been refunded it is only proper that there should be an agreement reached as to the amount and the terms under which payments will be made.

In dealing with other countries there has been consideration for their capacity to pay. It is not to be supposed that the French debt will be dealt with in any different manner. When the settlement was made with the British that was the basis. A similar basis may exist for all the others insofar as it is applicable, but all the others may or may not be in the same position when it comes to making payments. In dealing with Belgium it was found that there were special reasons why that country should not be called upon to meet certain interest charges. When it comes to France it may be that it can be shown to the satisfaction of the American debt commission that France is not able to make such payments as had been considered possible.

It is a case, however, of putting the cards face up on the table. Finance Minister Caillaux is coming here as the head of the French commission confident that he will be able to get terms that will be favorable to France. President Coolidge takes the position that this country is not standing as a Shylock, and it has been intimated from England that that country will not be disposed to ask for changes in its terms if other than those terms are extended to France. The matter is, of course, one that calls for adjustment in the same way that any other business affair would be settled. That is what is to be expected from the forthcoming deliberations.

SPEED

Speed, speed and more speed. It is a goal for which someone is always striving and while all do not succeed there are those who do whether it is driving horses, sailing ships, racing automobiles or flying airplanes.

There were the days when a mile a minute was considered fast. It is no longer so. A mile a minute is only lumbering along compared with 200 miles an hour and yet the speed of over 200 miles an hour, or five miles a minute, has been made by Lieutenant Williams of the navy. Of course there may be something rotten in the naval air service, as Colonel Mitchell would have us believe, but the establishment of a new speed mark doesn't disclose it.

At such a speed the flight to the Hawaiian islands could be made in less than seven hours and the crossing of the Atlantic would be negotiated in from eight to nine hours. Ten hours would carry an aviator across this continent easily. But it is to be remembered that flight at that speed is not as yet maintained for any great length of time. Lieutenant Williams didn't make 300 miles at that rate, nor 100. It was for only about a half a mile that he attained that rate, but it shows that inasmuch as it has been done it can be expected to be repeated, and a new mark stands as the consequence. It makes us pause and wonder, once more, just where and when the limit will be reached.

TIPPING

While experiences have caused many a person to declare that he would never resort to tipping again, it is apparent that there are those who depend more or less upon tips who believe that they have some actual claim upon the public and that they are justified in forcibly or otherwise resenting cases where they fail to get a tip, or one that is considered sufficiently large. Such at least was the attitude displayed by a New York taxi driver who received a ten cent tip from a patron taking a 20 cent ride and threw the pennies of the change into the face of the fare.

The driver landed in court where he belonged and spent three days behind bars before his case was disposed. He drew a suspended sentence, also a lecture from the court in which the judge took three quarters of an hour to impress upon him and other taxi drivers that "There is nothing in the law to compel a man to give a tip. A tip is only a gratuity and given for extra service."

The tip is an abomination. It is too often a hold-up game, and such was the light in which the New York taxi driver regarded it.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"Dry Law Facing Big Test" says headline. It has been one thing after another ever since it was adopted.

In the south there were prayers for rain and rain came. The local reservoirs are far below high water mark.

The man on the corner says: The man with the horsewhips doesn't occupy as conspicuous a place at the fairs as formerly.

Those state prison inmates who used sling shots in an effort to escape will probably be provided a nice chicken dinner as a punishment.

Even if Chicago is right about the murders in that city being the slaying of criminals by criminals, what a lot of undesirables that city has!

There is a crying need for the discovery of a method of canning superfluous heat for use during the months when coal consumption is the greatest.

Just because General Butler admits his failure in Philadelphia doesn't mean that he hasn't made a determined and conscientious effort. He was not given the necessary cooperation and encountered obstacles faster than he could remove them.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

The pan in which you bake a sponge cake should be greased and then dusted generously with flour.

One should keep a pair of kitchen scissors for cutting raisins and such, lettuce, parsley, etc.

Have a brush especially for scrubbing both pastry boards and tables. Wash and wipe dry and be careful not to allow dough to accumulate in the cracks.

If the dress is elaborate, it is almost sure to be coupled with a long, plain coat, but if the dress is a straight tube, the coat may be as elaborate as you please.

Nothing could be nicer for the table in the children's room than a cloth of violet felt that has delightful figures of gayly colored felt appliqued upon its smooth surface.

Remember that your kitchen is your workshop and your utensils are your tools. A good workman is known by the neatness of his shop and the good condition of his tools.

Brooms and all sweeping brushes should be hung up when not in use. If left standing on the bristles these become bent and will not do their work properly.

Always after making a batch of doughnuts, pour off the fat from the frying kettle into pail or jar. Throw out the settlings and wash and dry the kettle thoroughly. Never leave the fat in the kettle from one frying to another.

When the bristles of the carpet-sweeper become soft from use put a little common baking soda in some hot water, take the brush from the sweeper, dip it up and down in this solution and let dry in the sun.

Pieces of old flannel tacked together and then bound round make nice holders for lifting pies and tins out of the oven. Wool being a nonconductor of heat offers less chance of burning one's fingers.

For dusting furniture, particularly if it is at all elaborate in design, there is nothing better than an ordinary paint brush. The bristles cannot scratch the surface and they remove the dust from the crannies and corners better than a dust cloth possibly can do.

FLOOR COVERINGS

Rugs or carpets having a light-colored ground may be cleaned by mixing cornstarch with one-sixth its bulk of prepared cleaning chalk. Sprinkle this mixture on the rug and allow it to remain several hours. Brush out with stiff whiskbroom, hang in sun and beat gently on the reverse side. This is recommended for all silky rugs as it does not injure their nap.

To clean matting, freshen by wiping with cloth wrung out of hot water to which one pint of salt is added for every pail of water. A thin coat of varnish applied to matting makes it more durable.

All grass or rush rugs may be recolored by painting their pattern with hot permanent dyes, using a rubby brush and working rapidly but carefully.

KEEP CLEAN LONGER

Wipe off the insides of the windows each time the room is cleaned and you will be surprised how long your windows will keep clean and shining. After all, more dust accumulates on the outside of windows.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Olive oil, almond oil, and castor oil are three more simple and inexpensive beauty aids which possess wonderful properties. They are freely used in the manufacture of all sorts of face creams and hair oils, yet not many women think of utilizing them, as it were, unadorned.

Dissolve the mustard for a foot bath first in cold water. Otherwise the mustard is inclined to adhere to the skin and blister. Two tablespoons of mustard in a cup of cold water is about right for the average-sized foot bath.

Women with dark skins would do better to use almond oil rather than olive. If the face is at all wrinkled or hollow, or the muscles sag, a good plan is to spread it lightly with oil, and then to tap it firmly but gently with the finger tips, especially under the eyes, across the forehead, and between the eyebrows and about the nose and the corners of the mouth. This should be done until the whole of the face glows. Thus the tiny muscles beneath the skin will be stimulated and strengthened, and the flesh will be nourished and fill out.

SAVE YOUR FEET

Take an old inner tube, cut into strips one and a half inches wide and weave into a rug to stand on while in the kitchen. It rests the feet because of the softness and the spring of the rubber. Fasten the ends with brads. Rivets or even use rubber glue or puncture mender. You may use the felt rug weave, but the different braiding can be used and put together with heavy cord. When dirty they can be cleaned by turning the hose on them and left out doors to dry. — Delineator.

SAVE WORK IN REMOVING CORN-SILK

A farm woman who was preparing dinner for a harvest crew had a quick and successful way of removing the silk from ears of corn. She used a whisk broom. First she removed the husks, then brushed the ears toward the stem end, and all the silk was removed with but a minimum amount of work.

CARRYING A CAKE

If an iced cake must be wrapped and carried, stick a few toothpicks into the icing and adjust the paper carefully over these small stilts. They will keep the paper from touching the icing and there will be no trouble about the icing sticking to the paper when it is removed.

A DECORATIVE SUGGESTION

A small fern in a glass, silver or pottery bowl is one of the best centerpieces for a dining room table for everyday use. It is coollooking and restful to the eye and looks just as well between meals, besides being economical.

AN ATTRACTIVE GARNISH

Try shaping cream cheese into tiny pears. Roll in paprika and insert a whole clove in the top for a stem. They look awfully pretty on the salad plate.

PATCHWORK NIGHTGOWN

A white crepe de chine nightgown is piped with brilliant green and has a patchwork flower appliqued upon the side. The flower is worked out in green, black and gray silk.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Silver fringe completely covers a graceful evening gown of white crepe.

An excellent choice for a gift for a man consists of a set of flatpiggin cases for soft collars, handkerchiefs and necktie.

An evening wrap of gold satin that has a design painted upon the satin is modeled upon the lines of a kimono. The effect is extremely rich.

Velvet is used as trimming bands for a good many autumn frocks. One trick is to trim simple frocks of jersey cloth with velvet in the same shade.

Fit for a princess is an evening coat of cloth of silver with a tinge of pink in its gleaming surface. The coat is collared and cuffed with gray fox and is lined with an exquisite shade of pink velvet.

Velvet is used in combination with other fabrics for new frocks. There are velvet skirts with tunic blouses of georgette. There are velvet bodices with skirts of sheerest fabric.

Shades of red that go by the names of wine and burgundy are used in many satin frocks for early autumn. They are particularly suitable, these soft reds for autumn—warm and harmonious with the season of changing leaf colors.

The newest knitted jackets to wear with pleated skirts have a rounded, cut-away front, and are bound with silk braid. If one wishes one may wear a smart vest to complete the tailored effect.

Extremely new and becoming are coat dresses for early fall made with small capes over each sleeve. The front and back of the dresses keep to a straight line silhouette.

A frock for early fall wear is made of black satin and has a collar and vestee of flesh-colored chiffon. Several other gowns in the same window carried out the same delightful color scheme.

HANDKERCHIEFS

The colored and ornate handkerchief is still much in demand. Flower handkerchiefs with scalloped, irregular edges, in soft shades of rose or yellow, really look almost like rosebuds when they are crumpled in the hand. Figured foulard handkerchiefs are carried, too. Some women make a point of always carrying a handkerchief of the same color. And some women carry always a handkerchief of the same design, but of different colors to match varying frocks. Such handkerchiefs are sold in half dozen or dozens of assorted colors. They are made with initialed or embroidered corners, with edges of lace, scallops, picot or hemstitching.

PRETTY LINGERIE

New lingerie that is lovely enough for any trousseau is made of a rather deep shade of pink crepe dechine. The neck is composed of alternate rows of narrow real valenciennes with exquisite rows of hand embroidery in the same shade as the silk.

KRIMMER AS TRIMMING

The vogue of shades of blue of great intensity calls attention to the use of gray furs for trimming. Gray krimmer appears in many of the most attractive coats fashioned of the new soft woolens with a velvety surface.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Before washing your sweater sew the buttonholes shut. This will keep them from stretching.

Perspiration stains may be removed from white clothes by dampening the articles with lemon juice and salt before the clothes are put into soap and water.

After using a bowl of starch do not throw away what is left. Put the basin on one side and when the starch has dropped to the bottom pour off the water. Place the basin in the oven for five minutes. The starch will be found in hard cakes and can be put away ready for use another day.

Save the wax-coated boxes in which butter is packed for polishers on ironing day. The soiled irons are made clean and smooth in no time and one always has a new box each week.

WASHING OVERALLS

Almost as great a laundry problem as the men's work overalls are the children's play overalls. It is only a question of size, the dirt being ground into one about as badly as the other.

Soak the overalls in clear water. Wring them out so that they will not be dripping wet. Take a bar of soap and rub each spot well with the bar. Then roll up the garment quite tightly and put back into the tub of clear water. Let it stand for at least an hour to give the soap and water a chance to loosen the dirt. Then wash according to the usual custom.

LATHER WILL REMOVE SPOTS FROM RUGS

Soiled spots on rugs having a short nap may be successfully removed by the application of a heavy lather made with a mild soap. As soon as the spot has been removed rinse the sponged portion of the rug with plain water to prevent any change in color. Washing may be done with a sponge or a small brush.

Grease in which dirt has settled forms one of the most common spots found on rugs. It may be removed by anoneing or by the use of a cleaning fluid.

The usual method of removing ink spots from carpets or rugs is as follows: Apply some absorbment such as talcum powder or blotting paper to take up as much of the ink as possible. Then apply the cut surface of a lemon and squeeze the juice on while rubbing. Alternate the applications of lemon juice with sponging with a damp cloth. After the spot has been removed rub with a clean dry cloth and brush up the nap.

DO IT YOURSELF

To drive a screw through soft wood take a nail slightly smaller in diameter than the screw and drive it through the first thickness. Then remove the nail with a hammer, put a bit of soap on the end of the screw, insert the soap end of the nail hole and use your screw driver. The screw will enter and turn easily without splitting the wood, as it would have been apt to do if no hole had been made for it to follow. In driving a screw into hard wood use a small drill to make the hole, then soap the end of the screw and drive as directed.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Chicago now claims more than 500 women barbers.

Notre Dame church in Montreal, Can., bars women garbed in knickers.

The French colonies have only one woman physician—Mlle. Renee Lascade.

More than one-third of the federal employes in Washington are women.

Two-fifths of the women wage earners in this country are under 25 years of age.

Frau Katherine von Oheimb, one of the most active women in Germany today, threatens to found a woman's party to teach the male Germans chivalry.

Miss Julia S. Groo of Portland, Ore., who won the National Home Lighting essay contest, which netted her $25,000, already has received 400 proposals of marriage.

Miss Kate O'Flanigan recently appointed assistant secretary of the Western Union Telegraph Company, is the first woman to win an executive position with that company.

Mrs. John Dunville, wife of Lieutenant Colonel Dunville, the famous balloonist, will be one of the three British competitors in the Gordon Bennett ballon race to be held in Brussels this year.

FOR SCREEN DOORS

Have a stiff brush, dip it in gasoline, and go over the screens. It takes off the grease and dust, and makes them look like new.

BETTER ROSES

Pour the dishpan of suds from dishwashing at the foot of the rose bush every now and then. It will make it thrive.

RECIPES

Gooseberry Catchup: Gooseberries have a taste all their own and few fruits lend themselves to culinary combinations with such gratifying results. The piquant flavor of gooseberry sauce has always been a tasty addition to meats, but gooseberry catchup is even more enticing.

Place ripe gooseberries in a saucepan, add a little water and boil until soft. Then press the pulp through a colander and measure it. To each five cups of pulp add three pounds of sugar, one cup of vinegar and one tablespoon each of ground mace and cinnamon. Boil and stir until thick. Pour into jars or bottles and seal while hot.

Stuffed Tomatoes: Eight tomatoes, three-quarter cup minced chicken, one cup bread crumbs, one tablespoon chopped onion, one tablespoon chopped parsley, one egg, salt, pepper and other seasonings to taste. To prepare the stuffing melt one tablespoon of butter and slightly brown the minced onion in this. Combine other materials and stir into the hot butter. To prepare the tomatoes leave on the skins and cut a slice from the stem end, scooping out the inside of each. Before filling in the stuffing sprinkle each tomato with salt and pepper and allow the stuffing to come one-half inch above the tomato. Place each stuffed tomato on a round of bread and place in the oven 15 minutes or until brown. Serve with a brown gravy.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Evolution vs. Evolutionist

Mr. Editor: This writer welcomes the response "Pro Veritate," and so much the more because his letter shows a familiarity with the verbiage of science which must gratify him to understand the definitions of science, for the axioms of truth are always simple.

Now in common acceptance there are definitions of evolution which differ from the scientific and it is evident that our opponent is arguing from his own conception of evolution and not the scientific.

There are dozens of evolutions that lie within the region of proof and which demonstration has placed beyond possible doubt and these we gladly admit, but the evolution we are discussing has been best defined by scientists themselves as "an attempt to explain the present condition of the world in terms of simpler pre-existing conditions."

It is therefore plain that Pro-Veritate surrenders when he declares that "As to the beginning of things, science has, up to the present, given no explanation," nor does he think it ever will. We agree with him. In this statement he not only gives up his point, in the name of science, but also the hope of giving the answer we ask for.

For his satisfaction it is enough for him that evolution begins where we are at—so to speak, taking for granted all the past.

We submit this is not science nor is it evolution for evolution must evolve. It cannot begin with a ready-made universe.

This trenches on our theory, which deals with beginnings, "in the beginning God."

Given abundant material, attraction, gravitation and forces in motion with laws governing them, almost any theory in the manipulating of these could in time, produce a possible universe, and this is what the evolutionists are really giving us. What we want is an explanation in simpler terms than we have.

We object to the evolutionist's taking our all-ready-made system with its divinely appointed laws and potencies and by applying his Godless theories to natural causes and effects and then telling us that he is giving proofs.

We object to his taking the larvae of the moth and showing us the caterpillar, later the chrysalis and finally the butterfly and calling this his evolution product.

We ask him which is the most important, the larvae or the moth?

In the scale of creation, which is the lesser act, the product or that from which the product has been educed?

Wherein lies the simplying theory, or the explanation?

Our opponents' contention that worship is cowardice or the result of fear, fails at many points.

Without controversy, there is a place for fear in the highest manhood and the lack of fear is the bane of many and the cause of mishap and accident. Even in a letter to the editor there is the fear to trespass the limit of space, the fear that the linotyper may by a misplaced vowel wreck a whole sentence, the fear of a discourtesy to an opponent through a word or a mistaken statement—all these fears are manly virtues, and praiseworthy, and how much more the fear to grieve the Holy Spirit. Solomon said the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom.

Some of the greatest heroes have confessed to the experience of fear, even in their victories.

Is it better to look forward to the future for the fulfillment of a better day, and a better race of men through the processes of natural generation than through a new birth, in our own being today, and the anticipation of a personal share in its enjoyment hereafter? Does it not present a stronger incentive, to look for some such a fulfilment than to dream of a world Utopian, to which we will never come and in which we can never enjoy citizenship? Faith in which of these beckons the greater weakness of both head and heart?

Does the ordinary procession of the human equinoxes indicate our approach to any such a celestial, or terrestrial perfection? Isn't this a time when even the stoutest hearts are trembling for the present civilization and the fear that it may not much longer endure?

If we have to wait for a recreation through the trifling progression of what we see accomplished in the ranks of those we call evolutionists, we will need a larger faith than we yet have in hand, in any theory.

Stories That Recall Others

Modern Love.

A certain little first grade girl is a devoted admirer of an attractive boy in one of the upper grades, but it seems he is hardly aware of the small girl's existence or of her admiration. Recently she came home much elated.

"Mother, mother, Fred spoke to me! He said," and the high treble lowered to rough, harsh tones, evidently imitating those of the admiring one, "Get out of my way or I'll skate over you."

His Father's Son.

An old and respected resident, who likes the company of younger people and is widely known because of his nearsightedness and lack of memory, has a son.

One morning while sauntering home from a walk he passed the son hurrying off down the street to meet some friends.

"Good morning, young man," said the nearsighted one, "and how is your father this morning?"

From Small Beginnings

Schubert, the Cook's Son the Great Musician

Elizabeth Fitz, ex-cook and her husband, Franz, whose father had been a peasant, wondered what was to become of their little son, Franz Schubert. The boy was none too strong, and nine other children had died. At evening the father took his violin and put his wondering into music. The boy stopped his play to listen, and the sound of the violin started him on the road to fame.

When little Franz had learned to play, one of his boy friends, an apprentice, took him where pianos were sold. Through that small opening Franz Schubert entered the musical work. Later, when his mother, the cook, died, Schubert wrote a wonderful musical composition in her memory, and on the anniversary of his father's christening he wrote another in his honor that will live forever.

Day after day, as a young man, Schubert studied music and wrote music. His work was so good that it won friends who helped him. He found time to write much music, to work tirelessly, and he made many friends, but acquired little money.

Publishers refused his work. Some of his best songs were failures. Some were prohibited by the censor. But Schubert "kept at it." Determined to succeed, and he made his music better. He sold one piece for $100 and another for $50.

Composition after composition came from his heart, for he loved music and not money. The music went out into the world and found admirers, but too late. Weakened by poverty, hard work and the incessant struggle with adversity, Franz Schubert died at 32, leaving behind him symphonies, operas, songs, chamber music, masses all full of the sweetness and charm of youth, rich and altogether delightful, melodious, rhymical, romantic, his music is youth itself. His name belongs with the names of the great.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Samuel Rea, who reaches the age of 70 years today, is president of the Pennsylvania Railroad and one of the notable railroad pioneers of America. Under the rules of the great railroad system of which he is executive head Mr. Rea will retire from the service at the end of this month, after 54 years spent in active railroad work. He entered the service of the Pennsylvania when he was only 15 years old. He spent his early years as an engineer and among his notable achievements along this line were the construction of the New York tunnel extension and station of the Pennsylvania Railroad and the New Connecting Railroad, including the great Hell Gate Bridge. He was chosen a vice president of the Pennsylvania in 1912 and became president of the system the following year.

Paradoxical as it sounds, a blind man may be seen and yet be out of sight.

Ol' Mistah Buzzard's Secret

Trust only those who are asleep
With secrets which you fain would keep.

—Old Mother Nature.

Ol' Mistah Buzzard's secret began when he first came up from the Sunny South in the spring. Ol' Mistah Buzzard brought some one with him. Yes, sir, Ol' Mistah Buzzard brought some one with him. No one knew it at the time because no one happened to see him when he arrived in the Green Forest at his favorite tall, dead tree. The fact that he had brought some one with him was the beginning of his secret. Of course, part of his secret wasn't kept very long. Peter Rabbit never will forget his surprise when he discovered the first part of this secret.

It happened that that spring morning Peter had failed to go home to the dear Old Briar-patch. So he had made himself comfortable over in the Green Forest and planned to spend the day there near the tall dead tree which Ol' Mistah Buzzard uses as his favorite perch. Peter, having been out all night, was sleepy, and he was soon dozing. He was hidden under some tall ferns. He felt quite safe there. Otherwise he wouldn't have been so careless as to doze. From time to time he would awaken just enough to open his eyes and peep out through the ferns.

From where he sat he could look right up to the very top of the tall dead tree, which was known as Ol' Mistah Buzzard's tree. It had only six or three stubs of old branches. When Peter awoke after his first nap and peened out, no one was on that tree of Ol' Mistah Buzzard's. But the second time he awoke and peeped out, there on his favorite perch sat Ol' Mistah Buzzard himself. He had arrived from his winter in the Sunny South while Peter was napping. Peter was tempted to run right over to the foot of that tree and tell Ol' Mistah Buzzard how glad he was to see him. But Peter was still very, very sleepy. He knew Ol' Mistah Buzzard's habits so well that he was sure Ol' Mistah Buzzard would spend a good part of the day on that perch. Ol' Mistah Buzzard would certainly want a rest after his long journey. "I'll finish my nap. Afterward I'll go pay my respects to Ol' Mr. Buzzard. He ought to have a lot of news about the folks down in the Sunny South," said Peter to himself. So Peter closed his eyes and dozed off again. When he opened them the next time there sat Ol' Mistah Buzzard just where he had expected to see him. Peter was still sleepy. He tipped back his head to yawn. In doing this he looked straight up in the blue, blue sky. There sailing round and round in circles was some one Peter would have said certainly was Ol' Mistah Buzzard if he hadn't known that Ol' Mistah Buzzard was sitting on that tree. Hastily Peter looked back at that tree. There sat Ol' Mistah Buzzard. There wasn't any doubt about it. Again he tipped his head back and looked up in the blue, blue sky. Then he blinked. But all the blinking in the world wouldn't do away with that Buzzard sailing round and round high up in the blue, blue sky.

"Now, how can Ol' Mistah Buzzard be sitting in that tree and still be flying round and round high up in the blue, blue, sky at the same time?" muttered Peter, and by this time he was very much awake. Just as he was making ready to hop over to the foot of the tree where Ol' Mistah Buzzard was sitting, he once more glanced up in the sky. That Buzzard up there was coming down. So Peter waited. In a few moments there were two Buzzards on that tree instead of one.

Peter hopped out from his hiding place and over to the foot of the Buzzard tree. "Good mo'ning, Peter," said Ol' Mistah Buzzard, "ah want yo' to meet Ol' Mrs. Buzzard. Ah done bring her up from the Sunny South to meet mah friends up no'th. Mah dear, meet Peter Rabbit."

Ol' Mrs. Buzzard who looked almost exactly like Ol' Mr. Buzzard looked down at Peter and gravely bobbed her head. Peter gravely bobbed in return. So it was that he became acquainted with the beginning of Ol' Mistah Buzzard's secret. What that secret really was I'll tell you later.

Mountains of Stairs

Mountain-climbing is a strenuous, outdoor sport—and fine exercise at the right time and place.

But how many people—especially women—climb mountains day after day, right in their own homes, and are all fagged out at night?

Mountains of stairs! Up and down, up and down, ten, twenty times a day. Add the journeys together, and see how high a mountain they make.

An extention telephone, conveniently located, will eliminate a lot of this wearisome stair climbing. You won't need to run up or down stairs every time the telephone rings. With a telephone on each floor, you can make or answer a call from wherever you happen to be. You will have more time and energy for other domestic pursuits, and at night won't be too tired to plan for an evening's enjoyment.

An extension telephone is worth a great deal—but it costs less than 2 cents a day, plus a moderate connection charge. Call our local Business Office today, and tell them that you want to take advantage of this inexpensive household convenience.

LITTLE INTEREST SHOWN BY POTENTIAL VOTERS

Remarkably little interest was shown in the town Saturday by those who are eligible to be made voters. The selectmen, town clerk and registrars were in session at the town hall from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. for the purpose of making voters from the to-be-made list but only 85 applied to be made. As the total on the to-be-made list is 665 this indicates a great slackness on the part of those who need to take the next step in order that they may be qualified voters for the town election in October.

The board has only one more day to sit on which to make voters, which is next Saturday, at the same hours as have already been mentioned. If all of the remaining 580 apply then to be made it promises to be one of the busiest days the board has ever seen.

RADIO SHORT CIRCUIT SETS FIRE TO CURTAINS

Sparks from a short circuit on a radio set caused a small fire at the home of Dr. Robert R. Agnew, 296 Washington street, Saturday afternoon at 12:24 o'clock. The department responded to a telephone call and the blaze was quickly extinguished. It was found that the wires had been disconnected from the radio as the radio was to have been taken away for some repairs. The bare ends of the wires came together, causing sparks which set fire to window curtains in the room. The fire was found by William Agnew, son of the doctor, and he had the fire practically out when the firemen arrived.

The radio and radio table were somewhat damaged as were the curtains nearby.

CIGARETTE SMOKER IN BED STARTS FIRE

At 12:43 o'clock Sunday afternoon the fire department was called out by telephone for a small fire at the Carboni rooming house in the Brooklyn Outfitters building, 266-270 Main street. A man smoking in bed was responsible for the blaze. A spark from his cigarette set the bed clothing on fire with the result that the bed and mattress were practically destroyed.

Three gallons of chemical were used on the fire. Squad A and Engine No. 1 responded to the call.

NO EDUCATION WITHOUT GOD SAYS PRIEST AT CORNERSTONE BLESSING

With impressive religious ceremonies on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock before a throng of over 4,000, Rt. Rev. Bishop John J. Nilan of Hartford blessed the cornerstone of the handsome new St. Joseph's parochial school building, erected on a lot adjoining the church on Cliff street.

The ceremonies at the school building, which had been arranged by the pastor, Rev. S. A. Iciek, were preceded by a parade which started from Pulaski hall on North Main street at 3 o'clock and moved over the line of march that had been laid out until it arrived at Cliff street, where the line halted to await the arrival of Bishop Nilan, who joined the line with the priests attending him, and proceeded to the church. The long line of marchers was made up of the various societies and organizations of the parish, carrying large American flags and the standards of their organizations. Members of the Knights of Columbus and visitors from New London, Jewett City and Willimantic, also participated in the parade.

The audience, which was massed in the church yard and around the school building at all available points, enjoyed a number of concert numbers by Swahn's band while Bishop Nilan and the attendant priests, of whom there were, more than forty from all parts of the state, were gathering in the church. In a section of special seats arranged upon a terrace by the side of the church were seated Mayor Milo R. Waters, members of the common council and other invited guests, while every point on the church property held its quota of reverent and interested parishioners and visitors. On the partially completed building American flags were hung as decorations for the day and a decorated speaker's stand was erected at a convenient spot.

For the ceremony of blessing the cornerstone, Bishop Nilan in his robes of office proceeded from the church, preceded by the choir boys and attended by the visiting priests, after whom walked a long line of little girls in white dresses with big yellow and lavender bows on their hair.

Bishop Nilan was assisted in blessing the cornerstone by Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May of St. Patrick's church, this city, and by Rev. John J. Ambot, a former pastor of St. Joseph's church. The priestly procession circled the school building, after the cornerstone had first been blessed, and into it had been placed a hermetically sealed steel box containing much that would be of historical value. The contents of the box included the list of contributors to the school fund, a statement of its cost, copies of The Norwich Bulletin, Record, Catholic Transcript, and Polish newspapers, documents showing the names of present national, state and local officers, the name of the pope and heads of the church, and a statement that school had been erected by the contributions of people who had come to this country from Europe who had made their contributions for the erection of this school in order that their children might enjoy the advantages of education and become creditable citizens of this country. When the box had been placed in the cornerstone the hole that had been left was closed up, Street Commissioner John C. Donovan laying the first brick that went into the opening.

Sermons in Polish and English.

A sermon in Polish by Rev. Joseph M. Janowski of New Haven and by Rev. W. A. Keefe of St. Mary's Memorial church, who spoke from the special platform and were easily heard by the big crowd, held the closest attention of their hearers.

Father Keefe stressed the importance of religion as a basis for the right kind of American citizenship, declaring that the education that leaves God out of account is a danger to American institutions.

In his sermon Father Keefe said: Not many weeks ago educational authorities of our great state sent a serious questionaire to several hundred of the most representative leaders of the various departments of our political, mercantile and industrial life asking what they considered most necessary in the proper training of our American youth for the maintenance and promotion of the progress and prosperity and happiness and glory of this freest and best republic in the world—the United States of America.

Almost unanimously these wise, experienced leaders, whose council and advice merit our most respectful attention and thoughtful consideration, urged that if the schools of America are to do their full duty to the children whom they train and to the great nation whose future citizens and defenders they are developing they must cultivate the hearts as well as the heads, the characters as well as the intellects, the virtue and morality as well as the mind and hand, of the rising generations of future American citizens.

During the past few months the learned addresses delivered by our most eminent and thoughtful leaders at school and college commencements invariably reminded the graduating classes that education without morality, culture without virtue, intelligence and skill without honesty and purity and justice and charity were more dangerous than beneficial to the community and the nation. The serious pronouncements of countless judges of our courts, the thoughtful resolutions of our great national educational and religious conventions, Protestant as well as Catholic, during the past five years call attention to the alarming increase of crime among boys and girls of 16-18-20 years of age, and implore the schools of the land to protect us from the waves of vice and crime by stronger and most practical courses in virtue and morality.

The learned and thoughtful discourses of President Calvin Coolidge and many of his most illustrious predecessors and able advisers have frequently urged that the future welfare of our nation depended more on the virtue and morality of our citizens than advancement of scientific knowledge and the increase of the wealth and power of our great country.

The experience of all ages proves positively that religion is the only solid foundation upon which the virtue and morality of men and nations can be built. No educational system that banishes God Almighty and God's laws and Christ's teachings and Christ's ideals from the school room can hope to promote respect for the laws and liberties of the nation or the rights and dignities of the citizen.

The only son of the eternal God who came on earth as the divine teacher of men and nations not only urged us to consider the "lilies of the field how they grow," but He further commanded that we must seek first the Kingdom of Heaven. His reminder "what doth it profit a man to gain the whole world and suffer the loss of his own soul," must forever inspire the practical educational systems of the world. On the cornerstone of all Christian law he wrote: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God above all things and thy neighbor as thyself."

If some wealthy philanthropist were to announce tomorrow morning a gift of several hundred thousand dollars to the city of Norwich for the training of 1,000 children of our community along the lines urged by leading business men, judges and educators and statesmen of the nation what well merited chorus of praise would ring from every home and journal and stage and pulpit of the land.

When Bishop Nilan and Father Iciek and the pious sisters and generous people of this parish open St. Joseph new parish school here they present such a gift to our beautiful city.

Let us try to estimate what this new St. Joseph's school means to Norwich—

In the first place it is a gift without a single penny of burden on our tax payers of the largest and best equipped school, costing almost $150,000, providing first class educational equipment for the religious, moral, and intellectual education of about 1,000 boys and girls. Following all the best requirements of state and municipal boards of education, 12 or twenty highly trained Sisters without a single cent of salary will devote all their talents here to the teaching of reading, writing, arithmetic, history, geography and other school studies.

Every hour of every day spent by 1,000 children here will be filled with teaching and inspiration to render to God the things that are God's and to our country the things that are our country's. The Star Spangled Banner as the standard of our nation and the emblem of our civil liberties will hold an honored place in every room along side the Cross of the Redeemer of mankind, the standard of our eternal liberty.

Here the names and civic ideals of "The Father of Our Country" and the builders and defenders of our Republic will continually inspire patriotic devotion. Here too the law and love of our Heavenly Father will be continually taught by word and example.

Here the heroism of the great warriors of our nation will be taught, inspire patriotic sacrifice. Here too the life and words and deeds and ideals of the "Prince of Peace" will be taught continually to inspire future citizens to love one another, to dispel hatred among citizens and to promote justice and charity as an antidote to the dangers of anarchy and lawlessness that threaten the life of our nation. Here future fathers and fathers of our city will be trained to become intellectual guides of families. Here the Holy Childhood of the infant Jesus and the piety and purity and devotion of Mary and Joseph will teach lessons of obedience, respect for parents, the dignity of womanhood and the glory of holy purity, which must forever direct the lives of the men and women of America if the morals and families and institutions of our country are to be protected against the hideous evils of immorality, race suicide and divorce which threaten the very foundations of American glory today.

While we join Bishop Nilan in sincere prayers that God may bless this great work and while we congratulate and thank in the name of Norwich the pastor and Sisters and good people who make possible this new St. Joseph's school, should we not also pray that every boy and girl who studies here may become exemplars of piety and patriotism, culture and virtue, intelligence and morality and an influence to lead all our fellow citizens in the great life work of rendering to God the things that are God's and to America the loyalty and fidelity that is America's.

Band Concert.

Applause greeted the concluding words of the popular pastor of the parish that adjoins St. Joseph's and Father Iciek addressed the assemblage in Polish and in English, announcing that the formal programme was closed but he invited everybody to repair to the park on the property at the rear of the church, there to enjoy the excellent concert that was rendered by Swahn's band. A delicious chicken dinner was served for all the guests.

In the evening at 8 o'clock, there was vespers with sermon at the church, the preacher being Rev. Anthony Wojcieszezuk of Meriden. Both Polish preachers of the day were, like Father Iciek, chaplains in the Polish army during the World war.

Father Iciek expressed his gratitude Sunday evening to all who had so freely given of their services in carrying the arrangements for the ceremonies through so successfully.

He announced also that he expected before long to start a campaign to raise funds for the equipment of the basement of the church with bowling alleys and other recreational activities, for a club room for ladies and night class rooms for citizenship training. He said that it was his intention to make this a community center for all, irrespective of creed or nationality, rendering a community service in every way possible.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE WITH FAREWELL PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. George Fraser entertained informally Thursday evening, several friends at their home on Lafayette street, in honor of Mrs. Belle Simpson, a niece of Mrs. Fraser, who has been her guest for three weeks, also Miss Cecil Stevens, of Williams street, who is leaving Norwich to take up a special course in music, at Ithaca Conservatory of Music. For Mrs. Simpson the affair was in the form of a surprise birthday party, while for Miss Stevens it was a farewell.

During the evening three tables of whist were in play, first prizes being awarded Mrs. Simpson and George Durr. The consolation awards went to Mrs. Herbert Dow and William J. Wilson, of Canada, who was a guest at the Fraser home.

Miss Stevens delightfully entertained with vocal and instrumental selections during the evening, while the other guests were engaged at cards. Mrs. Fraser assisted by Miss Stevens later served ice-cream and cake. In recognition of her birthday, Mrs. Simpson received several pretty gifts.

Saturday morning Mr. Wilson who is a brother of Mrs. Fraser, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Simpson left Norwich after three weeks visit for their respective homes in Canada. Mr. Wilson is from Merritton and Mrs. Simpson is from St. Catherines.

KU KLUX EXPLOSION HAD CITY WONDERING

Residents of Norwich were startled a few minutes before midnight Saturday by a loud explosion that could be heard all over the city. Sunday there were various rumors of an earthquake, an explosion at the local gas house, the exploding of a huge still, etc. It developed that the real cause of the startling blast was a blast of dynamite exploded at a gathering of the Ku Klux Klan at the G. Warren Davis farm in Preston. The dynamite was set off just previous to the kindling of a huge flaming cross, marking the conclusion of the Klan meeting.

NORWICH CYCLIST KILLED IN ACCIDENT

SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 20—Driving around the Sturbridge race track at high speed, Alfred L. Morrell of Norwich, Conn., exhibition motorcycle driver was thrown from his machine following the breakdown of the front fork on the motorcycle tonight, and died a few hours later in a Worcester hospital. His skull was fractured.

According to eye witnesses who watched the race around the track, Morrell was testing his machine preparatory to leaving the fair grounds, where he had been doing exhibition riding at the Sturbridge fair. As he flew around the track he was suddenly seen to swerve and run into the fence lining. He was tossed many feet away, where he was picked up unconscious.

Morrell who was married and lived at 38 School street, was about 25 years old. He formerly was employed here as a mechanic by James P. Donovan and had done motorcycle riding in a motordroms in a carnival. At one time he had been the special delivery clerk from the Norwich post office.

WILL CELEBRATE THEIR 50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Caldwell, former residents of this city, are to observe their 50th wedding anniversary Tuesday at their home, 63 Manitoba street, Springfield, Mass. During their residence of about two years in this city, Mr. Caldwell was employed with the undertaking firm of Henry Allen & Sons.

For the wedding anniversary no invitations have been issued, but Mr. and Mrs. Cadwell will be glad to meet their friends Tuesday afternoon from 3 to 5 and in the evening from 8 to 10.

Mr. and Mrs. Cadwell were married September 22, 1875, at Southington, Ct., at a double wedding, when Mr. Cadwell's sister, Miss Mary L. Cadwell, became the bride of David V. Jones. Mrs. Cadwell's name before her marriage was Miss Eloise E. Williams. The double ceremony was performed by Rev. Abel P. Buell at the Baptist church at Southington. Mr. Jones died a number of years ago, but Mrs. Jones who now lives at Southington, will be present at the golden wedding celebration Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Cadwell came to Springfield in 1900 from Norwich, where they had lived for about two years, residing at Southington previous to that time. They have two children, Mrs. H. F. Holcomb of 51 Leyfred terrace and Paul S. W. Cadwell of Manitoba street, both of Springfield. They also have two grandchildren, Mildred W. Holcomb and Dorothy Eloise Cadwell. The couple are active members of the First Baptist church. Mr. Cadwell being a deacon of the church, Mrs. Cadwell is a member of the Women's guild, the Woman's society and the King's Daughters. Mr. Cadwell is a member of the men's brotherhood of the church, the Royal Arcanum and American Men. Mr. Cadwell has always been interested in school affairs and when he lived at Southington, took an active part in the politics there, where he served as assessor. He has been in the undertaking business for more than 40 years, both for himself and for others. He is at present connected with the E. A. Byron funeral home.

It is hoped that Mrs. Cadwell's father, Richard L. Williams, Sr., 92, who lives with Mrs. Cadwell's half brother, R. L. Williams, Jr., at Dover, N. H., will be present. Out-of-town guests will include Mrs. Thomas Medling, Mrs. Cadwell's aunt, Mrs. Emma Williams of Hartford, Mrs. Mary L. Jones of Southington, Mr. Cadwell's sister, and a number of relatives and friends from New York city, Plainfield, Southington and Hartford.

74TH SEMI-ANNUAL PREDICTION OF THE CLOUD DIGGER

PACKERVILLE, Conn., Sept. 19.—This is the 74th semi-annual prediction of the Cloud Digger. He accompanies it with the following observations: I believe that those who have followed my predictions up year by year must agree that my rules are good ones to follow.

I am the only one among all long distance weather predictors that sticks right to the same rules of weather predicting year after year, and while exact dates of great disturbances are very hard to predict, more than a thousand exact dates have been given by me in the past 37 years.

There has been much criticism this summer about my predicting dry weather. My exact words were: "The drying up period will arrive in August and continue well into October," and I have not changed my mind. Every month in the year 1925 has been short of water with the single exception of July. But enough of that.

Fall begins late this year, Sept. 23, but winter on the other hand will be here early. I do not look for much stormy weather after the storm now near us, until late in November, but you'll find more cold days in November this year than in the same month for quarter of a century.

One big storm, probably snow, will be here late in November and in spite of the many fair warm days in December, there is to be some bad weather also.

I predict December weather as follows: 1st to 5th, unsettled period; 5th to 9th, mild period; 10th to 15th, very cold and clear; 16th to 21st, stormy period, probably one good snow storm; 22nd to 27th, cold and stormy, especially high winds; the last four days of December, unsettled weather with a warm wave the very last of the month running over into January.

After the 5th of January until February 1st, look for a stormy period, one storm hardly over before another forms and present indications point to the same condition all through February and well into March. While it is utterly impossible to tell even two days before a storm arrives whether it is to be snow or rain, all planetary conditions point to more snow than rain this coming winter.

The ice man and coal dealer will be in luck during mid-winter, one in securing a good crop of ice and the other in having good orders for coal and wood.

The middle of November this year, here in Connecticut, the earth will be in a position where many shooting stars or meteorites will be seen every clear night, and some of these displays should be worth looking for.

The earth's shakings are by no means over, but the West Coast, China, Japan and the Sandwich islands will be especially shaken instead of our own Eastern Coast. There is still a big shaking up due in this part of the world, most probably in Northern South America.

Exact dates of very large disturbances the coming six months are: November 15th to 20th, all over America; the last of November, all over the northern part of the United States; 16th to Christmas time, a very bad storm covering most of America.

High tides and wind with a terrible storm between January 7th and 10th and from then on to March 1st, one storm hardly ever before another forms.

March 1st to 4th, 1926 will present New England with one of the worst storms in many years. Spring will be late again, but when it gets here will be ready for all hands who till the soil to go ahead and do business.

SOLDIERS WILL PARADE FOR ITALIAN CELEBRATION

Headquarters Battery and Combat Train, 1st Battalion, 102nd F. A., C. N. G., Capt. H. F. Burdick have accepted an invitation to parade this (Monday) evening for the celebration of Italian independence day, which will be carried out under the auspices of the Dante cultural club. The soldiers are to meet at 7 o'clock at the state armory from where the parade will start at 7:15. The United Italian society will also have representatives in the line, carrying the American and the Italian flags, and there will be automobiles to convey the speakers.

The line of march will be to Franklin square, through Main street to Thames square and back to Union square where the speaking programme is to be held with a concert by the Baltic band, greetings from the city by Mayor Milo R. Waters and the addresses by Rev. Dr. Antonio Magnano of Colgate university and Rev. Valentine Panizzoli, pastor of the Italian Baptist mission.

In case of rain the exercises will be held at the community house on Church street.

WILL PRESENT PORTRAIT TO HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The presentation of a portrait of the late Frederick Bill, of Groton, to the New London County Historical society will be made at the society's annual meeting Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Shaw mansion, New London. The portrait is a gift from Mrs. Bill, on whose behalf it will be presented to the society by Judge Christopher L. Avery. It will be accepted for the society by the president, State Treasurer Ernest E. Rogers.

Another interesting event of the meeting will be the first public exhibition of photographs of Senora and Senorita Caspina, the wife and daughter of President Caspina, of Colombia; given to commemorate their visit to New London, Sept. 23, 1922.

Remarks will be made by Hon Abraham Martinez, director Colombian government bureau of information, New York city.

The meeting is a public one, open to everybody whether members or not.

Will Study Music in Boston

Miss Cecile Stevens of Williams street, accomplished pianist and vocalist left Saturday morning for Ithaca Conservatory of Music, where she is to take a course of study. Miss Stevens, a former pupil of Prof. Benjamin Knox, will be accompanied to New York state by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Stevens, who will make the trip by automobile.

Veteran of First County Fair

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Rathbun of West Main street, have had as their guest for a few days, Mr. Rathbun's uncle, George Cole of Ekonk. While in Norwich, Mr. Cole who is 80, attended the County Fair, in conversation with his relatives, Mr. Cole recalled that 71 years ago, he attended the first fair in Norwich, under the auspices of this association, being then a boy of nine.

Beautiful Flower Beds.

Objects of beauty that elicit many admiring comments from passing automobilists are the two circular flower beds on the lawns at the Norwich state hospital. Arranged with rows of coleus and salvia surrounding cannas in red and yellow in the center, the flowers are in their full glory now and make a most brilliant display.

Electrical Storm

About 12:15 o'clock this (Monday) morning a sharp electrical storm swept over Norwich from the west. The lightning was unusually vivid and the crashes of thunder heavy and the rainfall heavy for a time.

Opening Scout Activities.

The theatre party at the Palace theatre, this (Monday) evening will mark the opening of the many scout activities for the fall. At this time the scouts and officials of the Norwich council will have an opportunity to witness the screening of the Pony Riders.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

Miss Mary A. Aiken returns today (Monday) from a stay of several days in Pomfret.

Mrs. Hibbard R. Norman and family have returned home after spending the season at East Lyme.

Miss Natalie Connor, of Lincoln avenue has left to enter the new Albertus Magnus College, in New Haven.

Miss Constance Raymond of Broad street leaves today to begin her freshman year at Mt. Holyoke college.

Mrs. Philip A. Johnson and little daughter, Ann Chester are visiting the former's mother in Andover, N. H.

Stanley C. Johnson, of Providence, has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Johnson, of Lincoln avenue.

Mrs. Albert Lewis is again in Norwich, following a visit at the home of her son, Charles Farrington Lewis, of Bridgeport.

Charles J. Dyer and Henry J. LaFontaine, who are touring Italy, are to return on the 7th on S. S. Martha Washington, from Naples.

TILDEN'S VICTORY IN NATIONAL TENNIS PLAY LAST WEEK'S FEATURE

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—(By the Associated Press)—An ebbing summer athletic season, hastening its retreat from the arena this week before the advance of a moleskin-shrouded host from more than 600 colleges, carries upon the crest of notable outdoor triumphs at least two of America's four monarchs of sport whose right to rule for another year has withstood the test of gruelling competition.

Going down in 1925 history with Bobby Jones of golfing fame as one of the marvels of his day, William T. Tilden has just contributed to his brilliant record a tennis feat which ten years ago appeared to be beyond attainment in this period of lightning exchanges across the corded barrier. His sixth consecutive winning of the national championship, while still short of the seven-year stretch over which R. D. Sears ruled netdom from 1881 to 1888, stands out as far more remarkable in view of the tremendous pace of the turf court game today as compared with the drab baseline style which prevailed fifteen years ago.

Retiring in the fading outdoor sport scene with Jones and Tilden, two companion rulers in the realm of powerful hitting—Jack Dempsey and Babe Ruth—carry with them little more than hope that another season will be more fruitful. Feints at a heavyweight championship fight tonight had developed no definite signs of progress toward a meeting of Dempsey and Harry Wills, while major league batting averages yesterday indicated that even with his belated stand, the erstwhile home run monarch of the Yankees would fall far short of the achievements posted this year by Speaker, Cobb and Hornsby.

Tennis

Tilden's triumph last week was the crowning of remarkable tennis strategy, mastery of every stroke in the game, and superb physical condition equal to the test of a protracted challenge duri— which he outstroked the foremost racqueters of America and the world. Never since American lawn tennis was revolutionized with the cannonball service, the scorching ground stroke and the terrific over-hand smash which came out of the golden west with Maurice McLoughlin has any previous champion been able to set the pace at the peak for more than two years. McLoughlin himself, W. M. Johnston, R. Norris Williams and Lindley Murray were unable to win third terms as champions, and of this quartet, only McLoughlin and Murray survived successive tournaments.

Once again Tilden has proved that his record of performances through a season offer a very untrustworthy barometer of his potential strength. His near defeats at the hands of Borotra and Lacoste in the Davis Cup series, sharply contracted with the decisive triumphs of Richards, Johnston and Williams, far from being a forerunner of possible fall from his throne, rather gave justification for the belief that Tilden either vindicated the opinion of those who have looked upon him as a net entertainer capable of setting the stage for spectacular finishes or that he lifted himself from a state of tennis staleness which almost succeeded in its defiance of a strong and indomitable spirit.

The drawing of the curtain over a brilliant campaign on the courts still leaves a few major summer sport classics to view with the formal opening of the college gridiron season next Saturday.

Golf

Over the Olympic Fields links in Chicago this weeks professional golfers will make their farewell bow in major competition in an effort to wrest from Walter Hagen his title as champion of the Professional Golfers' Association, while outdoor pugilism will provide here tomorrow night what is likely to be the closing championship scene of the flatic drama in a fifteen-round welterweight title struggle between Mickey Walker and Dave Shade.

Absence from the links events of Jim Barnes, Jock Hutchison, MacDonald Smith, and Willie MacFarlane has made Hagen a strong favorite whose chief opposition in the defense of his crown is expected to come from Gene Sarazen, metropolitan open champion and P. G. A.

Boxing

Dave Shade's shadow, lengthened by his sensational knockout over Jimmy Slattery, has for more than five years haunted the reign of the colorful little New Jersey fighter. The Californian's ability as a boxer, magnified by his peculiar crouching, weaving style was bound to be a matter of much concern for a battler of the old slambang school like Walker, who has been troubled throughout his career by skillful knights of the padded mittens. Sailor Friedman, Jock Malone, George Ward and Charley Piotz in addition to Shade provided baffling targets for the hard-punching Elizabeth, N. J., lad and of this quintet Shade has been considered infinitely more puzzling in style.

It will be essentially a test of clever ness against a battering two-handed attack. Walker's ability to absorb punishment minimizes the chances of the Slattery knockout being duplicated. While Shade is so elusive a mark as to make the opinion prevail that supremacy of the 147-pound division will be decided upon a verdict of the judges after a close and hard-fought battle.

Track

New York's closing outdoor athletic meet last week added its share to the toll taken from the year's champions and in like measure brought forth an equal portion of new track gems to dazzle the indoor throngs this winter. Defeat of the veteran distance runner, Joie Ray, at the hands of his old rival, Willie Ritola, the rise of Whitey Michalson through his fifteen-mile championship victory over such veteran stars as Mellor, Hennigan, Stenroos, Kyronen and De Mar, even the triple sprinting triumph of De Hart Hubbard of Michigan over Schoix, Bowman and Legoney were over-shadowed by the stunning defeat of three great quarter milers, by a metropolitan runner comparatively unknown a month or two ago.

In outstepping Alan Helfrich, George Marsters and Johnny Holden, Pincus Sober impressed critics not only by a masterful exhibition but by the quick strides he has made to fame. In three big races the lank New York youth created upsets. He first won the Junior Metropolitan title in 1:59 4-5. He then climaxed this feat by taking the Senior Metropolitan championship in 1:59 and then came his triumph over the crack New York A. C. trio, and this time he posted remarkable time of 1:57 2-5 on a very slow track.

In spite of the fact that he suffered probably the most decisive reverse of his career at the hands of Ritola, Ray announced after his two-mile race that he was not yet ready to desert the cinders. And if the lure of the ring does eventually ensnare him, he made it plain that its grip will extend no further than the realm of amateurism.

HARD WEEK AHEAD FOR AGGIE GRIDDERS

STORRS, Conn., Sept. 19—Although the Connecticut Aggies have been at work only one short week, development of the squad has been rapid and thorough, with the team taking definite shape which gives an inkling of what Coach Dole will throw against Sam Hill's Wesleyan charges at Middletown next Saturday.

Barring injuries which may be suffered in scrimmage next week, Dole sent a seasoned and veteran team against the Red and Black, one that carries seven regulars of the Aggies 1924 eleven that went through a tough schedule of eight games without a defeat.

In the line, Dole will have Captain Carl Brink and Fienneman, two new Britain boys on the ends, Oscar Nanfeldt will play left tackle and Paul Bitgood will play left guard. These four men have played regularly for two years, and with the exception of Nanfeldt, have been members of the varsity squad for three years, entering Storrs in 1922 before the freshman rule went into effect. Then there is John Daly, Hartford boy, regular center last year, and in 1923 the regular center on the undefeated freshman team. He will be in the pivot position at Wesleyan Saturday, where his weight and aggressiveness should count heavily.

Arthur Zollin, a "C" man last year when he was used in practically every game, is being counted upon to fill the tackle berth left open by the graduation of Maxon Eddy. Zollin captained the frosh team in 1923 and weighing about 190 pounds this year, he should team up well with the remainder of the Aggie line. The right guard position will see a merry scramble between "Red" McAllister of Cromwell, Baker and Longo. McAllister has been a letterman for the past two years, and Longo has been prevented from making his "C" by a knee injury, which for two seasons now has forced him to the infirmary for an extended stay. Longo is a powerful man holding the college record for the shot put, and provided his knee holds up he will be a valuable lineman for the Aggies.

Everything considered, it looks as though Connecticut's line this year will be fully as strong as the 1925 combination, which proved to be a hard set of forwards to pierce. From tackle to tackle it will average close to 185 pounds in weight with the heaviest men at the tackles. All are lettermen who have had considerable playing experience, and it has been many seasons since the line prospects at Storrs look as good as they do this year.

Like the line, Dole has a letterman in every position, in the backfield, as well as a number of good substitutes from last year's varsity, and an outstanding prospect in Willard Eddy of Simsbury sophomore halfback who will this year receive his first taste of varsity competition.

"Bill" Schofield, former Crosby High school star and a three letter man at Storrs is being alternated with Moreland at quarterback, the latter also being used at half Stasofski and Pilmer are the other two backfield letter men that Dole has been working daily, and they are certain to see plenty of action this season. Then there is Donovan Alt Allard, two other backfield men who have been showing up well, whom Dole will probably use considerably.

Eddy also as mentioned before is a likely prospect from the sophomore class, should give the Aggie backfield additional power in carrying the ball, because of his ability in running through an open field The Simsbury boy weighs close to 175 pounds, is fast and shifty, and with a deceptive change of pace is a hard man to bring down. He should tear off some long gains for the Aggies this year, provided his team mates give him the start.

Connecticut's kicking game will apparently be well taken care of this year, for the squad contains punters, place-kickers and drop-kickers galore. Eddy, Nanfeldt and Moreland have all been used considerably thus far in punting practice with Eddy having the edge over the others. In practice this morning, he got off some twisting spirals that carried fifty-five yards, and one that went fifty-eight. Eddy has also shown up especially well drop-kicking, and it seems likel ythat he will be called to perform whenever the Aggies get within kicking distance of an opponent's goal. Coach Dole has been breaking in Daly as a place kicker this week, and the Hartford boy has been placing them between the posts quite regularly.

Connecticut's passing game, which has been Dole's main offensive weapon for the past two years, will probably be used extensively this year, in the Schofield-Eddy-Makofski-Moreland combination. Dole has four backs that can be used on either end of the overhead game, and it seems likely that he will take full advantage of this. Captain Brink, at left end is expected to be an important cog on the receiving end of passes, as in the other seasons.

Coach Dole is much pleased with the rapid development of his squad to date, which he says has made more progress than any other team since he came to Storrs in 1923. Dole would make no comment on the Wesleyan game other than to say that his team would be ready next Saturday.

PORTUGESE CHAMP GAINS HIS THIRD KNOCKOUT VICTORY

RIO JANEIRO, Sept. 20. (AP)—Tavares Crespo, holder of the light and welterweight championships of Portugal, last night won his third straight knockout victory since his recent arrival in Brazil. Crespo, who is known as the "Wildcat of Portugal," met Albino Alonso, conceded to be the welterweight champion of Brazil, who is known as the "Wild Boar of Rio."

The Brazilian champion presented his Portugese opponent with a bouquet of roses when entering the ring, and was knocked out in eighteen seconds.

MUNN AND LEWIS WILL WRESTLE FOR TITLE

TULSA, Okla., Sept. 20. (AP)—Negotiations have been closed for a finish wrestling match between Ed Lewis, claimant to the world's heavyweight wrestling title, and Wayne "Big" Munn, considered Lewis' strongest opponent, Sam Avey, Tulsa promoter, announced today.

The match will be held at Tulsa, October 7, with the diamond studded belt, won by Lewis in a tournament promoted by Tex Rickard several years ago, and symbolic of the title, at stake.

Nutmegs Swamp Warriors

Sunday afternoon on Sachem field before a fair sized crowd, the Norwich Nutmegs completely outplayed and outclassed the Warriors in the first local football game of the season. The final score was 34 to 0. Touchdowns by the two McGraths, Marberis and MacLaren.

PENNANT RACE WILL BE DECIDED THIS WEEK

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—The long major league baseball trail this week turns the corner to pennantville, with Washington and Pittsburgh only a few steps from the goal.

Clinching of both championships beyond mathematical doubt during the next six days had become possible as the result of giant strides which both leaders made last week. With only a handful of games still to be played, the Senators and Pirates tonight appeared to have spurted beyond even the "miracle" stage from the viewpoint of the Athletics in the American and the challenging Giants in the national.

The junior league leaders maintained their margin of seven and one-half games over Philadelphia last week by winning four of their six contests while the Mackmen were taking five out of eight.

Storming through Detroit and Chicago, the team of Stanley Harris packed heavy hitting behind steady pitching which was not forced to its limit of effectiveness.

The corsairs were even more impressive in their six victories out of eight starts. Facing the club which had presented a bold front against them during their recent push through the east, the McHenrichie cohorts swept a three game series with the Braves after thumping the stumbling Robins earlier in the week.

The next six contests of the national league leaders offer the possibility of Pittsburgh putting the flag beyond the fleeting hopes of New York in the final series between the leading rivals on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Washington, like Pittsburgh, will continue at home stay this week, with Cleveland and St. Louis as opponents in series which may result in the sewing up of the American league honors.

Races in both leagues swept the clubs toward the finish last week with scarcely a ripple. The nearest approach to excitement accompanied the continued push of the St. Louis Cardinals. Their belated rally, fired by the hitting of Rogers Hornsby, who turned in his thirty-seventh homer, carried the team past slipping Brooklyn into fourth place.

Brooklyn's fall in the west, stretched to six straight defeats under the pelting of the Cards, was abetted by an injury to the team's great pitcher, Dazzy Vance. With two successive pitching classics during which he had turned in a one-hit and a no-hit game, Vance had heightened the Robbins' hopes of finishing in first division. His loss to the team last week was a crippling blow.

Both New York clubs put on sprints the Yankees taking five of their eight games under a return to old time batting power by Babe Ruth. While the Hugmen appeared hopelessly sandwiched between Cleveland and Boston in seventh place, however, the Giants fortified their hold on second place against Cincinnati by twice turning back the Reds on brilliant pitching by Nehf and Greenfield.

The sharp blow struck Boston at Pittsburgh thwarted the drive of the Braves for fifth place and found them still four games behind Brooklyn in spite of the slump of Robby's men, while the Cubs and Phillies battled desperately to dodge the national league cellar with Chicago still half a game from the pit at the end of the week.

GOOD BOUTS PROMISED AT WESTERLY TONIGHT

What promises to be one of the greatest middleweight battles of the season will be staged by Promoter Joe Grilla at his wooden saucer at Westerly, R. I., this (Monday) evening, December 21, when Pal Reed, "fighting Parson" of Framingham, Mass., trades socks with Chief Halbrand, Indian fighter, who has been forging to the front like a ball of fire of late.

Both ringmen are well known for their ability to hit and take punishment.

Reed has combatted nearly all of the top notchers in his own class, middleweight and many light heavy and heavyweights.

Only last winter he gave Jack Delaney one of the roughest arguments ever encountered by the Bridgeport K. O. specialist. Although Delaney was awarded the decision the crowd was not slow in denouncing the decision.

Halbran, about two months ago handed Frank Moody, the Walloping Welshman, a thorough pasting all of the way of twelve rounds. And Moody has whipped Lou Bogash, Jock Malone and the like.

He is also the only man ever to knock out Bogash.

Steve Culver, fast rising Bridgeport featherweight, faces one of the toughest assignments of his career when he takes on E. O. Mule Brown, of New York, who is heralded as another Joe Gans.

Willie Mack, rugy and clever lightweight from Stamford, Conn., will mingle with Young Pilkington of Pawtucket, R. I.

Teddy Russell, heavy hitting Norwich, Conn., middleweight is down in the books to do battle with Charley Stecher of Omaha, Neb., brother of the champion heavyweight wrestler.

All of these bouts with the exception of the Reed Helbran which is slated for ten rounds, will be of six rounds duration.

Swedes Win Meet.

OSLO, Norway, Sept. 20. (AP)—Sweden won the Triangular athletic competition here today with 31 points. Norway scored 27 and Denmark 14.

Lindstroem threw the javelin 67.31 metres (about 221 feet), but it is doubtful whether this record, which surpasses the world's record, will be admitted, as he was favored by a strong wind.

Football (tsu chu) was played by the Chinese several centuries before the commencement of the Christian era.

MEUSEL'S HITTING FEATURES GIANTS' VICTORY OVER CUBS

CHICAGO, Sept. 20—New York bade farewell to Chicago today after taking two games of the three game series, the final game by 6 to 2.

The batting of "Irish" Meusel was a big factor in the Giants' victory. He cracked out four hits in five times up, one of the blows being a homer and another a two base hit which sent two runs home.

Bush was driven off the hill in the seventh inning, when the visitors went on a batting rampage. Fred Fitzsimmons, former Indianapolis American Association star, had only one bad inning when the locals put across two runs. Although hit freely, he managed to bear down in the pinches. Score:

OLD TIMERS PLAY TO A 6 TO 6 TIE SCORE

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 20.—(A. P.)—Old time baseball players, some stars from a decade or more ago, of Chicago and Cleveland, battled eight innings to a six-six tie today. Chicago evened the count in the final inning by driving in three runs off Earl Moore. Some brilliant plays were registered through showers.

Seventy-two years old Jimmy Forest played the first two innings.

Mordecai Brown, famous three-finger pitcher, started for Chicago. He was nicked for six hits, struck out two, issued two passes and hit Steve Evans twice the three innings he pitched. Skel Roach did not allow a hit in 2 1-3 innings.

Other members of the former pennant winning Cubs in the lineup were Jimmy Archer, who caught and played first base and Artie Hofman. Archer got two doubles out of four times at bat and handled eleven chances with one error. Ed Sweeney, who alternated with Archer, found the Cleveland pitchers for three hits in four times up.

The feature fielding play was made by Lou Gertenrich, who, after a spectacular running catch, doubled a runner at the plate.

Glen Liebhardt, who started on the mound for Cleveland retired the side on strikes in the first round and allowed only one hit in three innings. Nap Lajoie, who handled chances cleanly and Dode Paskert who got three hits in five times up also starred for Cleveland.

TUNNEY GIVES UP HOPE OF MEETING WILLS THIS YEAR

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—(AP)—Gene Tunney, challenger for the world's heavyweight championship, and conqueror of Tommy Gibbons has given upu hope of forcing Harry Wills into a match this year and believes the negro heavyweight will not even accept the issue in 1926.

"Instead of Tunney drawing the color line it looks to us like Wills has drawn the line against meeting Tommy," Billy Gibbons, manager fo Tugney, said tonight.

"Wills was offered $200,000 to box Tunney, but for reasons best known to himself, absolutely refused. I don't believe we'll be able to force Wills into a match even next year."

Tunney played thirty-six holes of golf today before leaving for St. Paul to engage Bartley Madden in a ten round bout next Friday night.

McCormick Wins Title

The championship of Winnipesaug Golf club was decided Sunday in a 36 hole match between last year's champion James W. McCormick and George Maurice Nye, of Avondale and resulted in favor of last year's champ, when he was one up at the conclusion of the 36 holes, shortly before 5 o'clock.

SENATORS WIN OVERTIME GAME FROM WHITE SOX

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20. (AP)—Washington captured the final game of the series with Chicago today 6 to 5 in ten innings. A three-run rally by the visitors in the eighth, which knocked Walter Johnson from the box, tied the count at 5-5. Zachary, who was trounced by the White Sox yesterday, pitched good ball for the two final innings and got credit for the victory. Manager Eddie Collins of the Sox, laid up some weeks ago with a sprained leg, got into the line-up today as a pinch hitter. Score:

RED SOX RECRUIT GETS BEATEN AT MOOSUP

MOOSUP, Sept. 20.—Moosup knocked Packey Noonan off the rubber in the second inning here today before the largest crowd of the season on the carpet grounds, and with Kink Bader going fine the Taunton, Mass., club was held to two hits and Moosup defeated the visitors 6 to 1. This conclusively proves that Moosup has one of the fastest semi-pro teams in this section of the state. Mgr. Loughran's club kept the crowd on edge at all stages of the game. Fast fielding and hard and timely hitting made the local team look mighty good. Shorty McMahon of Holy Cross brought the crowd to its feet more than once, especially in the first inning when he got a grounder hit on the edge of the foul line just inside. It was a hard hit which he speared with his bare hand and got his man at first. Again and again his assists at third brought the crowd upp standing.

With the addition of this star Mgr. Loughran has a perfect team. A series of three games with the Riverview club to decide the eastern Connecticut title will be the next big feature for the fans of Eastern Connecticut. Moosup is out to prove at any cost that they will keep the title in baseball right here in Moosup. The score:

HOME RUNS BECOMING LESS FREQUENT IN MAJORS

CHICAGO, Sept. 20. (AP)—Activity among the home run hitters was considerably slowed up during the last week largely because of the better class of twirling which the pitchers are showing during the closing days of the campaign, and the absence of the "lively ball."

In the National league, many of the players who thrived on the short left field bleachers in the Cubs' park, have lost their target since the seats were removed.

Only twenty-six home runs were registered during the week, the American league having 14 and the National, 12.

Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals, continued to strengthen his claim to the title of home run king by smashing out his 37th. Bob Meusel, of the Yankees, is the only close rival to the St. Louis star. He poled his 29th, while Babe Ruth hung up number 20. "Goose" Goslin of the Senators, was the week's individual star with three home runs.

JOHNSON SUSTAINS SLIGHT INJURY TO HIS LEG

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20. (AP)—The champion Senators' pennant hopes trembled for a time today when it was disclosed that Walter Johnson, their pitching ace, suffered a twisted leg muscle when he slid into third base in the game with the Chicago White Sox.

The injury was declared to be of minor character, however, and the veteran was expected to be in shape for his next turn at mound duty.

FOUR MEN AND TWO WOMEN TAKEN IN OCEAN BEACH RAID, NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 20—New London harbored one of the sportiest resorts in New England the past summer, but not until Saturday night did the residents at the shore resort realize that they had been residing in the midst of a series of booze joints and a house of ill repute. The conditions at the beach were not even realized by the police until Thursday, when the authorities received complaint that a disorderly resort existed there.

Action on the complaint was deferred until Saturday night and as a result of a raid upon the place complained of, a cottage at 6 Ocean View place was visited and Harry J. Feldman, 28, chauffeur, residing at 431 Windsor avenue, Hartford, was arrested charged with keeping a disorderly house; Eva Eelmont, 23, a typist, residing at 999 Union avenue, Bronx, New York; Rose Barker, 23, stenographer, residing at 340 East 9th street, New York, Harvey Corwell, Clinton avenue, Apponaug, R. I.; Gus Markoff, 11 Home street, this city, business man, and Dr. Manning King Rose, local dentist, of 299 Huntington street, were taken into custody charged with frequenting.

All were able to provide sureties on their respective bonds except Cornwell, Rose and Feldman, but the last named is the only one of the sextette arrested to be held a prisoner at the police station. The two women furnished a bondsman on their bond of $100 each, while Rose was allowed his liberty on his own recognizance and Corwell delivered his automobile to the police as surety for his appearance in the police court. Markoff furnished a cash bond of $100. Feldman was unable to provide a surety on his bond of $250.

The Ocean View Place cottage is located in the heart of the beach and has been tenanted by Feldman and the other inmates but about a month, prior to which time the resort was located on Bentley avenue, in the midst of a series of places that have dispensed liquor throughout the year. Last Thursday, with a majority of the summer residents having departed for their homes, the Ocean View Place resort attracted attention because of the night revousing there and the number of automobile parties to arrive and depart from the resort during late hours at night and early in the morning. So great was the traffic to the resort that the police were complained to, acting upon the complaint, Acting Lieutenant James D. Gaffney, Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Patrolman Edward Daniels and James McKenna swooped down upon the place at 1:25 o'clock this morning. When the officers entered they recognized the character of the place and at once placed under arrest, Feldman, who admitted proprietorship of the resort.

Miss Sarah A. Mansfield, 81, sister of Richard W. Mansfield, superintendent of the Billings J. Learned mission here and of Mrs. Jennie L. Brockelbergh, State street, this city, died at her residence, in New Haven, Friday. Besides her brother and sister in New London, Miss Mansfield is survived by two brothers, George B. Mansfield David City, S. D., and Horace J. Mansfield, Yonkers, N. Y., and a sister, Mrs. Irene Matteson, of Norris, N. Y.

Bert DeVault, an ex-soldier was divorced by his wife, Elizabeth Leverone DeVault, recently, and was liberated last Thursday from the county jail here where he had been serving a six months' sentence for assault. He was arrested this forenoon on a charge of assaulting Henry Healy, a Potter street resident. DeVault will be given a hearing in the police court Monday morning.

DeVault, who has a tendency to beat up his acquaintances, was found in the vicinity of North Bank street early this forenoon by Healy. To the latter DeVault declared that he was hungry and was without funds to purchase food. According to Healy he escorted DeVault to the Healy home, where Healy caused a hearty meal to be prepared of which the two partook. When the breakfast had been concluded DeVault became involved in argument with Healy and finally beat him up. During the battle furniture in the Healy home was damaged and a coal range came close to being overturned. Following the fight DeVault left the Healy home and went to North Bank street, where he was taken into custody by Traffic Officer Clyde Murphy and William Corcoran and William Riordan, after Healy had visited the police station and complained against DeVault. Healy's facial condition plainly showed the beating administered to Healy, who is twice the age of DeVault and nowhere near the prowess of the ex-soldier.

Miss Mary F. Moran, formerly of New London, daughter of the late John and Elizabeth Moran, of 17 Huntington street, this city, died Friday at St. Francis' hospital New York, where she underwent an operation a week ago. Miss Moran is survived by a sister, Miss Elizabeth C. Moran and an aunt, Mrs. James Moran, 17 Huntington street. Miss Moran was educated in the New London public school and was a graduate of the State Normal school, Meriden. She and her sister had resided for several years in New York, where both were school teachers.

Bummers who loiter about the railroad station and the Fishers Island pier might as well decide that they have worn out their welcome in New London. If they are wise they will go to other cities while the going is good, for a term in jail awaits them if they loiter hereabouts and do not find employment that will place them in the class of those who toil and thereby earn a living. Three of this sort of undesirables were in court Saturday. They are Mike Walsh, who claims Worcester as his home and Fishers Island as his last address, though he had been engaged in unloading waterpipe here since he got his last pay at the island. Mike had a rambling story to tell of sauntering along in search of employment and stopping when he met others of his sort. Then Officer Courtland Brown approached and under the sign of his office as a protector of railroad property he ordered the group to vacate the premises. They were disposed to question his authority, but he showed them his shield and they changed their minds. Fred Clarke, a fellow who also had worked at Fishers Island, he said, had liquor enough aboard, according to Brown, to want to argue, but he was not allowed to stand upon the order to go, but had to proceed. He was arrested then and there, and later Walsh and Bill Ready were apprehended. They told varying stories of where they had worked and where they could work when they had the opportunity, so Judge Prince, while disposed to send the trio to jail as vagrants, just ordered them each to be confined to jail for a period of ten days. In order to allow them to get away from this city he suspended execution of judgment, and all the men promised to be out of town by night. Reedy didn't keep his promise for he was in a gang that loiters at Perkins Green throughout the early evening and as late as 10:30 last night. Walsh and Clarke have not been seen since they agreed to the terms of the armistice, so they may have gone to the "island."

Peter Nurnien of Niantic was fined $5 for parking his car on Bank street and interfering with traffic. Peter Epolito was fined a similar amount for failing to obey the signals of a traffic officer. He escaped exceptionally easy for his car crowded another vehicle upon the sidewalk on Main street and caused the breaking of a window in a store. That window must be paid for so Epolito must arrange for that expense.

Henry Popajohn, formerly of New London, and latterly of Middletown and Hartford, has purchased the business conducted for several years by Jeremiah J. Lyons, corner of Blackhall and Truman streets.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel has suspended the operators' licenses of Antonio Menghi, 87 Smith street, and Frank Chester, 475 Bank street. Commissioner Stoeckel also caused the license of James McTough, 675 Bank street, to be returned to the owner. All the drivers were recently involved in automobile accidents.

An automobile operated by Miss Vera Goeman, 45 Latham street, Groton, and a machine owned and driven by Gerald S. Sircom, 11 Chestnut street, Melrose, Mass., were in collision Saturday afternoon at the corner of Main and Richards streets. Both cars were damaged slightly.

Grady Morris, John Melson and William Baldwin, all connected with the United States Coast Guard service, local section base, and Bernard Stuart, of Mystic, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were dismissed Saturday.

Bernard Stewart, a sailor attached to the United States Coast Guard Burrows stated at this port, was arrested on Bank street Saturday night by Patrolman Clarence Wells charged wit hbreach of the peace and intoxication. Stewart will be in the police court Monday morning.

Daniel F. Stahler, Jr., was taken into custody Saturday night charged with bruch of the peace. He will be in court Monday morning. Stahler, who has been arrested many times, principally for intoxication, went to his home, 5 Huntington street, where he became involved in a war of words with his wife. So demonstrative was Stahler's conduct that Mrs. Stahler complained to the police and Patrolman Clarence Wells, who was assigned to the case, arrested the young man.

A Ford coupe owned by Russell Taylor, R. F. D., of Westerly, which was stolen early Saturday morning, was found wrecked on Mohegan avenue Saturday forenoon. Besides the car having been put out of commission, a spare tire had been stolen when the police took charge of the vehicle. Taylor parked his car on State street Friday night between the Soldiers and Sailors' monument and the union station. While Taylor absented himself from the car two sailors entered the machine and drove away. Following Taylor making a report of the theft of the car, the police instituted a search for it on the outskirts of the city, but were unable to locate it. About 9 o'clock Saturday morning a driver reported to Patrolman William Riordan that a Ford coupe was wrecked near the tracks of the Connecticut company on Mohegan avenue. Sergeant Nelson Smith went out where the auto had been abandoned and had it taken to a garage where it was later claimed by Taylor. The machine had suffered the loss of a rear wheel, probably by the car being caught in the rails of the trolley company.

Two public service operators became involved in a heated argument at the police station this evening when one of the pair is alleged to have violated the rules and regulations relating to the solicitation of patronage. The argument became so heated that the pair finally decided that the best way to settle the matter was to resort to the rules governing the prize ring. The two taxi drivers, accompanied by friends, went to the outskirts of the city where they had agreed to settle their differences according to fistiana, but when they reached the isolated section of the city and were about to use their fists as a method of combatment, they allowed their better judgment to prevail and settled their differences by shaking hands and concluding hostilities.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Fisher of Bank street, are spending a few days with relatives in New York.

Miss Katherine A. Grann, Washington street went today to New York where she will enter the freshman class of Washington Square college, the women's college of New York university, Monday. Miss Grann was accompanied by her mother, who will spend several days in the city.

Manuel J. Sousa, 137 Squire street was struck by an automobile owned and operated by Frank W. Allen, 342 Thames street, Groton this evening corner of Bank street and Montauk avenue. Sousa was not seriously injured for he escaped with bumps and bruises. Sousa was in the act of crossing the highway and at a time when automobile traffic was heavy, in attempting to cross at the street intersection Sousa became caught in the line of traffic with the result that Allen's car struck and knocked him down. Allen left his car and offered to obtain medical treatment for Sousa, but the latter declined the offer, stating that he was not injured so that he needed medical assistance.

NORWICH MAN KNOCKED OUT BY NEW LONDON HOOCH

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 20.—John J. O'Malley, Norwich, a steam fitter by occupation, was arrested Saturday afternoon charged with breach of the peace. He will be given a hearing in the police court Monday morning. O'Malley, who had been drinking, was loitering about the corner of North Bank and John streets in company with a friend and attracted the attention of passerby by his conversation. Patrolman William Roirdan ordered O'Malley and his friends to move on, but while the friend complied with the order of the officer, O'Malley became argumentative, with the result that he was taken to the police station. When brought before Desk Sergeant William Babcock O'Malley continued to talk at random and his conversation was such that he eventually talked himself into a cell to await the convening of the police court.

SUB-BASE SAILOR ROWS OFF, FAILS TO RETURN AT NIGHT

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 20.—A sailor named McGivalry, attached to United States submarine S5, stationed at the submarine base, is missing from the reservation tonight and it is believed that he has been drowned. Tonight the duty officer at the base notified the police of the disappearance of the sailor and requested that he be notified if any trace of the missing blue jacket were obtained. McGivalry started for a row in a small boat on the Thames river this morning and the last seen of him was when he started from the base pier. Nothing strange was considered when McGivalry failed to put in an appearance this afternoon, but when he continued absent from the reservation tonight it excited concern for the safety of the sailor. Inquiry about the city tonight among sailors from the submarine base failed to reveal any trace of the missing man.

No Money Grabber

If you received every week a dozen or more letters like the ones below from people who have suffered torments from piles, says Peterson, wouldn't you feel happier than the man whose life is devoted to money grabbing.

"Gentlemen—I have been suffering with a fistula for the past twenty years. During that time I have tried numerous remedies, all of which have failed.

"Two months ago I determined to give Peterson's Ointment a trial. The improvement was so decided after using one box, that I have continued, and on the completion of the fifth box am now entirely cured.

"This is written with the view of passing along the good word to other sufferers." Very truly yours, Charles E. Caswell, 282 Third street, Albany, N. Y. At all druggists 60 cents.

The mighty healing power of Peterson's Ointment quickly clears the skin of all rashes, pimples and blemishes. Peterson Ointment Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

MYSTIC

Funeral services for Dr. John K. Bucklyn were held Saturday afternoon at the family residence, East Main street, Mystic, and were attended by a large number of mourners. Rev. J. G. Osborne, pastor of the Union Baptist church, Mystic, officiated, assisted by Rev. E. E. Knapp, also of Mystic. The honorary bearers were Dr. Carlisle F. Ferrin and Dr. William D. Cronin, New London; Dr. E. O. Winship, Groton, and Drs. W. H. Gray, P. T. McGowan and A. H. Meyers, Mystic. The body was placed in the mausolium, Elm Grove cemetery, the services there were conducted by Stonington lodge of Odd Fellows.

The Ford Tudor Sedan, recently announced, is an attractive closed car with all-steel body in deep Channel Green, and bright nickeled radiator.

A pronounced stream-line effect has been achieved by dropping the chassis and lowering and lengthening the body. This also results in greater riding comfort because seats are low and deep, and the car is roomier.

See your nearest Ford dealer and have him explain the many new features, such as gas tank that is filled from outside, one-piece ventilating windshield, large fenders, attractive upholstery, wider running boards and doors and improved brakes.

Remember—this added beauty, comfort and convenience is offered at no additional cost.

OVER 33 PER CENT YIELD IN 46TH WEEK

The total number of eggs laid in the Storrs laying contest during the forty-sixth week was 3833 or a yield of over thirty-nine per cent. Keewaydin Farm's pen of barred rocks from Darien, Conn., came out the winner for the week with a total of 51 eggs. Another Connecticut pen owned by Merritt M. Clark of Brookfield Center tied with a western pen entered by Hanson's leghorn farm from Corvallis, Ore., for second place with a lay of 48 eggs each. R. W. Davis & Sons' pen of barred rocks from Rockland, Me., made third place with 46 eggs. In the fourth place Tom Barron's pen of white wyandottes from Catforth, England, tied with two pens of white leghorns, each pen laying 45 eggs for the week. The leghorns are owned by J. C. Patton of Charlotte, N. C., and Brummer & Frederickson of Holland, Mich.

As is expected at this season of the year the birds have been molting with a consequent drop in production. From the thirty-seventh to the forty - fourth weeks of the contest there was a drop of about four teen per cent. September first the electric lights were turned on. The birds are beginning to feel the stimulating effect of the artificial illumination. During the past two weeks the production has held with only a very slight drop. This presents an opportunity to observe how the artificially lengthened day tends to hold a greater production during the season of more profitable egg prices, not allowing the percentage to reach such a high peak during the spring months. Used on early hatched pullets at the first signs of molting, artifical lights are an insurance of greater profits for the year, as the production can be held fairly constant throughout the season. The lengthened day enables the birds to consume sufficient food to overcome the natural tendency to molt and discontinue prodiction. Lights are now recognized by the majority as a necessary part of the management program.

The leading pens in each of the principal varieties are as follows:

White Rocks

Ellen Day Ranken, Huntington, L. I., N. Y., 1602; H. B. Spangler, Matawan, N. J., 1467; Davidson Bros., Upton, Mass. 1448.

White Wyandottes

PERIL TO BABIES OF TUBERCULOUS PARENTS

The weekly health bulletin issued this week by the state department of health has the following timely article on Children of Tuberculous Parents:

Information obtained from the office of the state department of health indicates that infants born of tuberculosis parents have slight chance of escaping death from tuberculosis if they remain in contact with the afflicted parent. Babies do not inherit tuberculosis, but almost all become infected and many of them die if left in continuous contact with their tuberculosis parents. The results would be similar to other tuberculosis patients were closely associated with them in the home. The question is one of exposure to the disease rather than inheritance. The remedy for this condition would be to remove the child from its home at birth, unless the tuberculous patient goes to a sanatorium.

This view is in accord with an experience recently reported to the Academy of Medicine in Paris and commented upon in the Journal of the American Medical Association for April 25, 1925. According to this report 263 children were removed from the homes of their tuberculous parents at or very soon after birth and all escaped tuberculosis. Another group of 171 children remained in the homes with their tuberculous parents until they began to develop tuberculosis before they were removed. Of this number 13 or 7.6 per cent died of tuberculosis. A third group of 66 children born to tuberculous parents were not removed from their homes at all and 54 or 82 per cent died of tuberculosis, most of them within the first year.

For 37 of the 66 children in the last group, the hygienic conditions of the homes had been studied to find out if this were a factor in the high tuberculosis death rate. Of this number 21 children were in continuous contact with tuberculous parents and all died no matter what the conditions of their homes. In the other 16 instances exposure to the disease was terminated by the death of the tuberculous parent, and most of them survived. Thus it appears that continuous exposure to the disease is a more important factor in infants dying of tuberculosis than the hygienic conditions under which they live.

The children removed from the homes of tuberculous parents were normal in weight at birth but suffered the usual disadvantages of artificial feeding which resulted in a higher mortality rate during the first three months and a backward physical development up to 18 months of age. After three months the mortality rate rapidly dropped to normal and weight was normal or greater than normal at the age of four.

Thus it appears that the birth of an infant in the home where a tuberculosis patient resides offers choices of procedure vitally affecting the future of the infant. If both the infant and the patient remain in the home, the infant is almost sure to become infected and the outcome will depend largely upon the length of exposure to the disease. If either the infant or patient be removed from the home, the infant will escape infection but will be subjected to the hazards of whatever method of feeding may be chosen. In view of these facts it would seem that an important measure of prevention would be to induce all tuberculosis patients in homes where there are infants or young children to enter a sanatorium where they will not be a danger to the children in their families.

TLEPHONE AN DAUTOMOBILES IN FAMILY EQUIPMENT

Almost every family in Connecticut that has a telephone has also an automobile or motor cycle. One the first of August, there were 237,324 motor vehicles registered in the state motor vehicle department, while the number of telephones in use in the state reached a total of 244,279.

The number of telephones in a state is a good index of the number of motor vehicles in that state, according to the results of a study made by the National Chamber of Commerce. In more technical words, there is a high correlation between telephone and automobile use by states. The telephone and motor vehicle totals are close in all of the other New England states, except Massachusetts, the exception being largely due perhaps to the presence of Boston with extraordinary demand for telephones and less use for automobiles.

Motor vehicles sold at a list price of $800 or less were responsible for 192,807 of the 224,771 registrations in Connecticut last year, as nearly as can be approximated. Cars which sold for prices between $800 and $2,500 constituted 79,569 more of the registrations and the remaining 5,395 registrations were of cars which cost more than $2,500 each. Of the first classification that is the cars that sold for less than $800; 109,137 were listed at prices under $400. The northeastern states show relatively the greatest use of medium and high-priced makes.

Auto Stolen In New London.

The local police were requested by the New London police Friday evening to be on the watch for a Ford coupe, N-3417, stolen in that city Friday night. It was reported that two sailors took the machine and it was thought they were in this city. The auto registration book shows N-3417 as an Overland touring car, owner, John P. Ward, George avenue, Groton.

Every man may have his price, but it is always greater than his neighbor thinks he is worth.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

That motion pictures may eventually take the place, or at least parallel colleges in historical research work, was the opinion ventured by Arthur Chapman, the man who wrote "Out Where the West Begins," a poem now known around the world.

Chapman is also a well known newspaperman and historian, having compiled the only authoritative history of the state of Colorado.

Chapman was the guest of James Cruze for two days on the location near Cheyenne, Wyoming, representing the old town of Julesburg, Colorado, as it existed in 1863, for "The Pony Express," Cruze's new Paramount epic.

Chapman was extremely interested in the historical accuracy of every detail of the picture. He commented especially on the accuracy with which the career of Jack Slade, the notorious gunman and superintendent of the Overland stage line and pony express, was pictured. He is conceded one of the greatest authorities in the country on the career of Slade. He was especially surprised to learn that a picture of Slade had been discovered in an old Wells-Fargo collection by Henry O. Peterson, historical technician with the forension, at the Probate Court Room in the City of Norwich, in said District, be, and the same is, appointed for hearing the same, and the said executors are directed to give notice thereof by publishing this order once in some newspaper having a circulation in said District, at least two days prior to the date of said hearing, and make return to the Court.

"Motion pictures have the resources, man power, and energy to do tremendous historical research work, for profitable purposes, while the means of colleges are limited," said Chapman. "The historical collections of the country should benefit by it to a tremendous extent."

"The Pony Express" at the Palace this week, features Betty Compson, Ricardo Cortez, Ernest Torrence and Wallace Beery. The screen play is by Walter Woods from an original story by himself and Henry James Forman.

At the Breed

One Way Street, First National's adaptation of the popular Beale Davis novel, which opened at the Breed theater last night, is an excellent example of the modern novel properly treated in screen form.

More reserve is required of a screen presentation of a story than in the written form. But Earl Hudson, under whose supervision One Way Street, was produced, has kept a firm grip on the dramatic problem without dodging about the border line of sensationalism.

Ben Lyon and Anna Q. Nilsson have the leading roles, and make the most of the opportunities offered by the unusual situations and the brilliant setting of London society. Praise is due also to Marjorie Daw, Lumsden Hare, Thomas Holding, Dorothy Cumming and Mona Kingsley for their characterizations.

One Way Street was directed by John Francis Dillon, and is worthy of comparison to his Flaming Youth, Lilies of the Field and others of equal dramatic tone.

Young Ben Lyon fully upholds his share of the honors along with that tried artist, Anna Q. Nilsson, which is by way of saying that he has measured up to what might have been expected of him in this, his first featured role.

The story is that of a beautiful English society leader who finds herself facing the tragedy of growing old. The tragedy is brought home with the added force of jealousy when she finds the youth whose social advancement she has been aiding falling in love with a younger woman. The story reaches a smashing climax with her scheme for vengeance.

Broadway Theatre

It is to enjoy-so-for entertainments sake visit the Broadway Theatre when five new B. F. Keith acts are on view today, Tuesday and Wednesday in addition to Bebe Daniels in "The Manicure Girl." You can't go wrong—read on—

Joe Lyons & Co., in "Circus Days" offer a comedy act with a kick. Mr. Lyons has just completed his contract with the Greenwich Village Follies in which he made a tremendous hit.

Mullen & Frances come right off the "big time" with their comedy offering "The Happy Bricks." See them and you'll never stop laughing.

Jean Valjean opens the show with a new novelty combination that hits the bulls-eye.

It is easy to go hummin' and strummin' with Gilbert & Wimp in their music and song specialty.

Louie Stone & Co., offer something new and sensational in up-side down entertainment.

"The Manicure Girl," the Paramount picture, which opened at the Broadway yesterday, deals with the adventure of a young cuticle cut-up in New York City. It's Bebe Daniels' newest starring picture.

Bebe as the manicure girl, gives the finest performance of her yet young career as a full-fledged star. Edmund Burns has the leading man's role. The picture is an adaptation by Townsend Martin

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

WEEKL YMARKET REVIEW

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—A wild outburst of bullish enthusiasm in the stock market which lifted the industrial average to the highest level ever recorded and the railroad average to the highest figure since the war, and a sharp increase in new bond offerings were the outstanding features of this week's financial markets. Commodity prices also displayed a rising tendency with an advance in pig iron prices as one of the most significant trade developments of the week.

Professional traders who were aided by relatively easy money rates and the absence of any adverse business news, were generally credited with engineering the rally in stock prices although there were indications according to commission house advices, of increased public participation. The sharpest gains were recorded, however, in motors, public utilities, and specialities known to be under pool control, with the general run of standard industrials failing to participate extensively in the advance.

Chief interest in the bond market centered in foreign financing, which undoubtedly will be given additional stimulus if a satisfactory agreement is reached for the funding of the French debt. Cotton prices ruled slightly firmer on buying inspired by the recent reduction in crop estimates. Wheat futures ruled about a cent a bushel higher. Raw sugar prices declined on revised upward estimates of the European sugar crop.

Foreign exchanges were mixed. Demand sterling held steady despite a steady stream of cotton and grain bills, French francs ruled firm above 4.70 cents, but Belgian francs sagged to a new low record for the year and then made moderate recovery. Fluctuations in the Scandinavian rates narrowed down considerably.

RULES FOR YOUNG WRITERS

1.—Write plainly on one side of the paper.

2.—Use pen and ink, not pencil.

3.—Short and pointed articles will be given preference. Do not use over 300 words.

4.—Original stories or letters only will be used.

5.—Write your name, age and address plainly at the bottom of the story.

Rover's Tricks

One time I saw some animals act—
I liked that show a lot—
Dogs, horses, tigers, elephants,
And some that I've forgot.

But since I've heard my uncle say
They're taught most cruelly,
And act just so 'cause they'll afraid,
It's spoiled such shows for me.

I'd rather see my Rover's tricks—
He can't add two and two,
Nor read the clock—I wonder how
He knows when school is through.

He always meets me on the way,
And lots of fun have we,
For when I throw him sticks and things
He brings them back to me.

Perhaps you'd say his tricks aren't much,
But anyway I know
He doesn't do them 'cause he's 'fraid,
But 'cause he loves me so.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY THE WIDE AWAKES

The Andes

Dear Uncle Jed: The Wide Awake circle has been so small lately that I thought I would write a letter to help fill it out.

I think the Andes are very interesting. The Rocky mountains begin in Alaska and run all down the western part of the United States and down through Mexico and Central America and Panama. When they get into South America they are no longer called the Rocky mountains, but are called the Andes. Up in North America these mountains produce gold and silver. In Mexico they form volcanos. In Chile they produce nitrate and in Peru gold and silver. The Rocky mountains and the Andes form a backbone to the two continents. They are also quite high. The snow on their tops melts and runs down into the ocean because there is only a little strip of land on the left side of both mountains. When these mountains end at the foot of South America they form a great many islands out in the ocean. In Peru many cattle are raised on these mountains. Chile is nearly covered by them. In Peru people go to the Andes for scenery. Many things are carried across these mountains on llamas.

Browney

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write to the Wide Awakes. We had a dog and its name was Browney. He was a very pretty dog. He was all white except he had two sable spots, one large one on the right and a round one on the left. He was a great one for play; the only thing he didn't want to do is come in from play. We have a car and no one could go near it but the family. I think if he were a child he would write to the Wide Awakes too.

Glaciers

Dear Uncle Jed: Glaciers are rivers and snows frozen into ice which move slowly from higher to lower levels.

The color of these is bluish. In tropical and temperate climates they are found only on lofty mountains but in the polar regions they are found almost in the whole region.

They mostly occur in Greenland which is almost an entire sheet of ice.

On the higher mountains the tops are full of loose snow. But as it stays there it hardens and gradually increases weight and thickness. It slowly pushes along until it reaches a warmer climate and melts, forming many headwaters of rivers. In warmer climates the ice sheets are pushed down to the lowest lying grounds until the edges are down in the sea.

TAFTVILLE

Miss Dorothy Wood, of Coventry, spent the week-end at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Wood and family, of South Second avenue.

The Sunday evening meeting of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor at the Taftville Congregational church, was led by Miss Edna Krodel.

Mr. and Mrs. William Whitehead, of Boswell avenue, were Sunday visitors in Thompson.

Miss Helen C. Aberg, of the State Normal school, Willimantic, spent the week-end at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Axel L. Aberg, of North Third avenue.

Mrs. Emma Mossey was pleasantly surprised Wednesday evening by 20 of her friends the occasion being her birthday. A chicken supper was served. The guests presented Mrs. Mossey a vacuum cleaner.

A number from the village attended the last day of the New London County Fair.

THINKS HUNTERS MAY FIND DISAPPOINTMENT

Hunting in the woods and fields of the state may be disappointing to hunters in the opinion of Superintendent John W. Titcomb of the fisheries and game department.

The law now forbids hunting of quail or Hungarian, or European partridge, and the hen pheasant is on the proscribed list. This means that the man with a gun is limited to cock pheasant, wood cock and grouse in addition to the usual list of shore birds and water fowl.

Mr. Titcomb says the native partridge is scarce as the disease which swept them off not only here but in the country has not yet ended its ravages. Quail are increasing while cock pheasant are numerous. A day's bag of cock pheasant is limited to two.

Woodcock are increasing, but as a migratory bird it is not possible to forecast the luck hunters may have.

The season for shore birds which has opened, appears to be good.

In fur bearing animals rabbits are scarce in eastern Connecticut, but plenty in those sections where this animal has not been pursued by "pot hunters" for the city market.

Sportsmen are pleased with weather conditions as a drought does not seem impending and this means little likelihood of a ban on hunting such as was proclaimed last fall by reason of the dry spell.

RACES, PARADES AND AWARDS OF PRIZES ON CLOSING DAY OF FAIR

The New London County Agricultural Society's 71st annual fair is now a matter of history, for the three day exhibition of the products of the county, together with a lively midway, horse racing, vaudeville, band concerts and other attractions came to a close late Saturday afternoon Saturday's attendance, estimated at 5,000, was not as large as had been expected on the half-holiday. The total for the three days was below that of other years this no doubt being due to the fact that ma. hundreds of people could not attend owing to their employment, mills, factories and stores.

Saturday was the most successful of the three days. Weather conditions, sunny skies and a light breeze, were ideal and the programme of vaudeville, races, etc., was carried out without a hitch. During the afternoon the children at the New London County Home were guests of the fair association and according to his annual custom, Fred Prothero, superintendent of the main exhibition hall, provided ice cream cones for the children.

Race Track Events

There were three events on the track programme a 2.18 trot for a purse of $500 with four starters a special county race, purse $200, with four starters and a 2.30 pace, purse of $500, with six starters. The last event was the best race of the afternoon. The races were started shortly after 2 o'clock.

In the first event the 2.18 trot, the starters were Auldworthy, Fred Brooks, Orangeburgh, N. Y., winner of the race and first money, Lena Sunshine, b. m., a Boston horse, winner of second money, Dewaretta, owned by J. A. Pilgard, Hartford, who took third money and Belle of Kyndon, owner, Eugene Sullivan, W. Cheshire, fourth.

In the first heat the horses got away to a good start, Auldworthy jumping into the lead and maintaining it throughout the mile, finishing first. In the last half mile of this heat, Lena Sunshine passed Belle of Lyndon, thus moving up into second place, but was unable to overcome Auldworthy's lead, and finished the heat second, Dewaretta also passed Belle of Lyndon in the last half of the heat and finished third, Belle of Lyndon finishing the heat in fourth place. Time of the mile 2:15 1-4.

The second heat was largely a repetition of the first heat, the horses finishing in the same order. The third heat was uneventful, Auldworthy taking the lead and finishing first, Dewaretta coming in second and Lena Sunshine, which came in second in the previous two heats, finishing the heat third. Time of the mile, 2:16 1-2.

The summary:

2:18 trot, purse $500:

Band Music and Vaudeville

Swahn's band was on hand again and under the leadership of John M. Swahn rendered its usual excellent programme throughout the afternoon, serving to enliven the waits between the race heats and the vaudeville numbers.

The vaudeville numbers were staged for the last time under the direction of Announcer Edward T. Connelly. Charles Leary entertained with his difficult ring balancing act and was followed by the Marions who were seen to advantage in their acrobatic, slack wire and crack rifle shot act that won them well deserved applause.

Next came the Breakaway Barlows in their thrilling revolving ladder act which concluded with the collapse of the ladder rungs, leaving the Barlows suspended in the air on the remains of the trick ladder.

The Tangled Army staged their comedy military drill and followed it up with comedy tumbling and trick house feature that elicited much laughter and applause.

The Chic Revue act again proved a winner. This was staged by five pretty young ladies, all dancers of unusual merit. They earned well deserved applause in the splendid execution of their ensemble and solo dance numbers.

The Clark Brothers appeared in a startling triple bar act and the five bounding clowns in their rapid fire trampoline feature brought the vaudeville programme to a close.

Cattle on Parade

The cattle parade, a feature of the fair Friday, was again repeated Saturday afternoon. There were some 120 head of cattle in the procession which wound down the track in front of the grandstand and then back to the stables while the audience applauded the owners as they were introduced from the judges' stand.

A young bull and a heifer in the Ponemah Mills herd caused a few exciting moments when they broke away from the man and boy who were leading them. The young bull broke away and started on a mad rush down the track and at the same moment the heifer went on a rampage, throwing the boy down onto the track and dragging him in the dust for a matter of ten or twelve feet. However no damage was done and the animals were quickly recaptured.

Decorated Automobiles

The decorated automobile parade and contest took place about 2 o'clock. The auto procession was not as large as had been expected, there being only four machines in line. The beautifully decorated machines which had assembled inside the track enclosure, were slowly driven around the half mile track. The three judges, W. W. Bromley of Jewett City, James P. Sheridan of this city and George Raymond, a life member of the fair association and for years identified with the associations activities, viewed the decorated machines from the judges stand.

The judges awarded first prize to the beautiful float entered by Waddington, The Florist. This float was a presentation of a navy dirigible with the lettering U. S. Navy. The entire float was banked in flowers and there were two small boys in white as pilots. Second prize went to Louis M. Crandall, whose float depicted a life life reproduction of a swan. Mr. Crandall drove the machine, and his daughter, Helene Frances Crandall, dressed prettily in pink, rode on the swan's back, "driving" the huge bird around the track with the aid of two ribbon reins.

The float entered by Hawkins, The Florist, was a close second. This float was dedicated to Uncas-on-Thames. The float was carried out in blue and gold, representing the color of the sky and the mellow light through the woods. The floral arrangement was unusually attractive and Mr. Hawkins is to be complimented on the appearance of his float. An Indian tepee was shown on the forward end with an American eagle in gold and a nurse from Uncas-on-Thames stood for the great work that is being done at this institution. Oak leaves were festooned about the float and over a trellised arbor.

Prizes Awarded by Mayor

During the middle of the afternoon Mayor Milo R. Waters awarded the prizes in the better baby contest, the doll carriage contest and the mutt show contest. Mayor Waters first awarded the prize cups in the better baby contest. I did not suppose there were so many fine babies in the county, said Mayor Waters, speaking from the open air stage in front of the grandstand. There were over sixty entrants in this contest he said, and the judges were appointed by the state board of health.

Mayor Waters then announced that in the better baby contest for girl entrants, the winning baby was Marie Vergason Woodworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Woodworth of 1 Vergason avenue, Norwich Town. The mayor then presented to baby Marie a beautiful loving cup. Marie, resting contentedly in her mother's arms, was introduced to the applauding audience by Mayor Waters.

In the better baby contest for boys Mayor Waters announced as the winner, Edward Barrows of New London. The infant Edward was not present to receive his prize. Mayor Waters announced that the contest was a very close one and that it had been decided to give honorable mention to Kenneth McCracken, son of Mr. and Mrs Donald McCracken of Glasgo.

As the winner of the doll baby contest Mayor Waters presented Margaret McKinnon of 64 Elizabeth St. Margaret had her decorated doll carriage with her on the stage. It was beautifully decorated in pink and she wore a pretty pink dress. Her prize was a diamond ring.

The handsome collie dog owned by Thomas Doyle, of 161 Asylum street was the winning dog in the "mutt" show. The prize was a leash which Mayor Waters was already to present but the collie and his master were nowhere to be found. They were on the fairgrounds, however, for shortly afterwards they were rounded up by a searching party and Thomas and his collie were introduced to the audience from the stage.

Mutt Show a Feature

The mutt show was one of the Saturday morning features at the fair and it was conducted under the supervision of Earle M. Wood assisted by Jesse Main, Peter Lukoff and Curtis Hedler, secretary. The show was open to all boys who entered unpedigreed dogs and the entries were divided into the following classes:

Class 1—dogs under one year old; class 2—bitches under one year old; class 3—dogs from one to three years old; class 4—bitches from one to three years old; class 5—dogs from three to five years old; class 6—bitches from three to five years old; class 7—dogs over five years old; class 8—bitches over five years old.

Among those who had dogs entered in the contest were: Class 1—Alfred Hanson; class 2, George Hawker, Allan Latham, Jr., Raymond Boldrighne, Leslie Mullens, David O'Neil, class 3, John Delaney, Danny Cellucci, Franklin Robinson, Henry Siebjko, Edward Curran, Gilbert Miner, Thomas Doyle, Adolph Benzeus, John Bowman, 3rd, George Breenlaw, Ralph Sabations class 4, Francis Wright; class 5, James Carter; class 6, Edward Grover; class 7, Gilmour McQuinnis, Arthur Alquist; class 8, Paul Sowa and Jesse Main.

The following awards were made by Arthur L. Peale, judge:

Best all round dog, Teddy, owned by Thomas Doyle, the prize being a leather leash.

The three winners in the eight classes follow:

Class 1, Patsy, owned by Fred Wenninger; second, Prince, owned by Cora Larviere; third, Brownie, owned by Albert Hanson.

Class 2, first, Spec, owned by Allan Latham, Jr.; second, Rintintin, owned by George Hawker; third, Buddie, owned by David O'Neil.

Class 3, first, Teddy owned by Thomas Doyle; second, Stranger, owned by George Greenlaw; third, Hector, owned by John Bowman, 3rd.

Class 4, Trixie, owned by Fanvis Wright.

Class 5, first, Beauty, owned by James Carter.

Class 6, first, Pat, owned by Edward Grover.

Class 7, first, Sandy, owned by Gilmour McGuinness; second, Monkie, owned by Arthur Alquist.

Class 8, first, Beauty, owned by C. A. Rathbone; second, Gip, owned by Jesse Main; third, Beauty, owned by Paul Sowa.

Doll Carriage Parade

The doll carriage parade was also a feature of the fair during the morning. This event was conducted under the supervision of Miss Viola Walz who was ably assisted by Miss Katherine Dodd. Among the attractive entries were the following children with their decorated doll carriages; Elizabeth A. Main, yellow roses; Barbara Main, pink roses; Alice Peck, pink and lavender flowers; Claire Cyr, white roses; Margaret McKennen, pink rose buds with dress and hat to match; Ilva Ranger, yellow and brown leaves; Reta Laviviera, pink flowers; Peggy Ross, pink and white flowers; Mildred Turner, orange buds; Mildred Murray, poppies; Betty Murray, morning glories, Gertrude Gallaghan, pond lilies; Annetta Laviviera, blue flowers; Virginia Brown, pink and green flowers; Mildred Cunningham, red, white and blue. Each little girl was presented with a souvenir box of candy and key by the Norwich Gas and Electric company.

Fair Notes

Mrs. Roswell J. P. Brown of Oneco street, was awarded six first prizes, and five seconds, on her magnificent flowers from the Fanning Park gardens, at the County Fair.

Mrs. Brown's honors were distributed as follows: For the best collection of dahlias, twelve varieties, one bloom each in separate holder, first prize; for best hybrid cactus, twelve blooms in blooms arranged in basket, first; for best hybrid cactus, twelve blooms in basket, first; for best peony dahlias, twelve blooms in basket, first; for twenty-five blooms mixed asters, first; for vase snapdragons, twelve spikes, first; second prize on best exhibit of dahlias; second prize on show dahlias of twelve blooms; second on decorative dahlias of twelve blooms; second prize on twenty-five blooms of cosmos; second on lavender asters. Fanning Park dahlias are proving their worth and living up to reputation, as this is the fourth year in succession, that the several selected varieties have won first prize in the various classes. On the opening day among the many who complimented Mrs. Brown on her beautiful blooms were Governor and Mrs. John H. Trumbull, and others of the governors staff, who greatly admired them.

There were many favorable comments on the splendid layout of the automobile show. Credit for the fine appearance of the auto tent goes to Kenneth N. Webb, of this city.

A squad of local police was on the grounds throughout the afternoon and rendered valuable service in keeping the race track clear for the races. They were stationed in various parts of the grounds. Traffic was well regulated and the machines were kept moving right along.

The rising generation missed the familiar balloon ascension this year. A number of small boys were on the grounds Saturday afternoon watching and waiting for the balloon to go up. They were considerably disappointed when they learned that the balloon ascension had been given up this year.

The ferris wheel and the merry-go-round did a fairly good business throughout the afternoon. They proved popular attractions with the young folks.

Along towards the latter part of the afternoon Saturday a truck driving across the track sideswiped one of the track gates and sent it crashing to the ground. Fortunately no one was hurt.

Fair patrons were recalling, Saturday afternoon, the heavy gale and terrific thunderstorm that wrecked tents, concessions and stands on the final day of the fair two years ago.

SUGGESTS PURCHASING BUREAU FOR STATE INSTITUTIONS

The Connecticut Society of Executives held its quarterly meeting Friday morning at the Norwich state hospital, as guests of Dr. Franklin S. Wilcox. There were about 35 present and the meeting was opened with William H. Blodgett, state tax commissioner and president of the society in the chair. George L. Allen, secretary of the state tuberculosis commission, the society's secretary, presented the minutes of the previous meeting and they were accepted without reading. The roll call showed that representatives were present from the following institutions: Mansfield Training school and hospital, Connecticut State hospital, Norwich State hospital, Connecticut Reformatory, Connecticut School for boys, Long Lane farm, State farm for women, Mystic Oral school, Connecticut state tuberculosis commission, The Seaside, State Board of finance, Connecticut Agricultural college, Connecticut State police, State Insurance department, State Board of health, State Board of education.

Delegates present included Dr. A. B. Meredith, Chief Robert T. Hurley, of the state police force, Dr. O'Brien of the Seaside, Commissioner of Health Stanley H. Osborn, Insurance Commissioner Howard F. Dunham and other state officials.

The principal speaker at the meeting was E. Kent Hubbard, president of the Connecticut Manufacturers' Association, who delivered a very interesting address on Unification of State Purchasing.

Mr. Hubbard declared that it was his conviction from his experience in industrial purchasing and on the state board of finance that Governor Templeton's idea of a single purchasing head for state institutions was practicable. The present system, he said, was not without faults, and he believed all would agree that economies could be effected by a change.

Continuing, Mr. Hubbard said:

Some will say that there can be only one of two systems, namely, central purchasing or individual purchasing. I do not believe that this is so. I believe that there is a middle ground which could be made more effective than either of these plans. The organization before which I have the pleasure of appearing today is the medium through which this middle ground can be reached and I am presenting this plan, which, as I have said, may not be original, not as a perfect one, but as one which with your intimate knowledge of all details of the problems might be worked out by you. Whether the final plan would involve additional legislation is for you to decide, but there is a possibility that with the existing machinery no additional legislation would be required.

Would it not be possible for the Society of Executives of the State of Connecticut to create a bureau of their organization headed possibly by the secretary whose duty it would be to open up sources of supply for the various state institutions. There is possibly one executive among you who has a better knowledge of the sources of supply for a particular type of mattress than any of his fellow executives. This particular executive has tested a great many types of mattresses and has taken into consideration durability, appearance, price and all the other factors which go to make up a "good buy." The executives of the other state institutions are unaware of this investigation and of this information.

Likewise there is among you an executive whose patients overlook all of his other supposed shortcomings because of the fact that he supplies them with a particular brand of coffee, which is purchased by him at a price lower than the average coffee, and so there is probably someone among you who may be regarded as an expert in the determination of the sources of supply of some particular material. It only remains to collect these individual experiences and each of you would glady give the benefit of your experience to the bureau of your organization. Monthly or semi-monthly market reports might be issued to each institution by the bureau. The head of the bureau of the Society of the State Executives might in the course of his duties learn of the existence of a large supply of winter apples which could be purchased for almost nothing and buying might be pooled. He would have at his command all of the information in regard to purchasing which is not held by the individual institution. Being a member of your organization he would naturally know of your needs and of your desires. He would not be of the type of the average purchasing agent whose primary consideration in purchasing is cost. He would not be hampered in his work by an official of the state yet he would save the state enormous sums of money each year and would relieve each of the executives of the state institutions of an immense amount of detail work and investigation.

It is possible that such a plan as outlined above would be more workable if the particular committee appointed by the society would be solicited by an individual connected with the state government, who is familiar with the broader phases of state finance. I know of Mr. Blodgett's interest in your organization as well as the interest of others who hold positions which enable them to analyze completely. Perhaps this suggestion has merit. It is for you to decide.

As I have said and as you know or have gathered, I am not an expert in regard to purchasing for state institutions. I have thrown out merely the germ of an idea which I am incapable of further developing. If the idea is in your opinion a good one you alone have the experience to develop it. In my opinion, and this is only the opinion of a single citizen, some change must be brought about and it is my belief that this change can be brought about by your organization better than by any individual or other organization.

At one o'clock, upon invitation of Supt. Wilcox the meeting took a recess for luncheon in the hospital dining room. After the luncheon a visit was paid to the hospital storehouse. Dr. Wilson explained the system of purchasing for the state hospital and also explained the system of caring for the products purchased and placed in the storehouse.

Dr. Wilson went into detail the methods used in the buying of large quantities of supplies for the big institution here which today shows a patients' census of 1398. The purchasing agent, Dr. Wilcox stated, cares for all this work and he has plenty to do. A system like our, continued Dr. Wilco, of course perhaps could be improved to some extent, but I doubt if it could to any great extent. We feel we buy the best on the market at the best price and we do not pay so much attention to the discounts offered as we do to quality. Our purchasing agent makes himself acquainted with the goods and does not study so carefully the price. He is so equipped that he knows where the best can be bought and at the same time gives some of his attention to price, but this is the smallest end of his work. Visits are made to factories where the products are manufactured, and in this manner he can tell immediately what is used in such a production.

This talk was most enlightening together with the visit to the storeroom and every member present was most vividly impressed with the system used. A vote of things was extended to Dr. Wilcox for his interesting talk and description of the system used as well as for the delightful luncheon. The meeting then adjourned, the meeting place for the next meeting being left in abeyance with the president and officials of the society.

OBSERVANCE OF SUNDAY MONSIGNOR MAY'S THEME

"Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath day" Christ's question from the gospel read in all of the masses of the Sunday—the sixteenth after Pentecost—was the text from which Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May, rector of St. Patrick's church, preached Sunday morning at the 7:30 low mass. The gospel was Luke 14. 1-11; the epistle of all the masses offered throughout the world was Ephesians 3. 13-21. Monsignor May's theme was observance of Sunday.

The hypocritical Pharisees, while conceding the propriety of aiding a mere beast on the Sabbath, were quick to condemn the ministry of mercy to a mortal spiritually in need of assistance. That there should be a day in which to cease material labors was shown by the Almighty Himself, in His rest on the seventh day, after the labors of the week. The preacher pointed out the logical reasons for a day of rest, if only for the machinery of the body. Even the mad leaders of the French revolution had to concede the wisdom of some period of cessation of labor although they made it the tenth day.

One Thin Woman Gained 10 Pounds in 20 Days

In this connection Msgr. May spoke of the difference between the Sabbath, which is the seventh day of the week, and the Lord's Day—the first day of the week, which latter the Catholic church has observed as a time for special worship of God in His consecrated temples, to seek rest for the soul, new strength for the spiritual side of man's nature, and inspiration for the days to follow. Not that the Catholic religion is a religion for one day of the week only—but for the three hundred and sixty-five days of the year.

The brief sermon were wise admonitions regarding the fidelity with which men should set aside the period of weekly worship, meantime, throughout the entire week seeking to square their lives with that of Christ, to mould their conduct on His, mindful of the purpose of their existence—to so live as to make certain the salvation of their souls.

During the mass Msgr. May gave Holy Communion to a large number of penitents, having the assistance of Rev. Myles P. Galvin. Those receiving the sacrament included the members of the parish Rosary society, of which Miss Annie G. Stanton is president. Next Sunday will be quarterly communion for the Holy Name society.

OBSERVER GIVES DETAILS OF SHENANDOAH DISASTER

Col. Hall, a Survivor, Tells Story to the Naval Court of Inquiry—Commander Lansdowne, Officers and Men Went to Their Death While Attempting to Keep Control of the Great Airship—As Official Observer Failed to See a Single Incident Where Any Person on the Shenandoah Did Not Perform His Duty Efficiently and Well.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 21. (AP)—Lieutenant Commander Zachary Lansdowne and the officers and men with him in the control car went to their death attempting to keep control of the great airship Shenandoah near Ava, Ohio, on Sept. 3, the naval court of inquiry was told today by Colonel C. G. Hall, an official observer for the army air service, a survivor of the disaster.

Despite the terrific storm which was buffeting the great ship about, Colonel Hall said Commander Lansdowne and his men had not lost control of the ship until the actual breaking up of the craft occurred with the twisting off of the control car. The army colonel was in the car and left it only when he was convinced the ship was doomed.

Lieutenant Commander C. E. Rosendahl, navigator, and senior surviving officer, in the first official report ever made of the disaster, added his praise to that of Colonel Hall. He declared that all through the period of uncertainty he did not observe a single incident where any person on the Shenandoah did not perform his duty fully, efficiently and well.

"At no time preceding the disaster while I was in the control car," he said, "was there a single word spoken out of the ordinary conversational tone. This was particularly true in the case of Captain Lansdowne."

Besides these two officers, the court heard the stories, some lengthy and others cryptic, of twenty-one other survivors of the disaster which cost 14 lives and brought to an end the career of the only lighter-than-air fighting ship the nation possessed.

Most of the survivors were agreed that the ship broke in two near the bow when she was making a second rapid ascent after having come down suddenly from the high altitude to which she was tossed by the sudden line squall. A number of the survivors were awakened from sleep either by the rapid rolling and tossing of the ship or the rending noise as the control car and the nose of the craft tore loose from the main section.

There was many a thrilling account of how officers and men saved themselves and each other as the main section settled to the earth after striking clumps of trees and of how the nose, then a free balloon, was brought down and finally held to earth by the shooting up of the helium tanks with pistols and shotguns to release the gas.

Lieutenant Commander Rosendahl, who had been sent out of the control car to supervise the release of gasoline tanks so as to prevent a possible crash, was in the nose section as was Colonel Hall. Rosendahl's narrative told of the rescue of Lieutenant Anderson by means of a rope from the keel where he was barely able to cling on as the gale turned the nose around and around at a rapid rate.

Colonel Hall related that he went to the control car at 5 a. m., and described how the ship first went up, then came down and started up again, turning in circles. It was on the second ascent, the result of a violent gust, that the tail shot up suddenly and there was a rending noise.

"She's gone," Colonel Hall quoted Chief Roger Allen as yelling.

"I called 'everybody out' and began climbing up to the 'cat walk,'" Colonel Hall added. "An officer called 'go up quickly, Colonel.' I ran along the cat walk so as to give others room."

Only a few others came up, however, Commander Lansdowne and the others remaining in the control car to meet their death in a sudden plunge to earth.

Colonel Hall told the court that the ship parted quickly and he saw the after and main section drift away and the control car fall. Commander Rosendahl took charge of the bow section and with the aid of Colonel Hall and Lieut. Anderson and others in this section finally succeeded in getting the bag to earth on a hillside some ten miles from where the main portion of the wreckage fell.

"While I was in the control car," said Colonel Hall, "perfect order and discipline was maintained and duties were performed fully. The conduct of Commander Lansdowne in this emergency and that of the members of the crew was noteworthy. When the ship was going down very rapidly, Commander Lansdowne said: 'She's falling fast now, but she will slow up.'

"I am sure his demeanor and conduct encouraged the officers and crew just as it encouraged me."

Before hearing the accounts of the survivors, the court, at its opening session, decided to call for the present only survivors of the disaster. Later technical experts and others will be placed on the stand and the inquiry may continue through two or three weeks.

There also was introduced in evidence the Shenandoah's sailing orders and itinerary for the western trip. These said that "should the dictates of safety and the weather conditions existing make it advisable, the commanding officer of the Shenandoah is authorized to make such modifications in the above itinerary as he deems necessary." It was added, however, that he should bear in mind that "this route will be published in the press and that many will be disappointed should the Shenandoah fail to follow the approved schedule."

All of the survivors, except two, one of whom is in a hospital, and the other on leave, were present throughout the sessions today. Those examined will be called later for cross examination after the experts have been able to study their statements.

Commander Rosendahl was on the stand only a few minutes, his official report being read to the court by Captain Paul Foley, the judge advocate. Besides being the first official report of the disaster to be made public it proved a thrilling account of what happened before the ship broke in two and of the wild flight of the nose section before it could be landed.

COL. MITCHELL RELIEVED OF ACTIVE DUTY SEPT. 19

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Sept. 21—Colonel William Mitchell center of a storm of criticisms of the army and navy air services made in a series of statements beginning September five, has been relieved of further duty as eighth corps air officer by order of Major General Ernest Hinds, area commander. The order, issued Saturday, was made public today without comment.

Associated Press despatches from Washington, however, indicated that General Hinds felt that Colonel Mitchell's language in recent utterances had been so insubordinate to his superiors that it would not be fair to have him in a place where he should require obedience from his own subordinates.

Captain Thomas W. Hastey, assistant to Colonel Mitchell, automatically becomes acting corps air officer.

Harry C. Short, civilian aide to Colonel Mitchell, declared that the colonel had no comment to make on the order. Mitchell is expected to remain at Fort Sam Houston until summoned by the aircraft investigating board in Washington, or until war department orders are issued transferring him elsewhere.

No definite plans have been made by Colonel Mitchell to go to Washington for the aircraft inquiries Short said the time of Mitchell's appearance probably would determine his mode of travel to the capital.

If sufficient time is available between receipt of the summons and the date of his appearance, Mitchell probably will make the trip overland in his automobile. Otherwise he is expected to go by airplane, Short said.

As far as could be learned, no official summons had been received by Colonel Mitchell to appear before the air board appointed by President Coolidge or before the board investigating the wreck of the Shenandoah, although it is considered a certainty he will be invited to substantiate his sensational charges buried against the "negligent and almost treasonable conduct of the air service."

Colonel Mitchell probably will not be available for duty in the eighth corps area in any event during the next few weeks, it was said at corps headquarters.

TESTIMONY HEARD BY THE SPECIAL AIR BOARD

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21—Opening its inquiry into American air power, the president's special air board brought today to the public view a wider conflict of opinion in the war department as to the relative importance and position of aircraft to other units of the national defense.

For seven and a half hours, the board heard those charged with the administration of the army discuss the policy, fundamental group work and prospects for its air service, about which Acting Secretary Davis there was no cause for alarm, despite that it was operating with inadequate equipment and was in need of additional funds.

Although Mr. Davis and two of his high ranking officers vigorously opposed the creation of a department of national defense with a directing head of all air forces, which has been urged by Colonel William Mitchell, this proposal drew the favor of Major General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the army air service.

General Patrick said he believed such a department would be ultimately advisable in the system of national defense but in the meantime the air service should be made "semi-autonomous," with a position similar to that of the marine corps in its relation to the navy.

Appearing as the first witness, Mr. Davis discussed broadly the policy of the army air service declared there was "no reason to be panicky," about its condition, and that the organization, by successfully completing the world flight, had proven itself worthy of public confidence. He was followed on the stand by Major General John L. Hines, chief of staff, Brig. General Hugh A. Drum, assistant chief of staff, and General Patrick.

The chief of the air service, the last of the four to testify, said that at times his recommendations to the general staff concerning the service had either been ignored or rejected, adding that one of these was to establish the air service as a separate corps which change he made clear would be the first step looking to the department of national defense.

General Patrick likewise declared that the air service was in need of larger appropriations and he presented figures showing the recommendations he had made and the amount actually allowed by the budget.

BRIEF COMPLETED FOR GERALD CHAPMAN APPEAL

HARTFORD, Sept. 21—(A. P.—The brief to be submitted by counsel for Gerald Chapman in support of the arguments to be made at the hearing before the supreme court of errors in October, has been completed by Attorney Nathan O. Freedman and was placed in the hands of the printer today. This is in preparation for Chapman's appeal for a new trial which is based on twelve points of alleged error. New Disarmament Conference Shaping Leaders of the Assembly of the League of Nations Have Reached an Accord on the Matter.

GENEVA, Sept. 21—(A. P.)—The leaders of the assembly of the League of Nations, including the representatives of Great Britain and France, reached an accord tonight regarding preparations for a future disarmament conference, which will be begun immediately. But the council of the league of nations will be permitted to decide the moment when preparations for an international economic conference shall be started.

Under the terms of the agreement, the disarmament conference, which will only be convoked by the league when the council is convinced that security has been achieved, will be undertaken by a new organism to be known as "a commission to study for the reduction and limitation of armaments, with the distinct understanding, however, that all states having special interests in the disarmament problem and which are not now represented in the council will have a place on this commission.

M. Loucheur, of France, explained tonight that he had compromised with the British delegates on the economic conference, when suggested by France, because he did not wish to ruin the chances of the success of the conference, and it must have the co-operation both of Great Britain and Germany, and also the United States if it was to be truly international. He added that if the United States did not participate they would hold a European conference and that, inasmuch as British statesmen wanted time to confer with commercial interests in the homeland, he was convinced nothing would be lost by allowing the council to decide when the preparation work should be inaugurated.

Viscount Cecil of Chelwood tonight declared that Great Britain was immensely interested in the proposed economic conference. He announced that the British government and people were firmly resolved to support the league by every means in their power, so as to increase the league's authority and prestige.

ERSTWHILE WEALTHY GIRL WAS DESTITUTE AT DEATH

CHICAGO, Sept. 21—(A. P.)—Destitute at her death, which the police are investigating, Ruth (Silver Dollar) Tabor, daughter of the late H. A. W. Tabor, former senator from Colorado, which will be buried by city her neighbors in the great city which she scorned as without tenderness. The neighbors when they learned that she might be buried in a pauper's grave, contributed to a fund for her funeral expenses.

Miss Tabor gained the nickname "Silver Dollar" while a baby and was known as "Queen of the Miners" when her father was worth millions of dollars before unlucky investments swept away the fortune. She left Colorado 14 years ago for Chicago to start a literary career, during which she bitterly arraigned the attitude of residents of the big city.

Although the police possessed no actual proof that Miss Tabor was murdered when she died from scalds, received in her apartment, they continued to search for a man known only as "Dill" who recently had been known as her husband.

The police continued to hold Jack Reid, former saloonkeeper and real estate man, whose picture with a message scrawled on the back of it was found in Miss Tabor's apartment. "If I am killed, arrest this man, for he will be directly or indirectly responsible for my death," said the note.

Neighbors heard Miss Tabor scream and found her with her back and legs severely scalded. She died in a few minutes.

Dr. L. G. Walton, who had treated the young woman three years, told the authorities her condition was such that any severe shock might have caused death. Dr. H. G. W. Reinhart, coroner's physician, who performed an autopsy, concurred in that opinion.

Both physicians said she was addicted to the excessive use of liquor and drugs.

"I am going to conquer the world," Miss Tabor wrote early in her career, which ended when Chicago's "dope belt" conquered her.

CARGO OF LIQUOR SHIP WAS TAKEN BY PIRATES

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 21—The captain of the steamer Jean Louis, owned and registered at St. Pierre, Miquelon, brought in a story on his arrival here today of how pirates boarded his vessel and took from it 5,000 cases of whiskey, 150 barrels of malt and numerous cases of other beverages.

The captain described the raid of the pirates on September 10, twenty-two miles southeast of Sankaty Head, Nantucket, where they boarded his ship and kept him and his crew close prisoners, under drawn revolvers. They ransacked the vessel, taking in addition to the liquor supplies, all articles they considered of value, including the captain's personal possessions and the ship's papers.

The pirated booty was transferred to a craft which is alleged to have been out of New York.

INJURED BY AUTO IN WHICH GOV. TRUMBULL WAS RIDING

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 21—George A. Austin of this city, sustained a broken leg here today when an automobile in which Governor John H. Trumbull of Connecticut was riding, passed over him. Witnesses said that the injured man stepped off the sidewalk into the path of a motor cycle officer acting as escort to the governor. The motor cycle struck Austin and threw him under the governor's car. Governor Trumbull was on his way to his hotel after attending governor's day at the Eastern States Exposition here, when the accident occurred.

CHINESE LAUNDRYMAN SHOT DEAD IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Sept. 21—Joe Wong, a Chinese laundryman, was shot and killed tonight in his place of business in the West Roxbury district, by a young Chinese, who escaped after the murder. A few hours earlier, an attempt had been made on the life of another of the Wong family, a merchant in the Chinese section of Boston.

Dithmar Endorsed by The Anti-Lafollettes

Former Lieutenant Governor of Wisconsin to Run as Independent For Senatorial Nomination.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Endorsement of the candidacy of Edward F. Dithmar, former lieutenant governor, a republican running as an independent for the United States senatorship in next week's election, was given today by anti-Lafollette republicans of Wisconsin. Dithmar will oppose Robert M. Lafollette Jr., republican nominee, John M. Work, socialist nominee, George Bauman, socialist-labor nominee, and William G. Bruce, a democrat who did not receive sufficient votes at the primary to run in the final election with party designation, running as an independent.

In a formal statement issued at Oshkosh, W. J. Campbell, chairman of the state executive committee of conservative republicans, paid high tribute to Roy P. Wilcox, of Eau Claire, defeated by Lafollette in the primary for the republican nomination.

Dithmar has not announced when his first campaign address will be made.

Tonight, work spoke at Watertown and Lafollette at Lacrosse. They are the only candidates now making a campaign.

Bruce's financial statement, filed in Madison today, shows his campaign expenses amounted to $2,497.42, and that he received no contributions.

Senator Henrik Shipstead, Minnesota, was paid $58.35 for speaking in the interests of Lafollette, the accounts show.

SENATORS WALSH AND CAPPER EXPRESS VIEWS ON WAR DEBTS

NEW YORK, Sept. 21—(A. P.)—United States Senators Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, returned to this country today from Europe on the Leviathan.

Senators Walsh and Capper talked freely concerning the war debts owed the United States by France and Italy, both expressing the opinion that a generous spirit should be exercised in collecting them.

"In a very just sense," Senator Walsh said, "we have added to these debts." He cited prohibition as one of the ways, saying that the dry laws have cut off valuable revenue producing exports of the debtor nations.

Senator Capper said that he thought the French would have no difficulty in paying their debt. He advocated "reasonable interest and time."

Both Walsh and Robinson spoke of the British Communist Saklatvala who was barred from the United States by Secretary of State Kellogg. Senator Walsh said that he thought the state department had been used by the Baldwin government "to pull chestnuts out of the fire," and Senator Robinson said that while he was not in sympathy with communism or communistic propaganda, that he "really looked with indifference on the subject."

CHINESE IN NEW YORK SIGN TREATY OF PEACE

NEW YORK, Sept. 21—The Hip Sing and On Leong tongs tonight suddenly decided that the time had arrived for cessation of the intermittent hostilities which have occurred recently throughout the country in spite of several treaties.

Accordingly Lee Kee, mediator in the Chinese quarter presided at a solemn meeting where Wong Get, Hip Sing leader, and Lee Gee Min, On Leong chief, met and signed a "hop tung." The meeting was held at the Hotel Waldorf As fast and was attended by Captain John F. Archipoli, head of the gangster squad, was a guest of honor.

The Chinese merchants found real hope of a lasting peace in this last of many treaties. It was explained that the previous treaties were only "wo yuk", which may be broken, but the "hop tung" involves certain religious associations which makes it inviolable.

A check of the Chinese quarters showed that it has suffered heavily from the tong warfare. A number of its inhabitants have been killed. 150 Chinese are now on Ellis Island awaiting deportation, and 115 others are in the Tombs awaiting deportation hearings.

The federal authorities are continuing their campaign to apprehend every Chinese in this country without authority and deport him.

MAN KILLED WHEN TRUCK OVERTURNED NEAR WINSTED

WINSTED, Sept. 21—One man was killed, another critically injured and twelve others more or less injured when the truck in which they were bound for Torrington overturned at Moore avenue and the Torrington road late today.

George Pepin, 50, of Torrington was the man fatally injured. Lusette Erning, 49, of Torrington, suffered a fractured leg and head injuries.

The truck operated by Gaetano Vuffelato and conveying workmen employed on state road construction to their homes in Torrington first collided with a touring car driven by Robert I. Wanklin, of Torrington. It then went up an embankment and overturned throwing the men out.

Authorities made an investigation but no arrests were made.

AMERICAN AVIATORS ARE FIGHTING UNDER SULTAN

French Government Feels That It Cannot Interfere Either With a Recommendation or Instructions—The Aviators in Morocco Are Not Worried Concerning the Ruling Made by the State Department—Last Friday They Dropped Three Tons of Bombs Upon the Moors.

PARIS, Sept. 21—(A. P.)—The status of the American aviators fighting in Morocco is entirely an affair between the Sulton of Morocco and the individual Americans themselves. This statement was made at the French foreign office today upon information that the state department at Washington had [illegible] that the American aviators were serving in Morocco in violation of the laws of the United States.

An official of the foreign office went on to say that the Americans are fighting under the sultan's banner and are officially known as the "Sheriffian Squadron," and that the French government could not interfere either with a recommendation or instructions.

The American aviators now in Morocco were enlisted through the agency of the French ministry of war, but were turned over as a body to the sultan as soon as they arrived in Morocco.

Calm All Along the Front

FEZ, French Morocco, Sept. 21—(A. P.)—The official communique issued tonight says:

"The night and morning were calm all along the front."

Active operations on the French front appear to be halted. The weather remains fine and clear, but atmospheric indications that the rainy season is approaching are evident.

AVIATORS FEEL JUSTIFIED IN SERVING UNDER SULTAN

At EZZAN, Morocco, Sept. 21—(A. P.)—The American aviators of the Sheriffian Squadron are not worried as the state department's ruling that they are violating the laws of the United States, the first hearing of which they received through the Associated Press despatches. The aviators declare that they feel fully justified in serving under the Sultan of Morocco.

The Americans did their hardest work on Friday since they arrived at the front; they dropped three tons of bombs upon Moorish concentrations in morning and afternoon flights. General Nauilin the French commander commended them.

OBSTACLES TO CHINA IN REVISION OF TREATIES

GENEVA, Sept. 21.—(AP)—China is encountering obstacles in her plan to put the league of nations assembly on record as favoring a satisfactory outcome of the forthcoming conference in China for the revision of Chinese treaties.

An agreement seemed in sight on the draft of the resolution to be adopted by the assembly, when suddenly from several states interested in preventing reconsideration of other pacts and especially the treaty of Versailles there sprang up determined opposition to any reference in the resolution to article 19 of the league covenant.

This article declares that the assembly may advise reconsideration of treaties which have become inapplicable, and the Chinese delegation desired the projected resolution to emphasize that the proposed revision of China's treaties with the powers respond to the spirit of the article.

Bowing to the objections expressed in private conversations with the delegations, the Chinese rather than have the resolution defeated, will presumably accept a compromise clause.

A veiled, yet strong warning to Austria that she must abandon any hope of annexation to Germany was the feature of an address delivered before the assembly today by Dr Veverka, Czechoslovak minister to Switzerland.

The assembly formally approved the council's decision to release Austria gradually from all control. It also adopted a resolution expressing satisfaction at the splendid progress of Hungarian reconstruction under Jeremiah Smith of Boston.

MERGER OF THEOLOGICAL SCHOOLS DECLARED VOID

BOSTON, Sept. 21—(A. P.)—Formation of the Theological school in Harvard University in 1922 through a closer affiliation between the Harvard Divinity school and the Andover Theological Seminary was declared void by the Massachusetts supreme court today. In a lengthy decision in favor of the visitors of the theological institution in Phillips Academy, Andover, who brought suit to have the agreement nullified, Chief Justice Rugg held that the merger was contrary to the purposes of the founders of the Andover seminary.

In the absence of Dean Willard L. Sperry of the Theological school, officials at Harvard University were not prepared to make any statement as to what effect the decision would have on future theological instruction at the university. When the two schools were combined a number of Andover professors including Dr. Sperry were added to the Harvard faculty.

A finding that the Andover Seminary for financial reasons would be unable to continue as a separate institution, was made last January by Fred T. Field, appointed master to ascertain the facts with regard to the merger.

He reported to the court that the plan of affiliation with Harvard fulfilled as nearly as possible under existing conditions the purposes for which the seminary was founded.

MISS EDERLE COMPLETELY EXHAUSTED WHEN RESCUED

PARIS, Sept. 21—(A. P.—Usher Helmy, the Egyptian swimmer who took Miss Gertrude Ederle from the water at the end of her unsuccessful attempt to swim the English channel, said tonight when he reached Paris, "Miss Ederle was completely finished and unconscious when I gathered her in."

"She never objected to my touching her or to my assisting her to keep afloat," the giant Egyptian continued. "I believe she was too far gone to know what was going on. She soon recuperated, however, and was in fine physical shape after she had been on the tug a few minutes."

Helmy insisted that it was upon instructions from Jabez Wolffe, Miss Ederle's trainer, whom she now says prematurely stopped her attempt, that he went to Miss Ederle's assistance. These instructions, he said, were both spoken and in sign language. Helmy came to Paris tonight after resting a week at Boulogne following his unsuccessful attempt to swim the channel last Monday.

GUILTY OF STEALING $5,000 WORTH OF JEWELRY

BOSTON, Sept. 21—Albert Best of New York, arrested recently on the charge of stealing $5,000 worth of jewelry from the Boston jewelry firm of Hall and Edwards, pleaded guilty to the indictment in superior criminal court today. He secured a continuance so that he might consult an attorney.

TO USE NEW METHOD FOR "DRY" ENFORCEMENT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21—(By the A. P.)—The program for prohibition enforcement being developed by Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury has received the state wardens' pronouncement of a new federal policy may be expected soon. It will delineate the work which the federal government will attempt to do and will emphasize that part of enforcement to be left entirely to state and local authorities.

Mr. Andrews as yet has nothing to say respecting his plans except in the general way that he believes the chief function of the federal government is stoppage of the sources of the illegal trade. In this connection it was disclosed today that the redoubtable field marshal had ordered dismissal of a prohibition agent attached to the New Orleans administrator's office for spending time and money in pursuing, searching and later arresting a woman motorist when he found she carried a pint flask, perhaps a third full.

As a result of the agents' action which Mr. Andrews regards as having rendered the federal law "ridiculous and absurd" the assistant secretary has informed all administrators and their deputies of details of the case. This was done, he said, for the guidance of the case. This was done, he said, for the guidance of the enforcement personnel, and he described the dismissal as a disciplinary move.

Disclosure of the incident, however, was regarded as the first step in Mr. Andrews to define the work which his reorganized force will be expected to do and at the same time point out to state and local authorities how much being left to them. Mr. Andrews has believed ever since he took over the enforcement duties that the biggest job the federal corps had to perform was annihilation of the wholesale and importing businesses handling illicit liquor, and the dismissal of the agent for arrest of a "tin pocket violator" was accepted as meaning that he now prepared to more specifically devide the enforcement between the army and the state and local forces.

BRITISH TROOPS TO ENGAGE IN MIMIC WARFARE TODAY

ANDOVER, England, Sept. 21—England is on the eve of a great clash of arms. Two armies comprising 40,000 trained men, equipped with all modern appliances of war were encamped tonight along the Little River in Wiltshire Downs awaiting the coming of dawn, which is the zero hour for beginning the struggle. The battle ground extends over some 400 square miles.

The troops of England's home army are encamped in mud ankle deep, which brought dour smiles to the faces of the veterans as they listened to the grumblings of the lads who were too young to follow the flag in the last real war.

One force known as the blue army is drawn up backs to London, as a defense for the capital against the invaders. This army is under command of Lieutenant General Sir Philip Chetwode, a great cavalry leader whose corps was responsible for the capture of Jerusalem in the late war.

Opposing him is the red army, whose object is to break through and gain the roads to London.

MOTORIST FINED $100 AND COSTS AFTER REFUSING TO PAY $2

MILFORD, Sept. 21.—(AP)—A motorist's refusal to pay $2 at police headquarters Saturday night for parking proved costly to him in city court today when he was fined $100 and costs, charged with operating under the influence of liquor. He has taken an appeal of the court's decision to the court of common pleas, New Haven, October 1.

Following James Jose's refusal to pay the $2 fine for parking in the restricted section, and his change of mind to pay which the police did not grant, State Policeman Hanford Bigelow followed Jose and arrested him on the charge of operating under the influence of liquor.

21 DIVORCES WERE GRANTED IN PROVIDENCE YESTERDAY

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 21—Twenty one petitioners were granted divorces by three judges when the September divorce term opened in the superior court here today. A majority of the cases were heard on depositions with the parties absent from court and the testimony read by counsel. Neglect to provide, continued drunkenness and extreme cruelty were some of the grounds upon which the separations were regarded.

WILLIMANTIC

At St. Mary's church Monday morning at 7 o'clock, Miss Dora Baillargeon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Baillargeon, became the bride of Benjamin J. Cousineau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin T. Cousineau, of Bristol, Vt. Rev. H. C. Belec performed the ceremony, also sang the nuptial high mass. St. Mary's choir with Mrs. J. F. Gaudreau at the organ rendered the wedding music. Attending the bride was her sister, Miss Yvonne Baillargeon, of Monson, Mass. Henry St. George, a cousin of the groom, was best man.

The bride was gowned in pencil blue Elizabeth crepe with picture hat to correspond. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Going away she wore an ensemble suit of rosewood shade, with hat to match.

The bridesmaid wore a brown satin frock with picture hat to match and carried an arm bouquet of Ophelia roses. The ceremony was followed by a breakfast at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Cousineau are honeymooning in Vermont.

The Telephone Bulletin has the following to say of a local young woman, under the heading of Helpful Service: "From Willimantic comes the news of a fine Public Relations act performed by one of our girls. A young lady employed by a company in Willimantic was seriously ill with appendicitis, and it was necessary for her to have an operation. Miss Ruth Weatherhead, daughter of A. L. Weatherhead, exchange manager, employed in the commercial office of the Willimantic exchange, knew the girl and the circumstances and resolved to do something to help. She made all the arrangements for and ran a most successful dance to get money for her sick friend. Many who could not go to the dance were glad to buy tickets and Miss Weatherhead realized about $80. We admire Miss Weatherhead's thoughtfulness and her ability to devise a method and the carrying out of it to raise the money."

Mrs. Lillian L. Anthony, wife of Andrew M. Anthony, died at her home in Windham Sunday. She was born in Wilsonville, March 3, 1875, a daughter of Clayton T. and Annie Converse Lyon. Besides her husband she is survived by her mother, Mrs. Annie Beville, and a brother, Julian Beville, of Coventry.

The death of Mrs. Anna M. Crandall Thompson, 45, occurred at the Card Home for the Aged Saturday night. She was born in Phoenix, R. I., April 14, 1880, a daughter of Stephen and Waity Potter Whitman. She leaves a brother and a sister.

Mrs. Julia Larkham, 75, a life-long resident of the town of Mansfield, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Randall Norton, in Guilford, Sunday. Besides the latter she leaves two other daughters, Mrs. Carl Robinson and Miss Josie Larkham, both of Danbury, and several grandchildren.

The funeral of Mary, wife of Thomas Henry, was held in New Haven Saturday morning with a requiem high mass at St. Aden's church at 9 o'clock, Rev. John McGivney officiating. The funeral cortege arrived in this city in the afternoon and burial took place in the family plot at St. Joseph's cemetery at 2 o'clock. Rev. Father McGivney and Rev. Charles M. Kelley of this city read the committal prayers. The bearers were Thomas, John, Henry and Patrick O'Loughlin, nephews; Thomas Kelleher and James Haggerty. Mrs. Henry was a former resident of this city. Killourey Brothers had charge of the local arrangements.

The funeral of Sidney Jones was held from his home in Providence, R. I., Monday morning with burial in the family plot in St. Joseph's cemetery here. Rev. Henry E. Quinn read the committal service. Local arrangements were in charge of Killourey Brothers.

The first in a series of thirty whists under the auspices of the Windham Girls' club was held at the club rooms Monday evening with Miss Mary Day, chairman of the committee. Hostesses for the evening were Miss Alice Peterson and Miss Ethel Connor. The proceeds of the whists will be for the maintenance of the club.

It was stated Monday that the repairs under way at the First Congregational church would be completed on or about October 1st, and at that time a rededication of the edifice would take place. The installation of Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock as pastor of the parish will take place at an early date.

William Kaminski and Stanley Budniski, youthful burglars, who confessed to robberies in this city, Coventry and Mansfield and who were convicted of statutory burglary at the superior court session in Putnam last Friday, were transferred by Sheriff Charles A. Gates from the county jail at Brooklyn, Monday to Cheshire reformatory.

Joseph J. Grimes, a member of Engine Company No. 2 jumped into the road and stopped a horse which had run away and was traveling at a fast pace past the Engine House, Monday morning.

JUDGE AND PROSECUTOR DISAGREE IN LIQUOR CASES

(Special to the Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 21—Judge Frank H. Foss and Prosecuting Attorney Harry S. Gaucher arrived at a deadlock in police court Monday morning, when the latter's request to nolle the cases against Isadore (Jake) Heller and Sarah Heller, charged with violations of the liquor law, was refused by the court, following the discharge of Isadore Heller on a charge of actual sale of liquor. Heller had been charged with making a sale of a half pint of liquor to Louis A. Marrotte, of Coventry, on the evening of either August 7 or 8, last.

Judge Foss's decision that he would discharge the accused immediately stirred the ire of County Investigator William E. Jackson, who had secured the evidence, and of Prosecuting Attorney Gaucher. A few words passed between the two during which investigator Jackson made mention of "instructions received from State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford." Prosecutor Gaucher then asked for a nolle of both cases. When this was refused an argument resulted as to whether the court or the prosecutor held the power to nolle cases. The court upheld its right and ordered the case against Sarah Heller to be taken up, and if necessary, with Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Frank P. Fenton. Having no alternative, Prosecutor Gaucher, although still maintaining his power to nolle cases, submitted to the order of the court. Incidental to the cases was the fact that Prosecuting Attorney Gaucher and Attorney Arthur T. Kelley, for the defense, are brothers-in-law.

Testimony for the state in the Isadore Heller case was given by Louis A. Marrotte, the purchaser of the liquor, investigator William E. Jackson and Federal Prohibition Officer William S. Congdon, who raided the Heller place. Both officers claimed that Heller had made convincing inference as to his guilt when he had stated that he "would not sell any more." Pierre Marrotte, a supernumerary officer of the police department testified that about six weeks ago he had warned Heller not to sell any more liquor to his father, Louis A. Marrotte, as the latter came home in a riotous condition after drinking liquor which he said he had purchased from Heller.

Isadore Heller made a flat denial of having sold liquor to Marrotte or any one else and that what he had told the officers when he said "I won't do it any more" was in relation to leaving his garage door open, thirty-five gallons of alcohol having been discovered in the garage by the raiders.

Attorney Kelley affirmed in his argument that the State had established a weak case on the charge of actual sale and that the testimony given by Louis Marrotte could not be relied upon as the man was not positive as to just what day he had purchased the liquor on and further said that he had never told anyone up to the time of court where he had purchased the liquor, when it was obvious that he had done otherwise. Attorney Gaucher stated that he rested his case on facts. That Marrotte had purchased liquor from Heller and testified to such under oath. Judge Foss then gave it as his opinion that he could not find a conviction "beyond a reasonable doubt" and discharged the accused.

Sarah Heller was charged with keeping liquor in her possession with intent to sell and reputation. She denied both accusations and said that she could not account for the presence of thirty-five gallons of alcohol in her garage. Investigator Jackson told of raiding the place and securing the evidence. At that time Mrs. Heller said she would assume the blame. Federal Officer William S. Congdon who accompanied Jackson on the raid testified that Mrs. Heller had told him shortly after the raid that "she did not sell much."

A series of "reputation" witnesses was called to the witness stand on the charge of reputation held against Mrs. Heller. Among them was Chief of Police Allan McArthur who testified that he had had no complaints against the Heller place in two years and that he went by the place several times a day and often went inside to purchase cigars. To his knowledge and belief he could say nothing against the reputation of the establishment. His testimony was seconded by: Raymond L. Angier, George B. Hayes, R. G. Remington, George S. Elliott, C. Winfield Noyes, William H. Henkin and Postmaster Walter R. King and Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton. All admitted having heard rumors against the reputation of Heller's store, relative to the sale of liquor there.

Rev. Frederic C. Williams, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church testified that persistent rumors had come to him regularly that liquor could be purchased at Heller's and as a member of the community he believed that the place had a bad reputation. Clara Upton testified that on three occasions she had given a man named Charles Profit, $1.50 with which to buy liquor at Heller's for her. On one occasion she had seen him go into and come out of the place and then hand her the pint bottle of moonshine which she, later drank. The third time she gave Profit $1.50 he failed to return.

Judge Foss found Mrs. Heller guilty on both counts and imposed a fine of $100 and costs on each, making a total of $326.75. A ten-day jail sentence was also imposed and suspended for one year. The case constituted Mrs. Heller's first offense, but would have been her husband's second if she had not shouldered the blame.

LONGO, McCARTHY, BENDETT, INJURED WHEN CAR OVERTURNS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 21.—Three local men, Michael Longo, proprietor of a fruit and confectionery and smoke shop on Railroad street; Michael E. McCarthy, of 79 Lewiston avenue, a plumber, and Maurice Bendett, proprietor of The Wood Smoke Shop, sustained injuries and a Chrysler touring car owned by Joseph J. Grimes, of this city, and operated by Bendett was partially wrecked, when the machine overturned on the Danielson-Willimantic highway in the town of Brooklyn about 3 o'clock Monday morning. Longo was the most severely injured and for a time his chances for recovery were held doubtful by his friends. He sustained a fractured pelvis, ruptured kidney and fractured ribs and injuries to his leg and arm. Hope that he was not fatally injured was revived Monday forenoon when he regained consciousness and he appeared to rally as the day passed. McCarthy is suffering from a fracture to his leg and minor lacerations. Bendett, the driver, received painful lacerations and bruises, but was able to leave the hospital Monday morning. The three men had started out for a ride and when in the vicinity of Brooklyn decided to turn around and return to this city. It is understood that when the brakes were applied the machine skidded and overturned, pinning underneath the three passengers, who were all riding in the front seat. A machine owned by a New York man arrived shortly after the mishap and brought the injured men to St. Joseph's hospital here. It is said that the section of highway where the accident happened is particularly slippery, causing the car to become uncontrollable.

Bendett is a former resident of Norwich. Longo is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ignazio Longo, of Water street, Danielson.

The damage to the car consists of a demolished radiator and hood and broken windshield glass and rods. The fact that the top was folded on the machine caused it to settle closely to the ground and break off the steering wheel rim. The machine was first towed to Danielson and then to Leonard Brothers' Annex in this city.

State Police Officer George L. Gardiner, of Danielson, is conducting an investigation of the accident.

Mice Like Lipsticks

A California boy has found a new use for the lipstick. In the garage in Lankershim where he works he has been trying to find a bait that would help him to rid the place of mice. All the usual baits had failed. One evening the boy's sister calling at the garage, dropped her lipstick. Next day it was found that the mice had devoured it. Procuring another like it, the boy set his traps and in the morning they were full of cheerylipped mice.

Lower — and Better

Graham Brothers second price reduction in four months, announced September 9th, is simply a reflection of the public's confidence in Graham Brothers Trucks.

The new 1-ton Truck chassis price, f. o. b. Detroit, is—Without greatly increased production this latest exceptional cut would have been impossible—except for a sacrifice of the quality that has brought Graham Brothers so quickly to first position among the world's exclusive manufacturers of motor trucks.

The fact is that Graham Brothers Trucks are better than they ever were—and any owner will tell you they have always been remarkably good.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Danielson may have the honor this season of being represented by a pair of guards on the Connecticut Agricultural college 'varsity football team. It is conceded that Paul Bitgood is a fixture at left guard for the season, unless unforeseen injuries relegate him from a place that he has well earned. Antonio Longo, who is a powerful player and holder of the college shot-put record, would likely be conceded a fixture at right guard were it not for the fact that he has a knee about which there is some distrust on account of a severe injury he sustained in playing a previous season. If that knee is good, Longo may be depended upon to hold down the assignment to the right of the center. Bitgood and Longo are Danielson boys. They were team mates on Killingly High school basketball, baseball and football teams and have gone along together with the Aggies, where they both have made splendid records.

Monday morning, funeral services were held at St. James' church for Mrs. Katherine Murray, who died the past week at Catskill, N. Y. Rev. Joseph Deschaux, M. S., Rev. James McCarthy, M. S., and Rev. F. X. Richards, M. S., were officers of the solemn mass of requiem, which was attended by relatives and many friends of Mrs. Murray's. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements. The bearers were John Harington of Brooklyn, John Harrington of Putnam, Frank Harrington, Richard Neilan, Charles Weldon and Edward Staples.

At Brooklyn this (Tuesday) morning the gates of the fairgrounds will swing open and the hustle and bustle of arranging for the 76th annual exhibition of the Windham County Agricultural society will be in full swing—for this is Entry Day. A rush of exhibitors is expected. Every indication points to the fair being ready for the first big day of the fair on Wednesday. In view of the fact that interest in the fair has grown steadily during the past few years, it is anticipated that this year's attendance will top that of all the years that have gone before. State highways and the development of the motor vehicle industry has served to drew grater and greater crowds to this fair as the years have gone by, and the fair has been deserving of the attention it has received.

Two cases in which infractions of were heard at Monday's session of the the motor vehicle laws were charged town court. Walter Adams, charged with reckless driving was fined $25 and costs. His car was wrecked Saturday night on the Providence road two miles east of here in a crash with a Rhode Island car. Gerald Morrissette, Putnam, charged with infraction of one of the road rules governing motor vehicle operation, was fined $5 and costs.

If the number of new voters made in Killingly this year is any basis for judgment, there is little interest among the younger people in the political affairs of the town. Only 49 voters were made at the week end. This is less than half the number admitted during the average year prior even to the days when women had the right of franchise. Danielson, the most populous section of the town, provided but a few candidates for admission to the electorate. One applicant for admission was rejected on the ground that he was without naturalization papers.

Upward of 3,000 fingerling trout—a total of 17 cans—were released Monday in brooks within a few miles of Danielson by members of the Danielson Rod and Gun club co-operating with the state fish commission. On Wednesday another consignment of 30 cans—about 6,000 trout—are to be received here and distributed. Members of the Rod and Gun club provide the machines needed to transport the fish to the designated brooks and see that the trout are released promptly and according to the most approved practice Including the shipment due here tomorrow, 130 cans of trout—approximately 26,000 fish—will have been released in brooks hereabouts since the close of the last trout fishing season. Still other consignments of trout are expected later in the season.

Under a statute regulation applying for the first time this current year, the town clerk of any Connecticut town is required to report the names of voters newly admitted as electors to the Connecticut town of which they were previously resident.

In Killingly, therefore, following Saturday's making of voters here, Town Clerk Frank T. Preston will report within a week, as required by the law, that two voters formerly registered in Torrington, two formerly registered in Thompson and one each formerly voters, respectively, in Bozrah, Brooklyn and Putnam have been admitted as voters in Killingly. The town clerks of these towns, upon receiving Mr. Preston's notices, will in turn inform their registrars and have the names of these voters stricken from the lists of these towns. This arrangement will prevent any person voting twice in any given election.

Hark ye all! Cloud Digger's 74th semi-annual long range weather forecast is available for a waiting world. It covers the period from 8.44 a. m. tomorrow (Wednesday) morning, the beginning of the autumnal equinox to that period along about March 21 of next year when the usual "economical" spring storm is supposed to be due.

This latest forecast of the Cloud Digger published in full in The Bulletin Monday is a dour document. It foretells a winter of severe cold with many storms. It is to be something "turrible." Winter will be here early, presumably to make the coal strike of greater interest than it is at present.

Michael Longo, 32, resident of Willimantic and son of Mr. and Mrs. Ignazio Longo of Water street, Danielson, was severely injured Monday morning when the automobile in which he was riding with Maurice Bendett of Willimantic as driver overturned on the state highway in the town of Hampton, on the Danielson-Willimantic road. The car wrecked was practically a new Chrysler owned by James J. Grimes, of Willimantic. State Officer George Gardner of the Danielson barracks checked up the accident, which is said to have occurred when Bendett applied the brakes of the machine while preparing to turn it around. The highway surface was wet and slippery at the time. Longo suffered a broken leg, broken arm, three broken ribs and head injuries. He was unconscious when picked up and rushed to St. Joseph's hospital in Willimantic and for a time it was believed that he was fatally hurt, but there was encouragement during the afternoon that he will recover. Bendett, who formerly lived in Norwich, was not seriously hurt. Danielson relatives of the injured man hurried over to Willimantic upon learning of the accident. Longo was born in Danielson and lived here as a boy.

PUTNAM

The general committee in charge of the Armistice day celebration is to meet in the Chamber of Commerce rooms this (Tuesday) evening. All organizations that did not send representatives to the last meeting are expected to have representatives there. Preceding the meeting the directors of the Chamber of Commerce will hold their regular meeting and supper at the Putnam Inn at 6:30 o'clock. The committee has been notified that the Putnam Boy Scouts stand ready to do anything they may be called upon to do.

Miss L. Lorena Gallant, who was graduated from the Hartford Hospital Training School for Nurses in May arrived home Saturday, having completed the three years required before receiving her final certificate. She will spend a few weeks in Putnam at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Gallant, on Church street, before beginning active service.

Miss Corinne M. Wilson of the 1925 class at Putnam High school has entered the New England Conservatory of Music at Boston to begin her musical studies.

Mrs. Herbert Miles and two children have returned home after having spent the summer at Lake Winnipesaukee, N. H.

Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, of Norwich, will hold a clinic at the Day Kimball hospital today (Tuesday).

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Mellor have been at Providence and New Bedford for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Macdonald and little daughter Kay left Saturday for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Holmes, at Mt. Vernon, N. Y. Mr. Macdonald returned home Monday but Mrs. Macdonald and daughter remained for a visit of a week.

A shower was given at the Day Kimball hospital by the nurses in honor of two of their number who are soon to be married, Miss Theresa Bayer and Miss Margaret Smith. A luncheon was served in the dining room, which was decorated in blue and white. Both young ladies received many pretty and useful presents. Miss Smith is to marry, Oct. 3, Harry I. Roberts, of Putnam, now living at Providence, and Miss Bayer will be married some time in November to Dr. William J. Reiss, who has a laboratory at Bensonhurst, Long Island.

Miss Celesta Reaves, of this city, has been elected vice-president of her class at the Bay Path Institute, Springfield. This is Miss Reaves' senior year at this school.

Miss Lucy Towne, of East Putnam, has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Adfer Towne, of Bradley street.

Lloyd Cutler, of East Putnam, is one of the electrical instructors at the State Trade school in Putnam.

Mrs. R. D. McAllister, daughter of Mrs. Janet Sheperd, of South Woodstock, has been seriously ill at the hospital in New Milford. Mr. McAllister was formerly superintendent of rural schools in this district and lived in Putnam until his marriage.

EVIL-DOERS IN FOSTER, GETTING TOUCH OF THE LAW

DANIELSON, Sept. 21—Foster, a neighboring town over the border in Rhode Island, is receiving the attention of raiders from the membership of the Rhode Island state troopers. In the latest raid at the "Pete" Young place, about a mile and a half east of East Killingly, over the Rhode Island line two men and two women were arrested and later presented at a special session of the Eighth District Rhode Island court. Andrew Young, 63, proprietor of the place, charged with keeping a disorderly house, was bound over to the grand jury under bonds of $1,000, after he had waived examination.

Benoit Gallant, 27, charged with aiding and abetting for the purpose of committing prostitution, in two cases, waived examination and admitted sufficient evidence to convict. He was placed on probation with the understanding that he would leave Rhode Island immediately and return to New Hampshire.

Ruth Norton, 25, who gave Willimantic as her home city, and Mary Card, 27, claiming Eagleville, Conn., as her home, each charged with being lewd and wanton, were also placed on probation upon their agreement to keep out of Rhode Island. Both were warned by Judge Dubois, who presided, that if they were arrested in Rhode Island again on the charge against them they would be sent to jail for a term of from six months to three years, and without further trial, they having admitted sufficient evidence to convict.

These four were the only ones who were taken into custody when the raid at the Young place was made, but while the officers were at work around the place at least six machines occupied by men drove into the yard. Several of these cars were from Danielson and other points in nearby Connecticut territory. One car was from New London. The driver of this machine averred he was looking for the road to Providence and had stopped to ask directions. Other drivers said they had stopped for gasoline. The Young place is in wild and sparsely settled country, about seven miles east of Danielson, on an old country highway.

Of interest is the fact that two Connecticut state police from the Danielson barracks were with the Rhode Island troopers when the raid was staged, this being of special interest, in view of the fact that the Young place is over in Rhode Island.

FLY-TOX

Every Bottle GUARANTEED

FLY-TOX was developed at Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by the Rex Fellowship. In a simple, easy and thoroughly effective way, FLY-TOX kills flies, moths, mosquitoes, fleas, ants, roaches and other insects. It's so convenient to saturate the air with clouds of FLY-TOX. Flies, by merely winging through the mist, become affected with the strange action of FLY-TOX, and die. This mist lingers just long enough to do its work. It then evaporates and leaves only a pleasant, clean odor. Wall paper or drapes are not stained. FLY-TOX is harmless to humans. Those stray, elusive flies that invade the most carefully screened homes, are quickly and easily eliminated with FLY-TOX.

BRADFORD STATE ATTORNEY, TO SUCCEED C. E. SEARLS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Sept. 21.—Howard C. Bradford has been appointed state attorney for Windham county to fill out the unexpired term of Charles E. Searls, who died in July of this year.

A member of the law firm of which Mr. Searls was the head has assisted him in the preparation and prosecution of criminal suits; after his death he was named as special state attorney.

The appointment which is made by all the judges of the supreme and superior court of the state has been accepted as practically a foregone conclusion, as he was the logical candidate, and qualified in every way to fill the duties of the position. He has been a member of the firm of Searls, Russell and Bradford since 1916. The other member is Judge Frank F. Russell.

Mr. Bradford is a native of Putnam, a graduate of Putnam High school in the class of 1903. Several years ago he married Miss Edna O. Clarke, of Woodstock. They have two children and live in an attractive home on South Main street. Mr. Bradford is known intimately to the members of the bar of this county, has a high standing as a lawyer and a citizen. He has received today congratulatory messages from all parts of the county and from many people in other parts of the state.

He is one of the leading members of the Putnam Rotary club and took an active part in its formation.

Poor Lighting Increases Manufacturing Costs

Good Lighting Lowers Them

Good lighting is as essential to low cost production as up-to-date machines and skilled workers.

Only 75% of all working time is spent under daylight. 25% under artificial light.

Yet four of every five plants are poorly lighted. Is your plant one of them?

Good artificial lighting in your plant can give 15% increase or more in production or its equivalent in lowered manufacturing cost.

This problem of proper lighting in the factory is one of great importance and may mean the difference between profits and losses when the balance sheet is drawn.

Without obligation to you we will gladly investigate your lighting needs and recommend improvements that will enable you to decrease your cost of production by increasing production with the same men and equipment.

To Whiten "Off-Color" Teeth

and Firm Gums to healthy color quickly, as dentists advise

HERE is a simple test that proves the truth of the recent dental statement that dull, "off-color" teeth can be lightened amazingly, even given dazzling whiteness.

In a few days you can work a great change in the color of your teeth. Can give them clear and charming gleam.

There is a new way in tooth and gum care. A way that removes the dingy film that clouds your teeth. A film that absorbs discolorations and keeps teeth dingy looking.

Just run your tongue across your teeth. And you will feel that film. It is the great enemy of pretty teeth and healthy gums.

It clings to the teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It forms a breeding place for germs. It lays your gums open to bacterial attack, your teeth open to decay. Those germs, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Old-time methods failed in successfully fighting film. So ugly teeth were common. You must remove it. Ordinary brushing won't do it satisfactorily. Under it are the clear, whiter teeth you envy in others.

Now modern science has perfected an effective film combatant, called Pepsodent. It acts to curdle film, then remove it. It firms and protects gums; beautifies teeth quickly and correctly.

Mail coupon for full 10-day tube to try. Or purchase large tube at any drug store. Note the amazing difference in your teeth ... in your whole appearance.

FIRE PREVENTION

It is a matter of nearly two weeks before the date set by President Coolidge in his proclamation fixing October fourth as the beginning of Fire Prevention week, but for the proper participation therein there is need for a careful consideration of the reasons for such a week.

Certainly when it is realized that fire last year caused a property loss of more than a half billion dollars, an increase over the year before, and the loss of 15,000 lives there is good reason for doing what every individual can do for the reduction of the fire hazard.

Like many of the accidents which occur every year, week and day, a large percentage of the fires are preventable. They ought not to happen and they wouldn't if there was the exercise of a little more care on the part of those who are negligent in this respect.

When it is realized that the fire waste is growing larger each year in spite of the records which are kept to show what could be prevented, it indicates the wrong attitude on the part of those who should but do not shoulder their share of responsibility and use reasonable care. There are too many who take the attitude of "Let George do it" and figure that as long as there is a fire department it should deal with such matters. They are unmindful of the fact that such large outlays are made necessary for fire departments because of just that heedlessness which makes too many fires possible.

It is not to be expected that we are going to escape without fires. All are not preventable but so many of them are that even though the country is growing and a greater amount of property is at risk from year to year the fire loss ought to be showing a decrease instead of an increase each year. It not only can but it would if there was a proper response on the part of the public in general to the needs of fire prevention.

THE PROHIBITION REPORT

The report which has been made to the Federal Council of Churches by Rev. Frederick E. Johnson on the social consequences of prohibition has presented the matter in what must be regarded as an unbiased light. It at least hasn't been overdone on the side of prohibition just because it is a report of the organization of churches. It indicates that a search has been made to get at the bottommost facts and to reveal the truth of the situation having to do with prohibition.

It doesn't picture the situation as entirely satisfactory. It directs attention to the resentment that has been experienced in connection with enforcement, the opposition to the law and the weakness in the enforcement forces. It shows conditions which have been found under prohibition and it deals with the statistics on crime since the dry law went into effect.

The report has been made the subject of attack by those who are strong advocates of prohibition. There is no question but what it has been received with general approval by the wet forces. There are many ways in which it can be pointed out as supporting the contension that prohibition cannot be and is not being enforced, that prohibition has been harmful to the country and that the test of it thus far is unsatisfactory.

Such facts as have been found in the research have been set forth. The report has not put forth only what is favorable to prohibition, but acknowledges it, but what is going to be the reaction to it? Are the dry forces going to sit down under it, or are they going to insist upon carrying the fight onward with a greater degree of success? Does it mean that the disclosures are such that there is established a foundation right among the drys for a modification of the existing law?

The report is one that is bound to be extensively used both for and against prohibition and there's no mistaking the fact that the wets are delighted at the finding.

THE COAL SITUATION

As the result of the conference of the governor of Pennsylvania with the heads of the operators and miners there have been no developments. Perhaps it is a bit too soon for the governor to assemble the facts that were put forth by the respective leaders and get command of the situation in such a manner as to warrant any move being made by this time. Whether it will have any bearing at all upon the strike which has now been under way for three weeks will be known in time.

Not a little significance is to be attached to the report that the governor and the head of the miners devoted no little time in their discussion to the consideration of the reduction in the freight rates for the transportation of bituminous coal. The reduction was ordered by the interstate commerce commission and if means of course encouragement for the use of the bituminous coal as a substitute for the anthracite when that cannot be obtained, or when any advance in price causes the consuming public to look elsewhere.

Heretofore the coal strike has found the consumer facing a shortage of fuel and obliged to pay exorbitant prices for such anthracite as was available. With substitutes developed to the point where they can be had in quantity that will correspond with the demand the chance to bring pressure to bear on the public as a means of ending the coal strike disappears. With lower rates for bituminous there is couse for concern by both operator and miner because every time a substitute is utilized it means harm to the anthracite market which may be permanent, and a decrease in the demand for hard coal is something to worry Pennsylvania which has a monopoly on this product and which depends upon the collection of a tax on every ton mined.

Thus there is a good and sufficient reason why all those who have been putting the burden on the coal consumer has a chance to indulge in through the use of substitutes. It is a time when the consumer will make a mistake if he doesn't look to his welfare for the future as well as the immediate present.

NO THIRD TICKET

Even the mayor of New York will admit that he was given plenty of advice in advance of his decision to run for reromination to cause him to abandon such thought but he waved it aside as not worthy of attention. He has since found out that those who gave such advice knew what they were talking about, knew sentiment there was kindled or being kindled against him and were able to use better judgment concerning his chances that he could.

Whatever may have been his insistence upon running in the nomination primary after he knew he had lost the support of Tammany, it becomes evident now that Mayor Hylan is more disposed to listen to similar advice to that which he discarded in favor of that which urged him on. There's no question but what he could have received much support had he decided to run as an independent candidate. The primary campaign stirred up much resentment and it was possible to capitalize it, but the chances that he could win were not impressive. He has therefore decided that he will not be a candidate in spite of certain of his backers. It would have been a losing fight even if it had added fireworks to the campaign.

This decision has put an end ot the thought of a third ticket and the contest will rest between Waterman and Walker. It is a time when New York should understand the importance of a thorough housecleaning. Dropping Hylan doesn't mean getting rid of Tammany policies. Electing Waterman would and even though there is no third party ticket it will be interesting to note what effect the primary campaign squabble has upon the tussle at the polls election day.

GOOD LAW, PROPER ENFORCEMENT

Even the fact that Senator Borah has indicated that he would devote some of his efforts in behalf of the excluded Saklatvala doesn't arouse any increased enthusiasm in behalf of the radical of radicals, and for the senior to raise his voice against any member or against the enforcement of the law of this country doesn't strengthen the rating of the man from Idaho.

Senator Borah puts himself in the position of welcoming an individual of incendiary views, who has announced that "I am out to work for a revolution and for the day when the workers will control the whole world. But before this comes you will have to face the cold steel." He seems to think that we should take down the bars which were established for the purpose of keeping out just such dangerous characters and rush to greet those who would come here and advocate in the hall of the house of representatives at Washington that there should be adopted here and throughout the world the principles which have been enunciated at Moscow.

The fact of the matter is that there are too many such individuals to be found in this country at the present time and there is no excuse for tolerating the addition of even one more. Even the way in which the western senator seems to rush to the support of the Parsee who holds a seat in the British house of commons doesn't serve to create increased prestige either for the senator or for the individual excluded. The whole affair gives a feeling of satisfaction that there exists the law for the barring of undesirables and that the officials authorized to enforce it are alive to their responsibilities.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The situation in the near east doesn't show any improvement in the peace symptoms.

The man on the corner says: How many were tempted by the hot sun to go back to the straw hat.

Four persons read the Bible through in Boston last week in less than 58 hours. Will they undertake to read it through backward?

While Mayor Hylan of New York says he will retire to private life he might have said that he would offer no further resistance to being shelved.

Those who can get but three tons of anthracite at a time in Massachusetts are kicking themselves for not putting in their whole supply last spring.

Probably President Palmer of the fleet corporation feels that the more the shipping board members oppose him the more confident he is that he's right.

No one opens his home to a self admitted crook who promises to continue his nefarious business, and yet that is what some would have this government do with Saklatvala.

That auto driver who admitted to the police that he had alcohol only to find out that he had bought water and kerosene is probably charging his misfortune to the prohibitionists.

MASCULINE BEAUTY

"Well, the war's on!" announced the tall, lank householder who had been peering out of the window toward the bungalow next door. "Either the bride and groom that were have had a fight and he was too mad to shave or else he is so sure of her that he is bored or maybe he just doesn't care! Yessir, Claude is out there mowing the lawn with a beard that is sufficient to make several yards of chicken fence. If you are interested in social phenomena!"

"When a young and handsome man is willing that a young and pretty woman should view his facial map in the state in which Claude's countenance now is you may know he has packed away the Valentino stuff in moth balls. It is really an automatic renunciation of romance, because no girl wants to press her cheek against something like a coco fiber mat or a second-hand currycomb.

"This being so, fancy the result when a man so presents himself to his beloved, who is ultra critical! After a girl has taken her fiance in hand and insisted ob London ties and yellow gloves, has terrified him into looking a Sunday cutaway in the face, with its accompanying silk hat, and has bullied him into wearing a gardenia in his buttonhole, she sort of feels as though her life's work were undone when after she marries him he reverts to the primitive the way this Claude has done!

"I have no doubt that it you went over there this minute you would find his poor little bride all stricken and pale, moaning, 'what'll-I-do, oh, whatellido?'

"There are several ways Claude's wife could handle this crisis. She can sit at the window with tears streaming down her face until Claude notices her and comes running and then she can beg him piteously to remove this shame from her life and let her hold up her head again among the neighbors. She can stalk to the back door bearing a rolling pin and give him five minutes and ten seconds to redeem himself and once more take his place among civilized men. She can telephone the insane commission for their huskiest relay or she can pack her wardrobe and go back home till he reforms.

"However, she will do none of these eminently sensible and effective things. Probably she will say when he comes in that he looks like a tramp and why doesn't he shave. This sort of chatter falls on a married man's ears like rain on a tin roof—it has a musical sound but means nothing in his life. All married men become experts in living their own lives regardless of the constant remonstrances of their wives—and all wives keep right on pouring forth their objections to the way their men eat, sleep, breathe, lead out trumps and carve.

"I'll bet that Claude's wife began objecting to his face at breakfast and will keep it up all day till her throat is raw and that Claude won't move razorward till ten minutes before train time tomorrow morning if he feels that way. That boy must be mighty sure of himself to treat the girl to such a wild-man-of-Borneo mask.

"That's the way trouble starts—he'll look like that and along will come a handsome stranger rendolent of bay rum, barbers and massage, and away will hop his bride, blinded by the masculine radience to which she has grown unaccustomed. Those whiskers are a crime and I guess I oughta speak to him about it!"

"Claude's wife went to her sick sister's for the week-end," explained the wife of the tall, lank householder. "He can be just as reckless as he chooses, but I'd like to remind you that I'm here and every time I look at your face I get sharp shooting pains in my eyes!"

"Aw," said the lank householder very much annoyed. "I was just going up to shave this minute! Can't you give a fellow a chance to catch his breath?"—Chicago News.

From Small Beginnings

Verdi, The Innkeepers Son, the Great Composer

An Italian innkeeper who kept a little store in part of his inn had a son who might have succeeded in business, but the child cared more for music than for inns and stores. He listened to every old song to every musical instrument and to every church organ, and was entranced. From his earliest years he could produce music. "Was there ever such a son," said the father, as he thought of the future of his inn.

At 10, little Guisseppe Verdi was appointed organist, "taught only by Saint Cecelia," the people said. Antonio Barezzi, a musician, heard of the wonderful boy, and took him to good teachers. At 15, the boy wrote a symphony! "He must study with better teachers," Barezzi said, and sent him to the conservatorio at Milan. There they laughed at the innkeeper's boy and would have nothing to do with him.

Instead of giving up, Verdi studied with a private master. A year later, when the leader of a great orchestra died, Verdi applied for the place. The authorities chose someone else. Still in earnest Verdi found a church that would employ him, and he also became leader of a city orchestra.

After three years he went to Milan for study. Then his wife and two children died. In his agony he tired to drown his sorrow in work. He wrote an opera. The opera was a total failure. He kept on, and a year later wrote a composition that made all admire him as a genius. When he was about 40 he wrote the great operas, Rigoletto, Il Trovatore, and La Traviata. Twenty years later he wrote the still greater Aida. In his 80th year he wrote Otello and Falstaff. Later still, he wrote for the church with still more charm and power.

In his 88 years of life Verdi wrote many musical compositions, some, flat failures; others, temporary successes; others, immortal compositions. With every year he improved, and from being a poor innkeeper's son, rose, by persistence, to rank with the world's greatest composers of music.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Commander John Rodgers, the new assistant chief of the Navy Aeronautics Bureau and the flight commander in the recent heroic attempt to reach Honolulu from San Francisco by air, was among the first officers of the U. S. Navy to receive aviation training, having taken instruction from the Wright Brothers at Dayton in 1911. As senior officer of the First Naval Aviation detachment Commander Rodgers made the first flight across land ever made by a naval officer. He flew a Wright machine from Annapolis to Baltimore and back. He assisted in establishing the first Naval Aviation station at San Diego in 1912, and his experiments with seaplane floats there are credited with having done much toward carrying aviation out to sea with the fleet. In 1922 he was assigned to the command of the naval air station at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

THE CANARIES

"Teneriffe, largest island of the Canaries, from which the king of Spain refused to permit Spanish political exiles to depart, would seem a pleasant enough place to select as a voluntary abode," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Some European countries have chosen, as places of banishment, regions unpleasant enough to prove a continual punishment," continues the bulletin; "but Spaniards sent to Teneriffe, if not confined, must find their sojourn somewhat like a pleasure jaunt. The Canaries are believed to have been the 'Fortunate Isles' of the Greeks. Today hundreds of tourists echo the idea, for the Canaries are a recognized haven for semi-invalids. Their climate is mild, dry and healthful; and on Teneriffe one may choose from a number of climates by the simple expedient of going a greater or less distance up the huge mountain that makes up two-thirds of the islands bulk, the peak of Teneriffe.

"This mountain rising 12,200 feet is one of the grandest peaks to be seen from the sea in al the world. Early mariners thought it was the loftiest pinnacle of the earth, for most other high mountains they knew rose from inland plateaus. It is made the more majestic by its fluffy cloud girdle that hangs around it a large part of the year, obscuring a part of its slopes but leaving both base and cap visible. Where this cloud-band hangs grow luxuriant forests and ferns but above and below vegetation is relatively sparse.

"The Canaries lie in the latitude of central Florida, some 200 miles farther south than Bermuda. Teneriffe is both the largest and the highest of the seven inhabited islands. It is 60 miles long and 30 miles in greatest width. On Teneriffe 180,000 people live, while the population of the island group is about 450,000.

"Most people associate the Canaries with a bird; they probably do not know that they were named for a dog, from the Latin canis. It is related that the name was given because early voyagers found a breed of huge dogs on the present island of Grand Canary. If the giant dogs really existed—and there is a skeleton in one museum to lend support to the story—they have long been extinct. The canary bird, however, is a still famous citizen of the islands. Through this bird the archipelago has given several regions of the world a really important industry, the breeding of song-birds.

"Wild canaries are still numerous in the islands. But they differ greatly from their captive cousins, being dull greenish in color with darker streaks. Man has developed the cage canary into a larger bird while changing its color.

But he has not bettered its song. The notes that the wild birds pour forth from the trees and shrubs of their island home are both stronger and sweeter than these that come from behind the bars of their yellow kinsmen.

"Santa Cruz, on Teneriffe, capital of the group, is a city about the size of St. Joseph, Missouri. Palma, capital of Grand Canary, has a population of about the same size.

"When the Spaniards began the conquest of the Canaries early in the fifteenth century they were inhabited by the Guanchos, believed to have been descended from Berbers who crossed the 60-mile channel that separates the islands from northwest Africa. Some students have asserted that there are evidences of a pre-Guancho people, whom they have tried to associate with the legendary Atlantis, of which the Canaries are assumed to be a mountainous remnant. All the Guanchos have now been absorbed into the predominantly Spanish population.

"The Canaries, like Ireland, are free from snakes. But there is a plentiful supply of centipedes and scorpions to atone for the lack of reptiles."

Stories That Recall Others

His New Auto

Fred recently purchased an auto and admits not only that it has caused him worry and nervousness but goes further and blushingly relates the circumstances of a weird dream he had several nights ago.

It was a thriller where he was at the wheel of his new chariot driving down the street at a breakneck speed. He could feel his hands gripping the wheel like a vice and turning it first to one side and then the other in a desperate attempt to miss the various obstructions looming up. Suddenly he heard a wild scream from his wife and he thought he had struck something. He merged slowly into consciousness of his surroundings, cold beads of perspiration on his brow.

"For heaven's sake, let go of my ears," cried his wife, "what are you trying to do, jerk my head off?"

Fred surveyed her out of a pair of sheepish eyes and saw that he still had an ear in each hand. "Humh," he murmured, "thought it was a steering wheel."

An Eye to Business

A woman autoist entered town late in the evening short of gasoline. She saw a filling station but it was closed. Then a boy came along and she asked him if he could get her just enough to get to her destination.

The boy said he would try but presently brought back word that it was 10 o'clock and that the stations were all closed. "I think I can get the owner of that station right there," he said, pointing, "to get out of bed and sell you some gasoline but I wouldn't want to do it for just a gallon. Would you want to buy 15 gallons if I went around and woke him up."

"Yes, I'll buy a tankful if the man will only come over," she answered.

The boy trotted off and soon returned with the owner. After the tank was filled and the money paid the woman said to the man, "don't know what I would have done but for the boy here. He woke you up, which I wouldn't have had the courage to do."

"Yes, he's my son," the filling station man said.

CHILD TRAINING

CORRECTING CHILDREN IN PUBLIC

Esther Hull Doolittle

Children must be reprimanded at times; they must occasionally be taken seriously to task for misdemeanors. But why oh why! do mothers deem it right and proper to do this in public? Everywhere one sees it. On street cars and in all sorts of public places the irate mother, voice raised, berates Willie or Lilly loudly for some fault or other. Often there's no question but what the child richly merits punishment, but whenever I witness an adult exhibition of anger and a juvenile display of misbehavior, it seems to me that the adult deserves punishment much more than the child. Moreover, it does not the slightest good to create a scene.

Here is a case. A young mother, obviously more interested in the waxlike polish of her fingernails than in her small daughter's comfort, enters a street car. The child removes her hat, the mother slams it back; the child, plainly over-tired, screams and cries while the mother, very angry, scolds and slaps. The little girl continues to cry loudly until their destination is reached to the discomfort of their fellow passengers. The misguided woman would have advanced her own interests infinitely more had she permitted the poor, tired child to have her way, at the time, and saved her corrections until later.

After all, whose fault is it but the mother's if the child is over-tired? Quite aside from that, a public reprimand adds resentment to the already overburdened emotional capacity and, seemingly, more power to lungs and legs.

I had one sad experience along this line when I was young and foolish. During some city jollification I took my daughter, aged four, to see the daytime festivities. Naturally the crowds and confusion were too much for so young a child and she became over-tired. In my inexperience, I failed to read the danger signals and hastened on to my undoing. My small daughter, by the way, had auburn locks and the quick inflammable disposition which usually accompanies them. She desired a balloon and gleefully purchased a golden one that matched her hair. Unsuspectingly and peacefully we waited on the corner for a home-bound street car. Suddenly, pop! the hot sun had vanquished the balloon! Small daughter began to cry and sensing the real grief behind the tears, I sought another balloon. Apparently there wasn't another golden one in the world and no other color but that would suit the overwrought baby.

In a fury, she stamped her little feet and screamed. If a nice large and hungry earthquake had come along then and swallowed us up, I'd have been grateful, but my embarrassment led me to a solution of the problem. Since I knew that scolding would only aggravate the matter, I bent down and put my arms around her. At first she struggled but I quickly whispered, "Look, look dear, everybody's watching us. No one else is crying in the street." It worked like magic. She looked up quickly and ceased exploding at once. I seized the opportunity to divert her attention to a passing watering cart and the day was saved.

I am aware that a scheme which would be effective with a sensitive child might be of no use with other types. However, I am sure that no boy or girl is improved or benefitted by correction in public for the simple reason that some do not feel the humiliation anyway, and those who do are usually made more angry and resentful by it. In any case, have pity on the public!

A young minister was sent out from college to preach his first sermon in a jail. Forgetting his audience, he began in the usual way, "Fellow citizens—"

A murmur of laughter sounded through the room. He began again, "Fellow convicts—"

This time there was a roar of laughter, and completely fussed, he went on hurriedly, "I'm glad to see so many of you here tonight!"—De Pauw Yellow Crab.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Peter Gets an Aching Neck

Knowiege is, we must confess,
Often but a lucky guess.
—Old Mother Nature.

Two and two make four. You know that. You also know that this is only another way of saying that two known facts added are sure to give a certain result. Peter Rabbit may not know any arithmetic, but he does know the above truth. So when Peter discovered that Ol' Mrs. Bussard had brought Ol' Mrs. Buzzard up from the Sunny South with him that spring, and when a little later he saw Ol' Mrs. Buzzard only now and then, he put two and two together, as the saying is.

"Those Buzzards have a nest," declared Peter. "That is why I see so little of Ol' Mrs. Bussard. All the feathered people have nests now, or are getting ready to have nests. Of course, that is what Ol' Mrs. Buzzard came way up here for. Ol' Mistah Buzzard must have told her what a fine place it is up here, so she left the Sunny South to make her home here with him. I wonder where that nest is? I would like to see it. It must be a great big nest. Yes, sir, it must be a great big nest! Any one as big as Ol' Mrs. Buzzard would need a big nest. I wouldn't be a bit surprised if it is as big as the nest of Plunger the Osprey. Anyway, it must be as big as the nest of Redtail the Hawk."

So Peter began to spend a great deal of time looking for that nest. He had thought he would find it very easily. He couldn't imagine how such a big nest as he was sure that must be could possibly be hidden. Of course he thought it was near that favorite tall, dead tree on which Ol' Mistah and Mrs. Buzzard delighted to sit. So Peter went about all around there with his head tipped back looking for a great big nest. He looked in every tree for a considerable distance around. Failure to find that nest made him only more eager to find it.

His neck ached. It did so. He had tipped his head back so much that he had made his neck ache. But he hadn't found that nest, nor any sign of that nest. Early one morning he met his cousin, Jumper the Hare. As usual, Peter was hopping along with his head tipped back. He almost bumped into Jumper before he saw him.

"It seems to me, Cousin Peter, you are carrying your head very high in the air," said Jumper.

Peter grinned. "I'm looking for something," said he. "I wonder if you have seen it?"

"Perhaps so. Perhaps not. I can tell you when I know what it is you are looking for," replied Jumper.

"I am looking for the nest of Ol' Mrs. Buzzard," replied Peter.

"Oh!" exclaimed Jumper. "Has she a nest? I didn't know it."

"Of course she has a nest!" replied Peter rather testily. "Isn't it the middle of the nesting season? What do you think she came way up here from the Sunny South for if it wasn't to build a nest and raise a family? Why does she disappear for ever so long at a time unless it is because she is sitting on eggs? Of coure she has a nest. But though I have looked until my neck aches I haven't been able to find it. She and Mistah Buzzard are such wonderful flyers that it must be that they have built their nest a long way from there. I wonder if it can be up on the Big Mountain?"

"Why don't you watch them and see if they fly over there? That ought to be easy," replied practical Jumper.

"It's a good idea. I'll try it," replied Peter.

CELEBRATE ITALIAN INDEPENDENCE DAY WITH CONCERT AND ADDRESSES

We hope the time will come when there will be no more wars, said Dr. Antonio Magnano, D. D., professor in charge of the Italian department at Colgate university, the principal speaker of the celebration of the 55th anniversary of the Italian Independence Day, held Monday evening at Union square under the auspices of the Dante Cultural club of this city. A street parade, addresses in both English and Italian and a band concert by the Baltic band comprised the celebration programme.

About 7.30 o'clock there was a brief street parade down Franklin street, through Main street and up to Union square. The procession was led by an automobile containing the presiding officer and speakers, followed by the band, First Battalion Headquarters and Combat Train, C. N. G., Captain Herbert F. Burdick, commanding and about a dozen automobiles.

Arriving at Union square the speakers and band were seated on a raised platform with two young ladies on either side of the platform, representing the United States and Italy, each bearing large flags. The programme opened with America, played by the band and this was followed by another selection by the band after which B. Romano, president of the Dante club, and presiding officer, presented Mayor Milo R. Waters, the first speaker. Mayor Waters spoke of the Italian residents of Norwich as orderly and loyal citizens. I hope they will always do their part to help the government, he said. There are no more law abiding people in Norwich than the Italians, he continued. We are glad to have you here and to join with you in this anniversary.

Following a selection by the band President Romano introduced Dr. Antonio Magnano, D. D., professor of the Italian department at Colgate university, who spoke on The Value of Freedom. Dr. Magnano said there is no man of Italian birth but must, if he is the right kind of a man, believe in this celebration. We are simply honoring the great men who gave their lives that there might be a united Italy. I know by your presence here tonight that you have the same desire to do the same great things that these noble men did.

Some might think we are celebrating some kind of foreign event tonight. I have just returned from Italy. I found in Rome that the Americans there celebrate the Fourth of July, the anniversary of American independence. If they celebrate the Fourth of July in Rome why should we not celebrate the 20th of September here? The 20th of September marks the Italian independence. It cost something for the people to create that unity. I hope you and I will be worthy of the sacrifices of our noble ancestors.

We hope the time will come when there will be no more wars. (Applause.) We must be at least appreciative of the sacrifices of our noble men who gave their lives for the unity of Italy. We can show that appreciation by being the best and most sincere men and women it is possible to be.

We believe in freedom, that is, the right kind of freedom. So long as you don't interfere with the rights of others you are perfectly free. Freedom is a great thing and you and I all appreciate it. What is the use of a government, save as it seeks to protect the interests of the individual. You can't make people good by the big stick. You can make people good by developing the good that is in them. We have one of the most wonderful things in the world. A nation of different nationalities. Nowhere else in the world is it possible for 45 or 50 different nationalities to come together and live peacefully together. This is because we have a free nation. America has ever exercised a great influence on the nations of the world. You people are not watched here as they are in Europe. In Europe every man is suspected until he is proven true. Some people feel because the police are not watching them they can do as they like.

Democracy depends on two things—education and wise politics. What is the government of our country? Is it the handful of men that gather in Washington? You are the government and they are your representatives. The government is in your hands, it is absolutely necessary for a man to know good politics from bad politics. We are a democracy and the power of government lies in your hands. I am thoroughly confident that if you were put to the test everyone of you would prove to be true to the interests of this country. Appreciate your advantages to the full and defend them. You need the culture and the training of the whole man, not only of the mind. We need to emphasize the moral principle, in the name of all that is good, seek to look upon people as your equals and try to have respect for everyone. Let us become the very finest and the best type of men and women possible.

Dr. Magnano, at the conclusion of his address in the English language, then spoke briefly in the Italian language for the benefit of those in the audience more familiar with the tongue of their native land. Rev. Valentino Panizzoli, pastor of the Italian Baptist Mission, was the last speaker. He spoke in the Italian language on the Meaning of the 20th of September. This date is for Italy just what the Fourth of July is to America. On that day, 55 years ago, the people of Italy were inspired by the same spirit which prevailed in the colonies of this country in 1776, the spirit of unity and freedom.

During the evening the Baltic band, under the leadership of Prof. Joe Berghinzo, gave a splendid band concert, the numbers including the following selections:

America, Semper Fidelis, Sousa; Royal March, Gabetti; Overture, A Hayes; selection, Carmen, Bizet; march, Peerless, R. Perry; selection, Stabat Mater, Rossini; march, Passdone Day, Vasselin; selection from Faust, Gounod; Italo American Popular Songs, arranged by Berghinzo; Star Spangled Banner.

It was after 10 o'clock before the celebration came to a close with the playing of the Star Spangled Banner. The attendance numbered about 1,500 men, women and children. A special detail of police directed the parking of the numerous automobiles that thronged Union square for the celebration. The traffic was handled very efficiently, the streets converging at the square being kept open throughout the evening.

OFFERS OF AID FOR STORRS CHURCH FUND

Rev. Morris E. Alling, director of the Storrs Church and Community House campaign, has announced two important developments in the effort to raise funds for the project.

The first is an offer from Colonel A. Victor Barnes of New Canaan, director of the American Jersey cattle club, to turn over to fund the proceeds from the future sale of four bulls, from Fauvic Prince, the herd sire of the Barnes herd of Jerseys, which has taken many prizes, notably first prize in the national dairy show. The offer was made during a visit to Colonel Barnes's farm by Mr. Alling and Professor George C. White, chairman of the board of trustees of the Storrs Church, and was gratefully accepted. The sale of the animals is to be made at the earliest opportunity.

"Mr. Barnes was greatly surprised to learn that the facilities for social and religious life at the Connecticut Agricultural College were so meager as compared with the equipment for teaching animal husbandry," Mr. Alling said. "His offer is expressive of his interest in both aspects of the life of the students at Storrs. His contribution is among the most notable we have received for the fund."

The second development is the starting of a movement by the Connecticut state grange designed to bring financial support from the local granges to the project. Early this year, Mr. Alling at the annual meeting of the grange in Hartford explained what the Connecticut Federation of Churches and the leading members of the Storrs community were planning to do in the way of enlarging the social and religious facilities of the college community, and appealed to the organization for support. Master Allen B. Cook of Niantic and Rev. J. H. Hoyt of New Canaan, were named a committee, joined later by Charles T. Davis of Middletown, to study the matter and devise means of helping the project. They have decided to lay the project before each grange throughout the state, with the recommendation that a committee be formed in each community to solicit funds. The money so raised is to be sent to D. A. St. John of New Canaan, state grange treasurer, who in turn will turn it over to Fred P. Holt, chairman of the board of the City Bank & Trust Co. in Hartford and treasurer of the Storrs church and community house fund.

JOHN IRISH GROWS DAHLIAS OF SPECIAL BEAUTY AND SIZE

The dahlia garden at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Irish on Laurel Hill avenue is exciting admiration just now, over 70 hills of beautiful blooms rewarding the cultivation of Mr. Irish earlier in the season. There are nearly as many different varieties of handsome blooms represented.

Visitors to the garden exclaim over the size and beauty of the fine flowers, including a superb white, "Mrs. Este." South Pole—a rich salmon pink, Millionaire, rose pink, John Alden, which is a rich crimson, P. W. Jensen, a beautiful peony bloom in pink, Isabel, which is creamy white with pink center, Aurora, Boreslis, a show dahlia greatly admired, Constance, a California bloom of rich hegoid, the Mrs. Mary Holmes, a variegated orange and rose, "Charm," a show dahlia in delicate pink and many others.

Mr. Irish has been very successful growing pompons, including Amber Queen and Sunset.

The stalks in his garden are of extra height this season and are crowned by magnificent blooms.

Illustrated in leaflets distributed by Fred T. Backus at the Fair was the damage done by Lightning to the home of Geo. Thompson, No. Stonington, in March, 1922, proving that tall trees surrounding a home will not protect that home from damage by lightning.

MERCHANTS' FALL OPENING COMES THIS WEEK

The fall openings of the Norwich merchants will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, September 24, 25, 26. A very successful spring opening was conducted by the Norwich merchants last March, when hundreds of people viewed the store windows on the opening nights.

Swahn's military band has been engaged by the local merchants to parade the streets on Wednesday evening prior to the openings, commencing Thursday. Prizes will be awarded by the merchants for the most attractive window displays after the judges have announced the prize winners. The reputation of our local merchants for good dependable merchandise is unquestioned and the merchants of Norwich stand high in other cities throughout the state for the quality of merchandise which they offer to the public. The windows will be judged on Wednesday night and the prizes will be given to the winners as soon as possible thereafter. The merchants will make every effort to have their windows as attractive as possible, and at the same time offer to the people of Norwich a standard quality of merchandise that will be hard to beat in any city throughout the state. As on the two opening nights last March, there is no doubt but that hundreds of people will view the various store windows during the openings, and particularly Wednesday night when the band will parade through the streets. This is but another instance of the well-known co-operation of local merchants to give the people of Norwich the best that money can buy for the value received.

WEDDINGS

Gunderman—Poruznick

At the rectory of St. Joseph's church Monday morning, Rev. S. A. Ickick, pastor of the church, united in marriage Albert Gunderman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gunderman of Lisbon and Miss Estelle Poruznick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bronislaw Poruznick of No. 244 West Thames street. The bridge was gowned in white crepe with satin trimmings and wore a tulle veil. She carried a snower bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor, Miss Stella Seneskip wore green crepe. There were two bridesmaids, Miss Anna Poruznick, a sister of the bride, and Miss Jane Zaremba. Miss Poruznick wore orange crepe and Miss Zaremba, blue crepe.

The best man was Stanley Poruznick, brother of the bride, and the ushers were George Gauthier and John Gunderman, the latter a brother of the groom. A wedding breakfast, with about 75 guests present, was held at the home of the bride's parents after the ceremony. Later in the day the bride and groom left for a wedding trip to New York and New Hampshire and on their return they will reside in Lisbon where Mr. Gunderman is employed. The bride received many beautiful gifts.

Chapman—Hodgdon

Miss Gertrude Elizabeth Hodgdon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Freeland Hodgdon of 74 Ramsdell street, Groton, and J. Lewis Chapman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merton Chapman of Starr Hill, Groton, were united in marriage at 8 o'clock Saturday evening in the Groton Heights Baptist church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. George R. Atha, pastor of the church, in the presence of about 300 relatives and friends of the couple. The church was beautifully decorated, to carry out an autumnal effect with white asters, dahlias, palms and autumn leaves while in front of the altar was a white birch bark arch under which the ceremony was performed.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridal party came down the aisle to the music of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin played by Mrs. R. O. Smith of New York, formerly organist of the church. During the ceremony, O Promise Me was sung by Miss Pauline Christie of Groton and Because by Miss Amy P. Ferguson also of Groton and a member of the sophomore class of Connecticut college.

The bride wore white satin over lace, caught up wit horange blossoms and maline. Her princess veil was fan-shaped. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and bridal roses. The maid of honor, Miss Marion Fisher, of Uncasville, wore sunset and gold changeable taffeta, a gold ornament in her hair and gold slippers and stockings. She carried a bouquet of pink butterfly roses. Of the six bridesmaids, Miss Arline Norton of Groton and Miss Helen McIntyre of Mount Vernon, N. Y., wore orchid gowns of georgette and taffeta. Miss Amy P. Ferguson and Miss Dorothea Gambler, both of Groton, wore green georgette and taffeta and Miss Bernice Ashcraft and Miss Alice Marquardt both of Groton, wore yellow georgette and taffeta. All the bridesmaids wore silver ornaments in their hair and silver slippers and stockings and carried arm bouquets of gladioli in colors in harmony with their gowns.

The flower girls, Lorraine Getchell and Jean Beach of Groton wore yellow georgette with yellow bows in their hair and carried large baskets of gladioli. The mother of the bride was dressed in silver georgette over robin's egg blue and wore a corsage of pink roses. The mother of the bridegroom wore gray silk over the old lace and also wore a corsage of pink roses.

Frederick P. Latimer, Jr., of Groton was best man and the ushers were Milton Hodgdon, brother of the bride, Percy Marquardt, Hollis Crandall, Carl Hanover, Ellis Crouch and Latham Brown, all of Groton.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception and supper at the home of the bride's parents for 75 guests, including visitors from Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New York, this city and Hartford.

The house decorations carried out the autumnal effect. Oak leaves, green and red, asters and chrysanthemums were the predominating features in the decorations. The bridal party received. The large wedding cake was topped with the same ornament that was used on the cake made for the 50th anniversary of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram M. Hodgson, of Groton, several months ago.

After an automobile trip through the White Mountains, Mr. and Mrs. Chapman will make their home at the Golden Spur. The bride is a graduate of the Chapman Technical High school and taught there a year and at the Eastern Point school for two years. Mr. Chapman is a graduate of the Norwich Free Academy and is employed at Jack's tire shop in New London.

The bride's gift to her bridesmaids was strings of colored pearls; to the maid of honor, silver bracelets, and to the flower girls, gold pins. The bridegroom's gifts to the best man and ushers were white gold cuff links.

Cirrito—Gallina.

In St. Patrick's church at 8 o'clock Monday, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May united in marriage Joseph Cirrito, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cirrito of Caltavutura, Italy, and Mrs. Matilda Mingo Gallina, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Mingo of 17 Vine street.

The bride was gowned in peach georgette crepe and Spanish lace with a hat to match. Her maid, Miss Caroline Porretta, of New London, wore blue georgette crepe and silver lace with hat to match. Both carried bouquets of roses and asters. The bridesmaids were Miss Minnie Mingo, sister of the bride, who wore canary colored crepe and hat to match and Miss Mary Caulfield, who wore lavender crepe and hat to match and Miss Filomena Porretta in orange crepe and hat to match. They carried asters and gladioli. As the bridal party entered the church the Mendelssohn wedding march was played. The bridal procession was led by Miss Minnie Mingo and Miss Mary Caulfield and Miss Minnie Mingo was the flower girl.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was enjoyed at the home of the bride by 150 guests from New York city, New London, Hartford, Willimantic, Bridgeport and Thompsonville and this city. The groom's gift to his bride was a string of pearls, the bride's gift to her maid, a combination of a dress, hat, slippers and gloves. The groom's gift to his best man was a pair of gold cuff links with his initials engraved on them. During the evening dancing was enjoyed by all, music being rendered by St. Jean's Baltic band, directed by Professor Joseph Berghinzo.

After a wedding tour to Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Farnham, Anaria, Albany and New York the bridal couple will be at home to their many friends after October 3, 1925, at a newly furnished apartment at 17 Vine street. The couple received numerous and valuable gifts. One of the features at the reception was a Scotch dance by Stephen Thompson of this city, formerly of Scotland.

Phillips-Birch

On Monday, Sept. 14, at 9:30 a. m., at the Central Baptist church, Miss Mary J. Birch, eldest daughter of Mrs. Josephine A. Birch of Gales Ferry and Earl W. Phillips, son of E. Walter Phillips, of 422 Laurel Hill avenue, were united in marriage by the Rev. E. C. Dunbar of the First Baptist church in the absence of Dr. David A. Pitt pastor. The bride was gowned in tan and blue canton crepe, with black velvet hat. The couple, who were unattended, left at once on a short honeymoon trip, motoring through the New England states. Both Mr. and Mrs. Phillips are graduates of the Norwich Free academy. Mr. Phillips was employed with his father, served as a draftsman at the navy base during the war. His bride returns to her duties at the office of the Uncas Nichols & Co., in this city, after a week's vacation.

Gas in the Stomach is Dangerous

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia to Overcome Trouble Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

FRIENDS SAY SHE IS PICTURE OF HEALTH

"I cannot give Tanlac too much thanks, for it brought back my health and strength after everything else failed, and nearly all hope of ever getting well had left me," is the statement of Mrs. Sarah Taylor.

"Stomach trouble and constipation had been gradually weakening me down for 20 years. At times I was all over, could not walk without limping, and felt too weak to get out of my chair. Sleep was almost out of the question and I was nervous, discouraged and despondent.

"When I began taking Tanlac I was down to 120 lbs. but I now weigh 135 and haven't an ailment in the world. This is what Tanlac did for me four years ago and since then I have not been without it in the house. I take a bottle now and then and always find it will save I am the picture of health."

WALKER GETS DECISION OVER SHADE IN TERRIFIC FIFTEEN ROUND BATTLE

YANKEE STADIUM, NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Dave Shade of California tonight came to the crossroads with Mickey Walker of Elizabeth, N. J., in his long pursuit of the welterweight championship and received as the answer to his two-year-old challenge a bruising defeat at the hands of the title holder in a 15 round match at the American league baseball park.

Pent-up bitterness of long standing between the two men exploded at the ends of four battering five ounce gloves as the pair stood locked in the center of the ring almost throughout the fifteen rounds of their struggle and blazed away at each other until both were almost ready to drop from exhaustion at the finish. They bled profusely from nose and mouth and Shade was on the verge of a knockout in the closing minutes of the struggle as the champion brought forth a thrilling rally to save his title by a close judge's decision to 2 to 1.

It was a battle of pre-historic days in modern setting, with both men casting science to the winds as they slugged with abandon and without letup. Up until Walker's sensational finish, the concensus of opinion among newspapermen at the ringside gave the crouching Californian an edge over the champion. Even after the spectacular rally of the titleholder, under which Shade bent like a broken reed, opinion remained divided, a chorus of boos accompanying the ovation which greeted the verdict.

It was the deciding vote of the referee, Patsy Haley which was the saving ballot for Walker. One of the judges, George T. Kelly, of Yonkers, N. Y., cast a vote for Shade on the strength of his superior fighting in the early rounds. Richard Nugent of Buffalo, the other judge, turned in a slip for Walker. Haley's ballot then decided the issue.

In spite of the damaging blows which both men sent home at close quarters the two rivals held their feet without apparent difficulty throughout the fistic hail which fell upon face and body. As early as the sixth round they were cut at the corners of their mouths. Shade received additional gashes under the left eye and on the lobe of the right ear. But until the final round, the challenger appeared to be the stronger of the two.

The crouching, bobbing style of Shade, an elusive target for every foe he has faced in the last three years was less effective tonight against Walker by reason of the fact that Shade chose to trade blistering wallops with the champion. The Californian bobbed inside Walker's flailing body hooks in the early rounds and scored straight and left to the head, while Walker called upon a terrific overhand right to pound his opponent's back at close quarters as Shade nearly bent to the floor to evade punishment.

Shade's speed in attack repeatedly threw Walker off balance, while the champion floundered and missed frequently, but he made up for these short comings by lashing out with both hands until he landed. Except for a few rounds, Walker was outscored by the challenger in point of clean blows landed, but the titleholder's drives carried far more steam and went home with resounding thuds.

After honors had been evenly divided in the slugging of the first five rounds, Walker lifted the challenger from his crouch with a terrific left hook and drove home a savage right. The attack of the champion touched off the fireworks of a furious rally. Shade came back with a counter assault which drove the titleholder into his own corner and there they poured into each other a volley which brought 45,000 spectactors to their feet.

Shade, apparently holding back in the early rounds to permit Walker to spend himself cut loose in the ninth and tenth. He drove Walker to the ropes with terrific right handers, but the blow which floored Jimmy Slattery for the ten count in the Californian's spectacular victory of early July found an iron-ribbed jaw from New Jersey and the stand of the challenger brought him only a reply in the form of a rousing rally by Walker in the eleventh.

Walker entering the ring at the lowest weight he has made since he took the title from Jack Britton three years ago, appeared to have weakened himself in reducing to 144 1-2 pounds. In the fifteenth Walker after easing along from the tenth, charged from his corner dealing out a blinding barrage. He cornered Shade with an assault from which there was no escape. The Californian staggered under the blind fury of the wounded champion as Walker pasted him from rope to rope. But Shade would not go down. Summoning the last ounce of his strength, he staggered into a saving clinch, and there the gong found them with Walker still champion after the most gruelling test of his championship career.

The Preliminaries.

Johnny Gross, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., won a judges' verdict over Joe Silvani, of New York, in a six-round preliminary. The men are heavyweights.

Frank Moody, of Wales, England, scored a technical knockout over Kid Norfolk, negro heavyweight of New York, in the fourth round of an eight-round preliminary. Norfolk was down three times for counts of four, eight and four before the white towel of defeat fluttered into the ring.

The negro was an easy target for the heavy punching Moody who poured a battery of rights and lefts at the veteran heavyweight which sent him to a horizontal position three times in the second and fourth rounds. The end came after one minute and five seconds of fighting in the fourth. Moody weighed 168; Norfolk 183.

Jack Zivic, of Pittsburgh, Pa., won a judges' verdict over Willie Harmon, of New York, in a 12-round semi-final match. Harmon piled up a lead in the early rounds but the Pittsburgher came back strong and finished up with a flurry of aggressiveness that all but knocked out the New York boy. Both weighed in at 144 1-2.

The Fight in Detail.

ROUND ONE

The champion took the aggressive after a clinch and scored heavily in the infighting against his crouching challenger. The champion was concentrating on Shade's body. Shade staggered Walker with three straight left jabs to the face. Shade almost floored Walker with a right to the head. Another right sent Walker to the ropes. Both landed damaging blows in a fierce encounter near the ropes. Shade's crouching position and his dodging tactics puzzled the champion. They were sparring at the bell.

ROUND TWO

Shade's left sent Walker's head backward. They locked arms but both got one free and they pounded away in a fierce fashion. Shade almost upset Walker with an overhand right. Clinch followed clinch as Shade crouched to protect himself from Walker's charges. Shade scored a beautiful right uppercut which turned Walker half around. The crowd was in an uproar as the bell ended a furious skirmish.

ROUND THREE

ROUND FOUR

ROUND FIVE

Walker crashed over a wicked left to the head which almost floored his challenger. Shade came back with a furious charge and for a few seconds they hammered away without a thought of protection. Walker missed a right cross and Shade scored with both hands to the head. Walker got over a pretty left to Shade's body but little damage was done. Every other charge was a clinch. Shade scored heavily to Walker's head without a return. They were milling it at a fast clip when the bell rang.

ROUND SIX

The challenger opened up a serious attack at the champion as the round opened, landing effectively with both hands. Walker put over a vicious right square to Shade's face which sent the challenger back on his heels. Four times Walker landed to the head without a return. Another left caught Shade off balance and he almost fell. The crowd was in a frenzied uproar as the fight assumed faster proportions. Both landed vicious blows to head and body in a torrid exchange. Both of the fighters nearly went down under the slaughter. The bell halted a furious exchange.

ROUND SEVEN

Shade was bleeding from the mouth and from a cut under his right eye as he came up. Walker landed with both hands to the head. They locked in a clinch, but the infighting was even. A straight right sent Walker to the ropes. An uppercut jarred him. Both landed smashing drives straight to the face as they fought openly. A right and left to the chin forced Shade to clinch. They were sparring openly at the bell.

ROUND EIGHT

They mixed at close range as the round opened. The champion missed two left hooks. A left to the body doubled Shade. Both missed wild rights. A left jab spun Shade around. They fought furiously at close quarters. The action slowed, until Walker started a charge which lasted for only a moment during which they both fought openly, both landing effective blows in exchange. Just as the bell rang Walker doubled Shade with a left to the body.

ROUND NINE

They fell into the inevitable clinch. Walker scored heavily in the infighting. Both missed furious rights. A left to the face sent Walker half-around but he came back to stagger Shade with left to the body. Shade smashed at the champion's face but Walker was wild with his return. They stood toe to toe and battled furiously. Shade having an edge in the exchange. Three times Shade's left sent Walker's head back. The challenger was forcing the fighting. They were in the center of the ring at the bell.

ROUND TEN

Shade staggered Walker with a stiff right to the head. The champion continued to center his attack on Shade's body. Shade came up with a pretty uppercut and the champion came up with a bleeding mouth. Both blasted away viciously to the head. Shade getting the better of the battling. Shade landed to the head but took two on the body. Three uppercuts rocked Walker's head. Shade forced Walker to the corner and poured leather at the champion from all directions. The champion came back strong, however, and forced Shade into a clinch as the bell ended the round.

ROUND ELEVEN

ROUND TWELVE

Walker missed a right uppercut. They clinched. They tied into a knot after every charge. Walker charged, landing with his left and missed with a wild right swing. Both landed stinging blows to the face as the action speeded. The challenger was on top of Walker in every crash, playing for Walker's face. Walker slid his left across Shade's dodging head. The infighting continued with honors even. Walker was short with a left. They just came out of a clinch as the bell rang.

ROUND THIRTEEN

They clinched as they came up. Walker put over a vicious left to the body which doubled the challenger. Both appeared to be tiring under the killing pace and the clinches became more frequent. Walker was doing good work on the inside, with Shade laying back for a knockout punch. Walker missed a left hook and took a right to the jaw. Walker scored to Shade's head but was forced to take two in exchange. The one-two punch to the head and body sent Walker to the ropes, where the bell found them locked.

ROUND FOURTEEN

They rushed to the ropes in a clinch and Shade had a little advantage at close quarters. Both stung with rights to the head. Walker continued his body punches. Both of Shade's eyes appeared to be cut as he came out of a clinch. Walker missed three leads. A weak right grazed Shade's face. He staggered Walker with a countering right. Shade's crouching tactics had Walker at "sea." Walker measured Shade with a right but the bell prevented the blow.

ROUND FIFTEEN

They shook hands. Walker scored in the infighting as the two clinched. Shade landed to the head but clinched when Walker missed with his left. Walker stung Shade with a right to the body. Another crashing right to the head sent Shade to the ropes. Mickey was rallying. He poured a furious onslaught at Shade. The crowd was in an uproar yelling for the champion to finish his weakening rival. Blow after blow landed on Shade's head and body. Walker stung his right to Shade's face. They were pouring it furiously at each other at the bell.

LEONARD-FERGUSON BOUT TO BE SLASHING AFFAIR

What will be a repetition of the slashing bout between Mickey Walker and Dave Shade fought last night will be seen at Duwell field here on Friday evening when Johnny "Shelk" Leonard of Wallingford, and Tragy Ferguson, also of Wallingford, hook up in the main bout on the Duwell A. C. card. Leonard and Ferguson will fight for the welterweight title of Connecticut in this bout and fans can anticipate a slam bang affair from the first tap of the gong. These two boys fought for the title at the Herman-Kaplan show in Waterbury last month and their 10 rounds of milling resulted in a draw.

Those who have seen Leonard and Ferguson in one of their grudge fights know that there is action in every minute of every round. These two stand toe to toe and push leather into each other's faces and body from the start to the finish and without a letup. For those who want action this bout is it. Leonard packs a hard punch in either hand and he lands frequently but Ferguson is a tough boy who can absorb lots of punishment and still come back for more. Ferguson also hits with terrific force but on the other hand the Sheik is a glutton for punishment. So it is a case of who can slip over a punch to a vital point before he takes one himself.

Another state title will be at stake at this show. Happy Rollinson of Shelton, state flyweight titleholder, risks his crown against Young Coulon of Taftville in the eight round semi-final bout. These boys are fast. Coulon packs a wicked punch but Rollinson has more experience and is a clever defense man.

The second eight round bout on the card will be between Izzy Kaplan of Meriden and Young Martin Flaherty of Lowell, Mass. This bout should go big as both boys are well known in the world of flatlania. Flaherty fights in New York next week and is already booked for several main bouts in various cities in New England.

The preliminary brings together two local boys who have been training hard for the scrap, Young McCarthy and Young Falcone. This bout will also prove to be a hummer.

TWO NOTRE DAME PLAYERS SIGN WITH WATERBURY

WATERBURY, Sept. 21—George F. Mulligan, manager of the Waterbury Blues, professional football champions of Connecticut last year, announced tonight from New York that he had signed Harry Struhldreher, quarterback, and Edward Huntzinger, end, Notre Dame's championship team of last fall to contracts to play with Waterbury in every game this season. Both men will be here to play the opening game Sunday afternoon.

Although the Providence Steamrollers and New Britain teams had previously announced the signing of Struhldreher, and Huntzinger attached their signatures to contracts binding their services for the season tonight in New York where they were guests of Manager Mulligan at the Walker-Shade welterweight bout. Although the terms of Struhldreher's contract were not made public it was stated that the All-American quarterback of, 1924, often called "Notre Dame's Knute Rockne on the field," will receive the highest salary ever paid a football player in New England. Struhldreher is now football coach at Villa Nova and Huntzinger is his assistant.

Assawaga Defeats Danielson

DAYVILLE, Sept. 21—Assawaga won the first game of the series played here Sunday defeating the Danielson town team by a 4 to 2 score. Lagace pitched a good game for the visitors allowing only three safe hits. After the first two innings the Danielson boys got down to business and only in the eighth did more than three men face Lagace. Daginais got a two bagger in the fourth inning that helped bring in the two runs.

Lavalle pitching for the local boys struck out seventeen men and allowed only four safe hits. The score:

STRUHLDREHER TO RECEIVE $7500 WITH WATERBURY

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 21—Harry Struhldreher, All-American quarterback at Notre Dame in 1924, made his first and last appearance on the Steam Roller eleven of the National Football league yesterday when he played on that team against the West Point artillerymen.

At the end of the game Struhldreher demanded an increase in the salary previously agreed upon. When this was refused by the Providence management, Struhldreher accepted an offer of $7500 with $500 bonus he received from a Waterbury team.

WILLS READY TO MEET ANY HEAVY IN WORLD

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP) — Harry Wills does not draw the color line and he is ready to meet any worthy heavyweight in the world.

This statement was made today by Wills personally and his manager, Paddy Mullins, in answer to an assertion in Chicago last night by Billy Gibson, manager of Gene Tunney that the black panther had either drawn the color line or was afraid to meet the ex-marine.

Regarding Gibson's statement that he had refused an offer of $200,000 to fight Tunney, Mullins declared that he never received such an offer but that if any promoter wanted to guarantee Wills that amount to meet Tunney, he was waiting to talk to him.

Furthermore, in refutation of Gibson's charges, Mullins revealed that he has signed articles with Babe Culnan, matchmaker for the National Sportsmen's club of Newark, N. J., to fight any opponent Culnan selected.

This was verified by Culnan, who stated that he called on Gibson and Tunney and endeavored to make a match between Tunney and Wills, but that Gibson refused to consider it.

ACADEMY BEGINS BUSY WEEK WITH HARD DRILL

Monday afternoon on the Academy campus the local high eleven began a busy week by putting in a three hours drill. The squad was divided into two parts, the backfield men being put through a long signal drill while the linemen were divided into squads for drill in charging and getting their men, after they had been given a three lap jog around the track.

As the first game is but three days away, namely that with Westerly high school Friday at Norwich, much practice is needed to put the local boys into trim for this important contest for upon it will depend mainly Norwich's hopes for a place in the Eastern Connecticut-Rhode Island interscholastic League championship race as Westerly is always a chief contender for the title and should therefore make the local boys travel to bring home the well known bacon. Coach Whitney will probably not definitely announce his lineup until directly before the game Friday, as there is a stiff fight for practically all positions.

If the old-time Academy spirit which has carried many local teams to victory in years past is shown in Friday's game the N. F. A. team should prove a stumbling block to Westerly's hopes for a victory.

CINCINNATI BEATS SCRANTON IN FEATURE AMATEUR GAME

CLEVELAND, Sept. 21.—(AP) — Cincinnati defeated Scranton 3 to 2, today in the feature game of the first round of play in the tournament to decide the national baseball federation amateur championship. Representatives of 14 cities played on seven city park diamonds.

Other scores were:

Cleveland, 5, New Haven 4.
Ithaca 27, Lorain 2.
Detroit 5, Pittsburgh 4.
Flint 8, Akron 5.
Waterbury 9, Toledo 1.
Johnstown 9, Indianapolis 6.

AL WATROUS WINS GOLD MEDAL IN QUALIFYING ROUND OF PRO TOURNEY

CHICAGO, Sept. 21—Al Watrous, of Grand Rapids, today won the gold medal of the qualifying round of the professional golf association championship by scoring courses members three and four of the Olympia fields country club in par 70 each for a total of 140.

This score was three strokes better than that returned by Bill Mehlhorn of Chicago, who by virtue of a 69 on No. 3 links this afternoon, got second place. Jack Burke, of Houston, and Gene Sarazen of New York, tied for third place with 146 while Morte Dutra of Aberdeen, Wash., and Harry Cooper of Dallas, were next with 147 each. The latter players owed their good score to the fact that Dutra shot No. 3 course in 71 while Cooper played the same links in 69.

The only other players to get under 150 on the difficult courses were Mike Brady and Leo Diegel of New York, Bobby Cruickshank of Oklahoma City and William Leach of Philadelphia who had 149 each.

So difficult did the star professionals find the going over the heavily trapped and wooded links, with a cryl north wind blowing that two men tied for the last two places at the surprisingly high score of 157. Last year at French Lick the highest score to gain admission to match play was 150.

Walter Hagen of Pasadena, Fla., defending his title scored 76-75—151, while John Farrell, the star player of New York, by taking 42 strokes on the second nine of No. 4 required 154.

Bill Creavy of Oklahoma City, who set an unofficial record of 68 for No. 4 links, today took no fewer than 17 strokes for each course, and Emmett French of Youngstown, who frequently breaks through 70 on difficult courses took 155.

Those who tied for last place were William Klein of New York and Ray Derr of Cincinnati. Klein took 44 strokes on one nine and Derr required 43 for one quarter of his trip. In the play-off Derr won from Klein, 5 to 6.

Among those failing to qualify were Tom

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

Local building progress went ahead during the past week with all possible speed as contractors have plenty of work on hand that must be finished before the cold weather sets in. At the office of Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton a number of building applications were received but no permits were granted during the week.

Work on the Norwich State hospital is being rushed along by the H. Wales Lines company that has the contract for the new ward building. The building is rapidly assuming proportions, the brick walls having been raised to the second floor and the first floor having been laid.

The house that Thomas Washburn is building for himself at East Great Plain is nearly ready for occupation with the exception of the finishing of the hard wood floors and the installation of the electrical and plumbing fixtures. The house is of the Dutch colonial type with six rooms, sun porch and bath.

Other work in the city and in the town has been progressing rapidly and several of the dwelling houses are practically completed with the exception of some of the interior work. The work of renovating the old Y. M. C. A. building on Broadway for the N. S. Gilbert company is practically completed, the contractors working this week in finishing the interior.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were nine sales of real estate as compared to 13 safes for the same week in 1924. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $87,624 and $38,068.

The sales of real estate in New London during the past week numberd nine, exactly the same number as for the corresponding week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $24,525 and $55,425.

State Building Permits

Building permits to a greater number were issued in the leading towns of Connecticut, as shown by the records for the last seven days, than the record for the same week last year. Permits granted for a larger number of one-family houses than has hitherto been the case, the city of Hartford leading in this respect. The figures for the week were 414 permits granted, for buildings costing $1,788,100, as compared to 335 permits for last year, for buildings costing $1,220,256, and 318 in 1923, for business costing $1,048,395.

August Building Record Highest

Building operations continue at such a high rate as to indicate a record yearly total for 1925. National surveys of building permits issued in the principle cities of the country by Bradstreet's and S. W. Straus & Co. agree that the August volume established a new record for that month, showing a gain of 38 per cent over August, 1924. In the east 103 cities had a total of $185,807,963 compared to $115,957,617 in August, 1924 an increase of 60 per cent. According to Bradstreet's the total of building for the first eight months was $2,504,725,000, which marks an increase of 14.8 per cent over the total for the like period in 1924, and is probably the highest record of all time for that period. A satisfying feature of the high building volume is the healthy type of construction which has been most prominent in the building industry this year. Educational and residential building has been an important factor in all building records throughout the year and gives promise of furnishing conspicuous totals when the year's figures are summed up. This is a kind of construction which makes for a lasting type of prosperity and is a welcome change from the highly speculative classes of work which were so much in evidence during the past two years.

New London

The contract has been awarded for the proposed addition to the Ocean Spray cottage at Ocean Beach for A. Cassara. The addition will be of frame construction, and will provide from 16 to 18 new rooms.

The permit has been issued to Joseph G. Mondelci, 122 Ashcraft road extension, for a house on Ashcraft road extension, arranged for two families. The cost will be about $8,000.

The final date for receiving the competitive plans for proposed building changes at the Masonic Temple on Huntington street has been named as October 1. An outline of the contemplated alterations has been given before in these columns. George E. Watters, 536 Montauk avenue, is chairman of the building committee.

Plans have been prepared for an addition and alterations to the residence of Emily L. Norrie at 521 Pequot avenue. The work will require new plumbing and electric wiring and an extension to the present heating system.

Work has been started by Mr. Giri, 75 Smith street, on a house at 316 Crystal avenue. From private plans, the house will be 24x28 feet, of cottage type, arranged for one family. The usual improvements will be provided.

John Seciglenski has started the foundation for a house on Cole street, the permit for which has been issued to Zofi Seciglenski. The house will be of bungalow type, 24x28 feet. It will contain five rooms and will cost about $5,000.

Building Permits

Joseph G. Mondelci, frame dwelling, Ashcraft road extension, $8,000.

M. Giri, frame dwelling, 316 Crystal avenue, $4,000.

Zofi Seciglenski, frame dwelling, Cole street, $5,000.

Number of permits issued for the week, 3; estimated cost of buildings, $17,000.

Lyme

Sketches have been started for a ranch house here for Fred Stone, prominent actor. The house will be log cabin type, 50x80 feet, containing 14 rooms. A reception hall, 30x40 feet, will extend up two stories and will be surrounded by a balcony.

Hotel Bids too High

From plans of architects bids submitted here for the erection of the community hotel exceeded the estimated cost. Revised plans were figured by Tracy Bros. Co., Waterbury; Hoyt Construction Co., Holyoke, Mass.; Harris Construction Co., Stamford, and The Amsterdam Building Co., New York City.

ARTISTS TO PROVIDE SUNDAY NIGHT RADIO PROGRAMS

NEW YORK, Sept. 21. (AP)—Sunday night radio programs to be broadcast by artists of international repute were announced today at a meeting attended by radio executives and five of the artists—Anna Case, Louise Homer, Hulda Lashanska, Toscha Seidel and Reinald Warrenrath.

Contracts have been signed by these five and by twenty other artists including: Edward Johnson, Charles Hackett, Frieda Hempel, Albert Spalding, Benno Moiseiwitsch, Paul Althouse, Arthur Middleton, Mischa Levitski and the State Symphony orchestra of New York.

After the meeting, J. Atwater Kent, who financed the project, and W. E. Harkness, assistant vice-president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, whose stations will broadcast the programs, announced that the consent of many other artists had been secured and that contracts would be signed upon their arrival in New York.

The tentative list announced, included: Ernestine Schumann-Heink and Margaret Matzenauer, subject to the approval of the Victor company; Josef Hofmann and Mario Chamlee, subject to the approval of the Brunswick company, and Lucrezia Bori and Florence Easton, subject to the approval of the Metropolitan Opera company. It was also announced that negotiations with Feodor Chaliapin and Mischa Elman had been entered into.

Each Sunday night from October 4 to May 1, one of the artists will broadcast for one hour, beginning at 9:15 o'clock (Eastern Standard time). The first program will be given by Reinald Warrenrath.

RT. REV. JOHN G. MURPHY OFFICIATED AT PORTLAND

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Rt. Rev. John Gregory Murphy, auxiliary bishop of Hartford, Conn., today made his first visit here since advices were received confirming his selection as bishop of the Portland diocese. He was celebrant at one of the early masses at the Cathedral of Immaculate Conception.

His visit was for the purpose of making preliminary arrangements for his official transfer to the Maine bishopric, as he expects soon to assume his duties here.

SEEKING STAMFORD MAN CHARGED WITH FORGERY

STAMFORD, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Henry I. Rubin, last seen in New London, Sunday, is still being sought by Stamford police who have a warrant for his arrest charging forgery on two counts. Rubin, an automobile dealer, is alleged to have forged the names of two local men to conditional bills of sale for automobiles which are claimed not to have been bought.

Deputy Sheriff Michael Ryan and Constable Schlechtwet have several actions against Rubin, but have been unable to make any attachments on account of not finding any assets.

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

A census report of four towns in eastern Connecticut within a few miles from Norwich, taken in 1850, proves of interest today, offering as it does a comparison with the census of 1930. Many changes have been made since those days and little is heard about butter and cheese reports in assessors' offices today.

Other news of interest 75 years ago, taken in part from the files of the Norwich Courier, is as follows:

Tuesday, Sept. 17, 1850.—We are deeply indebted to Charles Bliss, Esq., the assistant marshal of this part of New London county, for the following statistics of four towns where the census has recently been completed.

Franklin is credited with having 163 dwelling houses, 187 families and 894 inhabitants. In Lebanon there are 391 dwelling houses, 433 families and 1,901 inhabitants. Colchester census gives 421 dwelling houses, 497 families and 2,468 inhabitants, while Bozrah reports show 164 dwelling houses, 179 families and 863 inhabitants.

Franklin further reports a total of 10,278 acres of improved land and Lebanon 21,566 acres of improved land, while acres of unimproved land are given as 3,706 and 6,891, respectively. The total value of farms in Franklin is figured at $376,850, while those in Lebanon are valued at $762,259. Value of livestock in Franklin is placed at $35,673, and in Lebanon at $83,973. Butter values in Franklin, in number of pounds, is fixed at 35,710, and cheese, by pounds, at 13,420, while in Lebanon they are fixed at 98,815 and 57,855, respectively.

Charles J. McCurdy in a report to the committee concerning the advantages of the New Haven and New London railroad says that New Haven, the termini, is a city of 20,000 population, and New London and Norwich, now suburbs of each other, have as many more. Norwich, he writes, with its vicinity, is the most important manufacturing district of Connecticut. He also mentions the various lines connecting New London, passing through Norwich, the lack of competition, cheapness of construction, and the advantages the road will offer New Haven. Stock is already subscribed for, he writes, and many people should be induced to assist in the completion of the road.

Thursday, Sept. 19, 1850.—The earnings of the Norwich and Worcester road for the quarter ending Aug. 31st were $70,044.12, against $60,491.48 for the corresponding quarter last year. This is a gain of $9,549.64 and is considered a pretty fair showing.

Over 10,000 people heard Jenny Lind in her third concert, the greatest number of people ever gathered under one roof for any concert ever held in America! People crowded into every available space to hear her wonderful voice and the streets were jammed with those who hoped to hear her during her concert.

Pressure is being brought to bear on those possessing capital to get them into the New Haven-New London road, which, if completed, means a cutting down of the running time between New York and Boston to four and one-half hours, a great saving. The road will also connect with the prosperous Norwich and Worcester road and a big income is expected. New Haven papers and leading citizens all along the line of the proposed railroad are backing the idea, and money is coming forth for stock at a rapid rate.

Saturday, Sept. 21, 1850.—It is estimated that the golden yield of California during the coming year will not fall short of $50,000,000. Many Connecticut men and not a few Norwich men are on the west coast at the present time and reports sent home indicate that gold often runs as high as from $1 to $5 a pan.

Whigs all over the state are preparing for the small town elections. Last year divisions among themselves caused a defeat at the polls, but it is stated that no trouble will come this year and the loco foco government will be at an end after the elections two weeks hence.

The senator from Tennessee urged a cut in the naval program from $9,000,000 to $2,000,000. He is backed by other southern senators in his argument that we should again be reducing the expense. Our answer to this is "Maybe."

People, rather merchants, who laughed at Genin, the hatter, when he paid $225 for a ticket to hear Jenny Lind's first concert, and who said he was foolish, now wish they had bought the ticket. No man ever got statewide free advertising, in fact national advertising for a price so small. It looks as though Genin was the sharpest one in the crowd.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

TESTS OF RASPBERRIES IN CONNECTICUT

The 1925 raspberry yield figures from the demonstration plots of E. T. Jackson of Southington and G. I. Field of Branford, Conn., will be of interest to all raspberry growers. The plots on Jackson's farm were four years old and on Field's plots two years old. The yields, in quarts per acre, were as follows:

Variety	Jackson	Field
Latham	4776	5430
Herbert	2184	3648
Perfection	2112
June	2088	600
St. Regis	2088
Cuthbert	1968	3600
Marlboro	276	408
Erskine Park	528

The superior yielding ability of the Latham variety is clearly demonstrated in both instances. Besides its productiveness the Latham is an attractive berry of good quality. It is firm enough to ship well. The color is a bright red, making it an attractive market berry. The quality is as good or better than most — although it is not of such high quality as the Cuthbert. The writer believes that during the next few years it will prove the most profitable berry for southern New England. Since it is hardy and is known to do well in Vermont as well as Minnesota and Iowa, it may prove to be a profitable variety over a much wider range of the country.

One of the most disastrous diseases of the raspberry—as all raspberry growers know to their sorry—is the mosaic disease. The Latham variety seems to get mosaic as well as other varieties, but the writer has yet to see an instance where the mosaic has very seriously affected the Latham variety.

During the past two years, horticulturists have been suggesting that raspberry growers secure the Redpath raspberry in place of the Latham but the importance of this would seem to be somewhat doubtful with the present evidence at hand. The Redpath is claimed to be a strain of Latham which is free from the mosaic.

Connecticut growers should consider only three raspberry varieties for the mid-season or late crop. They are Latham, Cuthbert and Herbert. For early varieties the choice should be made from June, Perfection and St. Regis.

Several Connecticut growers have secured a few plants of the Newman variety from the New York State Fruit Testing Association at Geneva, New York. Its record in Canada as well as in Washington, D. C., make it well worth testing.—W. H. Darrow, fruit specialist.

COW TESTING ASSOCIATION RECORDS ARE ACCURATE

Yearly milk and butterfat production as determined in cow testing associations by weighing and testing one day's production each month is accurate within a very small per cent, says the United States Department of Agriculture. To determine the accuracy of the cow testing association method of calculating yearly production, the department made a study of the actual yearly production records of 70 cows of the Minnesota Experiment station. These Minnesota records gave the production of milk and butterfat for each milking throughout the year. By systematically picking out the weights and tests for one day each month as they would have been obtained by cow testing association methods and thus calculating the yearly production it was found that the association method was accurate within 2 per cent on milk production and within 3 per cent on production of butterfat.

A tabulation was also made of 100 yearly individual cow records from the department farm at Beltsville, Md. These records gave only the milk production night and morning for each day in the year. A yearly total calculated from one day's record each month, when compared with the actual milk production showed an accuracy within 1.99 per cent. These comparisons indicate that the method used in cow testing association work gives a very accurate record of production.

GOOD PACKING CARRIES EGGS WELL

The economy of careful packing of series of shipments to test the comparative efficiency under commercial conditions of eight different methods of packing eggs in cases and two methods of buffing or bracing the cases in the cars. The eggs carried through to market with comparatively little damage.

The tests were made recently under the auspices of the Interrelations Committee, representing egg case and filler manufacturers, shippers, railway and express companies and receivers in cooperation with the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

The eight different methods of packing used were as follows:

No. 1—Standard case, standard fillers and flats, four excelsior pads.

No. 2—Standard case, standard fillers and flats, six excelsior pads.

No. 3—Cut down case 3-8 inch in depth than standard, standard fillers and flats, four excelsior pads.

No. 4.—Standard case, standard fillers 1-8 inch deeper than standard, four excelsior pads.

No. 5.—Standard case, standard fillers and flats, cup flats top and bottom.

No. 6.—Standard case, standard fillers, cup flats throughout.

No. 7.—Cut down case, standard fillers, embossed flats, four excelsior pads.

No. 8.—Standard case, standard fillers, embossed flats, cup flats top and bottom.

HANDLING THE OLD HENS

As the season advances and culling continues, there is a tendency to double up the old hens so as to make room for the rapidly maturing pullets. Unfortunately hens do not stand moving at this time of year, unless some change in care and management is made to meet and offset the effects of moving. Perhaps the best single practice that can be adopted is artificial lighting. Old hens respond very readily to artificial light during September and October. This does not mean that any great increase in production can be obtained, but that a flock giving five per cent production when lighted will hold at 50 per cent production for a considerable time. For this purpose, the night lunch system of lighting (from nine to ten o'clock in the evening) is decided the most effective.

Hens intended for breeders next season should not be lighted after October 15th. So far as the writer can determine, there is no particular disadvantage in the fall lighting of hens that are to be used for breeders—except that to fall production delays the molt and naturally delays the season of hatching egg production in the spring.

The Barracks System (as described on the Connecticut Poultry calendar) works out very satisfactory where houses and equipment will permit.

Increases in typhoid and scarlet fever cases were reported to the state department of health during the past week. The number of new cases of typhoid jumped from five for the previous week to ten last week and scarlet fever increased from seven to 20.

FATALLY INJURED WHEN HURLED THROUGH WALL

READING, Mass., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Thomas Surrette of this town, who was hurled through a brick wall when a chemical tank exploded today at the factory of the Leo Products company of Lynn, manufacturers of artificial leather counters for shoes, died tonight at Winchester hospital. Angelo Arsenault, also of Reading, who was blown into a field along with Surette, was in a critical condition, physicians said.

Walter Murphy of Stoneham, a third victim of the explosion, which demolished the one story building occupied by the factory, was expected to recover. With another employe he was thrown out of the building through an open doorway and severely burned.

POETRY

GOD'S MUSICIANS.

Specks and spheres are God's musicians,
Everywhere their hallowed lays
Charm the ears attuned by Wisdom
To discern divinest praise.
Everywhere the soul hears music
If it has with God communed;
He reveals Himself most truly
To the ear most truly tuned.
Stars and storms are His musicians,
Light and darkness sing His praises;
Mud and snowflake, dust and downpour,
Carol forth His holy lays.
Highest mountains, deepest canyons,
Shifting sand and surging sea,
Calm and tempest, cloud and sunshine,
Unsurpassed their symphony!
Every tree sings "Holy!" "Holy!"
Every blade of grass a hymn!
Swell, my soul, their hallelujahs,
Honoring and praising Him!

TO A ROSE.

(The perfume of a flower is but the presence of its invisible soul.—Lafcadio Hearn.)

O winsome flower,
The pearl of grace;
But not to that
Your charm I trace,
'Tis by deeper loveliness
You steal into the hearts you bless.

A lure the gaze
Will be admired,
A guerdon vain
Am never desired,
But blossom from whose virgin throat
Soft scents, like unheard music, float.

Flowers there are
That live to flaunt;
And never do
Their memories haunt,
And when they die, nor dirge nor dole
Lament their blossoms void of soul.

But you—you breathe
To the your thrall
A lyric sweet
Ethereal,
And teach in perfume, like a song,
That deeds of fragrance linger long.

I love to watch
Your petals ope,
Seraphic flower,
And watching hope
There may be roses in the sky,
And—we shall meet there, you and I.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Anxious Wife—Alec, have you done anything about that terrible, black hand letter you received?

Alec—Oh, yes my dear wife. I turned it over to my insurance company. Let them worry about it. They have got $20,000 tied up in me. — Cougar's Paw.

Professor—I maintain that men and women are equal.

Co-Ed—Oh, professor, you're bragging.—Georgia Cracker.

Minnie—Mother, do you know where Johnnie's washing is?

Mother—No, why do you want it?

Minnie—I just wanted to scare him. He has the hiccoughs. — Cougar's Paw.

Judge—Why did you sell your vote?

Voter—Oh, just a little political economy, Judge.—Portsmouth Jack O'Lantern.

Are you getting anything out of that book on building your own radio set?

Well, there are some cute hook-ups and curlycues in here that I'm going to try on my fishing tackle next summer.—Judge.

(While mother is at log bed)—Mummie, how—

Mother—Yes, dear.

Willie—Mummie, I may well warn you that I'm going to start prayin' for a bicycle, so you'd better begin savin's up.—Judge.

Prof—What raw materials are imported from France?

Soud—Plays and novels—Michigan Gargoyle.

Is your girl dumb?

Yep, she's so dumb she thinks a tonsorial parlor is a throat doctor's office.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Irate Parent—Sir, why did you kiss my daughter last night in that dark corner?

Flaming Youth—Now that I've seen her in the light, I see it was a case of mistaken identity.—Bradford (Pa.) Era.

She—I'm going to sell kisses at the Charity Bazaar. Do you think $1.00 each is too high?

He—Oh no. People expect to be robbed at bazaars anyhow.—St. Mary's (Pa.) Daily Press.

Policeman—Did you run over this man?

Motorist — Yes.

Policeman—Let me see your license.—Judge.

O'Brien—O fear no man alolve! Oi am ready to fight as long as there's a breath in me body.

Cassidy—Yes, that's plenty so O'Brien always fight with.—Milwaukee Journal.

Rastus, does you love me?

Snowball, how many times must I tell you that men love bears a constant ruffo to your banking account.—Colorado Dodo.

1st Professor—All students are honest.

2nd Professor—How come?

1st Professor—A motion picture theater with a hundred inside it caught fire. Three hundred got their money back.—Black and Blue Bay.

Mrs. J.—I do hate to have my husband kiss me after he comes back from the barber. I detest the odor of the brilliantine on his mustache.

Her maid—Oh, do you really, ma'am. Why I rather like it.—Buffalo Express.

I'm glad you came over. I just wanted to dance the worst way.

Too bad. Grace, the chaperon's awfully strict.—Williamsport Sun.

WESTERLY

A largely attended military wedding took place Monday evening, at 6:30, in the Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church, Westerly, when Miss M. Edna Niblock, daughter of William H. Niblock, of Boston, became the bride of Lieut. Reginald Langworthy Dean, U. S. M. A., son of Mrs. Annie L. Dean Wilcox of Pawcatuck. Using the Episcopal single ring service, the ceremony was performed by Dr. Clayton A. Burdick, the pastor. The church was beautifully decorated with palms, pink and white dahlias.

Entering the church walking with her father, by whom she was given in marriage, as the wedding march was played on the organ by Miss Martha C. Eaton accompanied by Miss Amy Eaton, violinist, the bride-elect was met at the altar by the groom. She was gowned in white crepe chiffon and carried a shower bouquet of delphinium and sweetheart roses. She was attended by Miss Dorothy N. Perry as maid of honor; she wore rose crepe chiffon, trimmed with silver and carried delphinium and pink asters. The bridesmaids were Carlotta A. Maxson and Virginia R. Maxson, the bride's cousins, of Philadelphia; Mary E. Hiscox, a cousin of the groom, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mary H. Damarel, Elizabeth W. Damarel and Ruth V. Davis, all of Westerly. They wore powder blue chiffon over ivory satin and carried bouquets of pink asters and small white dahlias.

Lieut. John F. Williams, of Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., a classmate of the groom at West Point Military academy, was best man. The ushers were all classmates of the groom with the exception of Lieut. DeWees, who was graduated in the class of 1925, U. S. M. A. They were Lieuts. Robert H. Thompson, Fort Wardsworth, N. Y.; Emerson L. Cummings, Bay City, Mich.; Emerson C. Itschner, Chicago; John H. Brewer, George A. Tucker and Allan W. DeWees, all of Fort Wright, Fishers Island, N. Y.

The reception following the wedding ceremony was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul F. Estey, cousins of the bride, at 67 Elm street, following which Lieut. and Mrs. Dean left Westerly on a wedding trip and will make their home at 610 1-2 Buffalo street, Ithaca, N. Y.

Lieut. Dean was graduated from Westerly High school in 1918, and was a classmate of the bride. Receiving appointment to West Point, Mr. Dean attended the military academy where he distinguished himself in running and football and excelled as a student, being detailed to the engineering corps. After a short stay at a Virginia fort he was transferred to Ithaca, N. Y. The bride has made her home with her aunt, Mrs. Margaret A. Maxson, 29 Spruce street, while attending school in Westerly, following which she taught in Charlestown and Bradford, R. I. Many beautiful wedding gifts were received by Mrs. Dean.

Platoni Cini, of Old Mystic, Conn., was before Acting Judge M. Walter Flynn, Jr., in a special session of Third district court Sunday evening, on two complaints, one the operation of an automobile while under the influence of liquor and the second, that of refusing to stop at the command of an officer. The defendant was reported to have operated his Ford coupe through Broad street in a reckless manner and to have nearly struck Police Officer George H. Champlin, who told him to stop. Police Patrolman George Madison found Cini and placed him under arrest. He was fined $100 for operating an automobile under the influence of liquor and $10 for refusing to obey an officer and with a total of costs paid into the district court $135.60 for his indiscretion.

Mrs. H. P. Auld, of New London, formerly of Westerly, was a Monday visitor in Westerly and Pawcatuck.

Judge and Mrs. William A. Wilcox, of Pawcatuck, motored to Matunuck, R. I., Sunday night.

Mrs. S. M. Galli was an automobile visitor in Providence Sunday.

Westerly District Sunday School association held a meeting Monday evening at Grace Methodist church, High street. Rev. Alva L. Davis, pastor of the First Hopkinton Seventh-day Baptist church of Ashaway, president of the association, presided.

Associate Justice Antonio A. Capotosto was on the bench Monday morning in West Kingston at the opening session of the September term of superior court for Washington county. At this session practically every attorney from Westerly was present, as well as many from Providence. The police departments of the Washington county towns were represented while the court officers included Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell. Deputy Sheriff Thomas Peirce was the court crier.

Assistant Attorney General Louis V. Jackvony, of Providence, acted for the attorney general and examined the grand jurors as to their qualifications, nineteen of whom were found qualified. Thomas W. Cruickshank, of Westerly, was excused as it developed that while ill recently he had neglected to register and was not therefore a qualified voter. The grand jurors were charged as to their duties by Judge Capotosto, and retired in charge of Sheriff Mitchell at 11:30 to consider the twenty-five cases, the largest number in many years, presented to them. They are: South Kingstown—John Heckle, James H. Northup, Herbert H. Ford and Henry A. Potter; North Kingstown—John E. Wilcox, William LaFountaine, Jr., Francis E. Haven and Walter W. Sherman; Westerly—C. Palmer Chapman, Herbert LeRoy Pellett, Fred S. Opie and David Robertson; Hopkinton—George E. Allen and Donald F. Babcock; Charlestown—John J. Burdick; Narragansett — Charles W. Walsh; Richmond—Stephen H. Weaver; Exeter—Charles C. Sweet.

Clerk W. Herbert Caswell read the assignment docket and the cases were disposed of as follows:

After the assignment docket had called and the motion calendar heard, in the case of Edwin D. Vennard vs. Harold Lihme, the court reduced the bail of the defendant from $50,000 to $20,000 after a motion for the reduction of bail had been argued by Attorney Herbert W. Rathbun for Lihme and Attorney John Ferguson, Jr., representing the plaintiff.

Cases on the attorney general's docket will be called for trial Wednesday. Today (Tuesday) will be "divorce day."

In the equity case, Flora C. Mooney vs. Newman F. Tuckerman, on the complainant's motion to adjudge the respondent in contempt of court.

After hearing the testimony of four witnesses and arguments of Attorney Walter M. Flynn, Jr., for the complainant and Attorney John J. Dunn for the defendant the court adjudged him guilty of contempt in violating an order made by Judge Charles Walsh in the superior court on July 7, in which a temporary injunction was granted against Tuckerman, restraining him from operating busses on any of the thoroughfares of Rhode Island.

Judge Capotosto stated that it is clear that defendant has infringed the scope of the injunction and warned Tuckerman should he carry on the business in the future he will be sent to jail. "If the defendant stops, he said, "I am willing to attribute it to an error." In addressing Attorney Dunn Judge Capotosto said: "Tell him to stop."

It was alleged in the complaint against Tuckerman that he had violated the injunction issued by Judge Walsh restraining him from operating jitneys and alleged that he did operate busses on the Potter Hill road carrying school children and had made five or more trips to Bradford after the temporary injunction had been granted.

It was made clear at the hearing that Tuckerman is restrained by the injunction granted by Judge Walsh from carrying any passenger whatsoever over any street in Rhode Island.

REPUBLICANS PESSIMISTIC ABOUT IRISH TREASON ACT

DUBLIN, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The new Treason Act of the Free State is being actively administered, and the Republicans declare that it will provoke a recrudescence of the old struggle. Prosecutions have been instituted against Republicans on the charge that they are members of an illegal military organization which holds courts-martial. One man was said to have been court martialled for recognizing a Free State Court.

Searches are reported to have revealed some remarkable documents, one of which dated April 22, 1925, signed by Frank Aiken, once chief of staff of Eamon De Valera's forces, lays down the attitude to be assumed by Republicans toward the Free State and Northern Governments to which allegiance must be denied.

Another document captured at Kilkee, County Clare, deals with members of the Republican Army who contemplate emigration. They must certify that they are forced to leave Ireland by extreme economic distress. They are then put on a "foreign reserve list" for a period of five years, and pledge themselves while abroad to increase their efficiency as soldiers. The emigrant undertakes to save up the price of a return passage and come back immediately when called.

COLISEUM OF ANCIENT ROME TO BE REPRODUCED IN MOVIES

CULVER CITY, Cal., Sept 21 (AP)—A reproduction of the great coliseum of the ancient Romans, said to be one of the largest "sets" ever constructed for a moving picture production, is being built on a 60-acre lot here at a cost of $300,000. Plans call for 10,000 actors to appear in the scenes.

Italian Emigration Decreases

ROME, Sept. 21 (AP)—Laws of the United States and other nations outside Europe which restrict immigration, are advanced as the reason for decreased Italian emigration during the first four months of 1925. In that time 118,000 Italians left to make their homes elsewhere, compared with 146,000 during the first four months of 1924.

CANNOT COMPETE WITH U. S. AUTO TRADE SAYS GERMAN

BERLIN, Sept. 21 (AP)—A number of reasons were expressed recently by Dr. Carl Reichstein, automobile industrialist, why, in his opinion, Germany never can compete with the United States as an automobile market. Explaining the necessity for a protective automobile duty, he points out that Germany never will be in a position of attaining anything like American prices because of the impossibility of turning out the same number of cars, and even if this were feasible there would be no means of disposing them.

An automobile in Germany is a much greater luxury than in America, Dr. Reichstein declared, and even in the event of a general increase in incomes no person with an annual income of 10,000 marks would dream of buying a car for a price even as low as 2,000 marks. Germans, it is asserted, attach greater importance to housing, clothing intellectual enjoyments and the education of their children than do Americans.

PLAYS IN ANCIENT HEBREW SUCCESSFUL IN MOSCOW

MOSCOW, Sept. 21 (AP)—Soviet Russia is probably the only country in the world that maintains a special Hebrew theater, where plays are produced in the modern style, but by a special cast of artists in the ancient Hebrew tongue.

This theater which is partly subsidized by the state, has its own building, where performances are given from two to four times a week. During the last two years the Hebrew players have scored great successes and nearly the whole Moscow population, Jews and orthodox alike, flocked to see their art, despite their own inability to understand a single word.

The Hebrew theater, known under the name of "Habima" has become one of the Moscow's sight-seeing objects and every foreigner, visiting Moscow, who is at all interested in art, deems it necessary to visit the theater. During last year two mystical plays—Hadibuk and Golem were performed, and two new plays staged by Stanislavsky will be produced the coming season. The company will leave in the autumn for an extended tour of Europe and America.

ARMY SPENDS MORE THAN $10,000,000 IN PHILIPPINES

MANILA, Sept. 21 (AP)—The United States army in the Philippine Islands spent $10,147,386 in cash from the United States during 1924, a statement prepared by the Philippine department shows.

This sum does not include all of the money spent during the year to meet the needs of the army in the Philippines, but simply represents the actual cash disbursed here. In addition to this sum much more was spent in the United States for supplies and materials which were sent to the islands during the year.

Of the total expended here in cash, $7,567,163 went for the pay of officers and enlisted men, field clerks and army nurses. The balance was expended for forage for the several thousand horses and mules, subsistence stores, coal, gasoline and many other articles.

NEW PLAN OF TAXING AUTOS BEOOMES EFFECTIVE IN CUBA

HAVANA, Sept. 21 (AP)—Cuba's new transportation tax, basing charges for passenger vehicles on wheel base and trucks by capacity, went into effect on August 1.

There are five classes for the passenger vehicles, as follows: under 105 inches wheel base, $40 a year; to 120 inches, $50; 128 inches, $60; 135 inches, $75; and over 135 inches $90.

Trucks with a carrying capacity larger than seven tons are prohibited. The yearly charge for the four classes range from $25 for a three-quarter ton vehicle to $400 for seven tons capacity.

Taxicabs are given a special concession, their tax being one-half the amounts assessed privately-owned machines. Small American cars are in taxi service throughout the island and far outnumber those in private use. Latest figures in Havana give the taxis about a two to one ratio over private owned cars.

ACTIONS OF MATTERHORN SCARE MOUNTAIN VILLAGERS

ZERMATT, Switzerland, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Peculiar actions on the part of Matterhorn, one of the lofty peaks of the Alps, recently caused the evacuation of their places by the inhabitants of the mountain slopes. A series of landslides were followed by the appearance of broad and deep crevices on the mountain side, causing considerable worry and fear to the people.

Appeals for help were sent to the nearest Swiss towns and to Turin, Italy. The authorities ordered all the villagers to vacate their places and go to Breil. Soldiers were rushed to the district and were obliged to use forceful measures to get some of the inhabitants to leave and take their cattle with them.

A number of engineers and a detachment of Alpine troops have been quartered in the vacated villages to await developments.

Oldest Steamer Burned

KOEPING, Sweden, Sept. 21 (AP)—The steamer Fenix, which, it was claimed, was the oldest in the world in active service, recently was destroyed by fire. Built in 1848 at Motala wharf, the boat had been making regular trips between this city and Stockholm. Since its launching it had been rechristened several times and was rebuilt in 1900.

At the time of its destruction there were 16 passengers besides the crew aboard, all of whom escaped.

Havana Police Trail Flirts

HAVANA, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Cuban gallants can no longer whisper salutations to the beauties who attract their eyes on the streets of Havana.

Secretary of Interior Rogerio Zayas Bazan has issued orders to the police to arrest men annoying women on the streets. Plain clothes men were assigned to the task of clearing the streets of these men, who, the police say, are a small, but troublesome minority.

Insurance Booming in Japan

TOKYO, Sept. 21 (AP)—Statistics gathered by the Life Insurance Association show that the total of life insurance contracts of 144 insurance companies throughout the empire reached 4,681,557,000 yen at the end of May, the number of contracts being 5,121,000. Compared with last year an increase is shown of 317,532,000 yen in the amount of contracts and 227,500 in the number of insurance takers.

Famous French Stallion Sold

BERLIN, Sept. 21 (AP)—The famous French stud stallion, Niceas, has been sold to a German stud for 360,000 marks. Agents refused to divulge the name of the purchaser. Niceas was foaled in 1920 and is a product of the stud of Baron M. de Rothschild. During three years' racing the stallion was the winner of more than 500,000 francs.

Some men never play cards for money simply because the other fellow sets it.

300 BIBLES TO BE USED BY NEW U. S. STEAMSHIP

When the Maiolo—the largest and fastest high-powered steamship ever built in the United States—sets forth on her first run between San Francisco and Honolulu in the spring of 1927 she will be better equipped with Bibles and hymn books than any vessel ever built in this country.

There will be a Bible in each of the 274 staterooms, and the remainder of the 300 Bibles which the ship will carry will be placed in the public rooms and in the quarters of the officers and crew. There will be 400 hymnals, so that no one will lack an opportunity to join in the religious services on board.

The Maiolo is now being constructed for the Matson Navigation Co., at Cramps' shipyard on the Delaware river. She will make the rund trip between San Francisco and Honolulu in eight days, cutting four days from the time by the swiftest passenger steamers now on the run.

ORCHIDS SOON COMMON, BRITISH SCIENTIST SAYS

Before very long the orchid may cease to be the floral decoration only of the wealthy, remarks the Cardiff Times. At the Royal Horticultural show at Chelsea I was told that British growers in Surrey have discovered how to produce orchids on the mass production principle, and that they can germinate more than 20 seeds where nature could germinate 1.

The chemists have achieved this revolution, producing in the laboratory a culture from the fungus specially suited to a particular orchid and handing it on to the grower in a jelly on which the orchids are grown. The result is very hard on the explorer, for already the new hybrids being produced in this country fetch more mone ythan the newest specimen discovered in an American swamp.

The days when an explorer could come home and sell rare specimens for L1,500 each are gone, and, indeed, there are more orchids being exported from this country to America than come here from the states. With mass production it may soon be possible to buy orchid roots almost as cheaply as primroses.

Argentina Acreage Gains

Argentina has increased her wheat area above the record acreage reported on July 15, according to a cablegram received by the United States department of agriculture from the international institute at Rome. The area sown to wheat is now placed at 18,829,000 acres against 18,532,000 acres the probable acreage reported as of July 15. This is the largest acreage which has ever been reported. Last year the area sown to wheat was 17,792,000 acres but unfavorable weather conditions caused considerable loss and the area actually harvested amounted to only 15,976,000 acres. This year the crop was seeded under favorable conditions and the moisture supply to date has been satisfactory.

The flax acreage seeded for the 1925-26 crop amounting to 5,710,000 acres is larger than that of any preceding year with the exception of 1924-25 when the acreage seeded amounted to 6,323,000 acres. The acreage harvested last year, however, due to drought and frost damage amounted to only 3,379,000 acres.

Increases are also reported in the acreage of oats, barley, and rye. The acreage sown to oats amounts to 2,940,000 acres compared with the July 15th estimate of 2,842,000 acres and 2,646,000 acres seeded last year, barley 815,000 acres against 791,000 acres as of July and 680,000 acres for 1924-25; rye, 445,000 acres against 420,000 acres as of July 15 and 341,000 for 1924-25.

Rubber Exports Gain

The value of rubber manufactures exported from the United States during the six months ended June 30—$23,857,173—exceeds that for the same period in any year since the peak of 1920. The figure given is an increase of more than 20 per cent over the $19,648,687 worth of rubber products exported in the first six months of 1924. The increase is chiefly due to a greater volume of exports but in a measure is also the result of the higher unit of the various commodities.

Whether this increase presages a permanent improvement in the share of American manufacturers in the world trade in rubber products is said by Commerce Reports to be problematical. The rise in the price of crude rubber and the resulting increase in the price of rubber products may have influenced foreign dealers toward overstocking, which would be reflected accordingly in a falling off of imports in the latter part of the year. On the other hand, the improvement in world economic conditions and the general price increases in the leading consuming countries no doubt will place American manufacturers in a more favorable competitive position.

Argentine Illiteracy High

Educational circles in Argentina have been rudely jolted by the publication of records showing an increase in illiteracy. Of the 20,000 conscripts called this year, one-third were unable to read or write and another one-third were semi-illiterate. The standard of education of the others was low rather than high. In some regiments 50 per cent of the recruits could neither read nor write, while in others the percentage was not below 30. The great percentage of army recruits come from the poorer classes in the cities and from the rural districts. Low wages and excessive living costs cause parents to send their children to work at a pitifully low age and the educational regulations are too lax to keep check on them.

Lake Very Well Named

Lake Superior, between the United States and Canada, is well named, being the largest fresh water lake in the world. It is, strangely enough situated 600 feet above sea level, and it covers an area of 31,200 square miles. It is also noted for its fine and plenteous fish.

Indigestion—under the trees

With the fun of cold picnic lunches and the make-shift meals of summer outings, Nature usually shows her resentment with a touch, or worse, of indigestion.

This needn't happen, however, if you take the precaution of stocking up on Pep-o-mint Life Savers when you pack the lunch basket. They help you dodge indigestion and make a wonderful dessert after the lunch.

* * *

Indigestion is a miserable thing. So many people suffer this way. If they only knew that simple old method our grandfathers used—peppermint.

And now it is available in a new and really convenient form—Pep-o-mint Life Savers; the little candy mints with the hole.

It sounds very simple and old-fashioned. But Pep-o-mint Life Savers really do the trick. Try them after meals when that heavy, logy feeling comes over you—or to relieve that irritating distress of indigestion. Pep-o-mint is displayed at all good stores so you may help yourself: also Wint-o-green, Cinn-o-mon, Lic-o-rice, Cl-o-ve and Vi-o-let. Five cents a package.—Life Savers, Inc., Port Chester, N. Y.

Movement for 'Workers' Colleges Grows in Ohio

WEST LAFFERTY, Ohio, Sept. 21—(AP)—Public speaking, English composition, English literature, psychology, modern labor problems, and the history of organized labor are the subjects being taught in a new Workers' college which opened in this village last spring and was so successful that it was continued throughout the summer.

There are now seven such colleges in Ohio, but here is located the only one in a small community, a mining settlement. The effectiveness of the work is expected to influence other communities and industries to adopt the idea. It is understood that during the next few months, 15 new institutions of the kind are to be opened in Ohio.

Cincinnati had the first college, founded in April, 1924. The six others are at Hamilton, Springfield, Columbus, Marion, Bucyrus and West Lafferty. Toledo, Cleveland and Newark are among cities preparing to open Workers' colleges this fall.

They are fostered and directed by trade unionists, usually central labor bodies, which are endeavoring to teach wage earners the knowledge that will be most beneficial to them. The colleges are open to non-unionists as well. Propaganda is discouraged. Since the working classes are more familiar with labor halls, the colleges are generally conducted in them. The work is financed through fees from students and contributions from local unions, schools.

Crafts and trades are not taught, that work being left to vocational. The colleges have been endorsed by the national and the state federations of labor, cooperating with the Workers' Education Bureau.

British Students to Fly

LONDON, Sept. 21.—(AP) — Two university air squadrons at Oxford and Cambridge for the training of a certain number of undergraduates, were predicted by Air Minister Sir Samuel Hoars in a speech recently. There are a number of young men there who are intensely interested in aviation and who wish to learn about the technical and scientific side of flying, he said, and there is no reason why a successful scheme should not be established and even extended to other universities.

Fire caused by a short circuited dynamo in the power plant of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway company at Chelsea, caused injury to 11 men and damage of $25,000.

Fleets in Tilt

When the British war fleet was sailing up the Baltic recently to visit the Baltic capitals it met Soviet warships off Libau. The British raised the old czar colors and fired a five-gun salute. The reds were insulted and did not reply. According to the bolshevik version of the incident the British raised the Dutch flag, which is similar, to the old Russian sea banner.

Molla Beats Marion.

ARDSLEY-ON-HUDSON, N. Y., Sept. 20. (AP)—Mrs. Molla B. Mallory, of New York, vanquished Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup, of Wilmington, Del., in the final round of the women's invitation tennis tournament here today, 6-1, 6-4. It was Mrs. Mallory's third triumph over her Wilmington rival this season.

Resinol stops itching and makes skin clear and smooth

Piney Creek, N. C., Jan. 4:—"I had a breaking out on my face that looked like chicken pox. I suffered so from it that at night I would not sleep for hours at a time. I tried various remedies, but nothing did me any good until I tried Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. It stopped the itching and burning instantly and after a few applications the skin peeled off and left my face clear and smooth, instead of rough and bumpy. I don't know of anything better than the Resinol products." (Signed) W. R. Mitchell.

LAW-BREAKERS AT NEW LONDON BEACH GET OFF EASY WITH NOMINAL FINES

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 21.—Henry J. Feldman, 431 Windsor avenue, Hartford, who was arrested early Sunday morning at 6 Ocean View place, Ocean Beach, charged with conducting a disorderly house, and Eva Belmont, 999 Union avenue, Bronx, New York; Rose Barker, 340 East 9th street, New York; Dr. Manning King Rose, 290 Huntington street, and Gus Markoff, 11 Home street, this city, and Harvey W. Corwell, Clinton avenue, Apponaug, R. I., charged with frequenting, did not fare badly when presented in police court this forenoon, for the Acting Prosecuting Attorney caused the original complaints to be amended to breach of the peace.

All of the accused entered demurrers which were overruled and fines imposed. Feldman received a fine of $50 and costs and the frequenters were fined $5 and costs each. The raid and prosecution of those caught in the police dragnet, however, broke up the resort, for today the occupants of the cottage vacated the place. The girls have returned to New York and Feldman is arranging to return to Hartford where he has been employed as a chauffeur.

The raiding of the place caused much comment among residents in Neptune park and along the boardwalk for these residents were not aware of the existence of the sporting resort until today, although to New Londoners other than those who reside at the beach it was a common fact that the place existed. It is reputed to have enjoyed much patronage, particularly late at night. A second place was also in existence until the raid occurred and with knowledge that the Ocean View place had received a call from the police, the proprietor of the other establishment, which was located on Bentley avenue decided to suspend business.

Bert De Vault, released from jail last Thursday after having served a term of three months, is back there now to put in twice as long a period at work for the county. He doesn't like that sort of employment, but he appears to be unable to restrain his brutal instincts when he partakes of liquor. He was intoxicated when he beat Catherupo Bruno last June, after Bruno had befriended him, and had bestowed his hospitality on him. Saturday Bruno did the same trick when Henry Healey, a butcher, provided food in abundance for him and displayed a desire to make De Vault feel that the world was not so bad as he had perhaps regarded it. De Vault was formerly a soldier. His trouble has all come from indulgence in drink and it has come in abundance at times. He beat Healey savagely Saturday. Today he took the consequences.

Liquor seems to have led all to the court this morning. The list was a long one, even for Monday, for there were a dozen cases on the docket. Daniel Stahler, Jr., a young man who has had an experience that should be a lesson to any man, does not seem to realize that unless he quits the use of booze he is apt to quit the world. He has been a railroader and has been arrested several times. Notwithstanding he has been shown leniency that would appear to be like treatment for a sick man he appears not disposed to benefit and turn from the wrong to the right course. He was in court today on complaint of his wife and she declared that he beat her and abused her in other ways. He may consider that he is getting a last chance to reform now for his case was continued a month that a change in his conduct might be wrought.

John J. O'Malley told the court that he had been "up against it" in the not-long life he had lived. He said he had lost $7,000 in business ventures and had become discouraged. Sunday he was taken into custody for intoxication. Judge Prince could not come to look upon the offense as one of an aggravated nature and held out a helping hand to O'Malley, in that he suspended judgment that the accused man might go to work at his trade, that of a plumber.

William Broadhurst was charged, and rightly, he said, with having become intoxicated. His lapse was as plain as it could be. He was fined, but the collection of his money was suspended.

Bernard Steward, a sailor allotted to the state pier, was both drunk and ugly Sunday. He was taken into custody when he showed that he was a nuisance in the street. Companions in the service proposed to take Steward to his station, but he quit them about as soon as he started and came back to the police more boisterous than before. Today he was charged with a breach of the peace and with intoxication and the offense brought him fines that aggregated $20. He couldn't pay so he went to jail.

Frank Arunchuk added to his court record in becoming wildly drunk and then going to Schoolhouse lane where he created a disturbance and threatened damage to person and property. He carried out his threat in the destruction of a house door and the shutter that was outside of it as well as the window glass in the door. Arunchuk buried a father's hatchet in the door of the home of the Bishop family in the lane instead of in the head of someone who might interfere with him. The police were called and Mr. Arunchuk was hustled to the lockup. He represented that some one had pushed him against the doors he smashed, but that was the vague story of an intoxicated man. He was fined $20 and that took him to jail.

Funeral services for Edward W. Hopkins were held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at his home, 36 Ashcraft road and were attended by a large number of mourners, including a delegation of members of Nonowantuc Tribe, Independent Order of Red Men, and a representation of employes of the New London line pier of the New England Steamship company where Mr. Hopkins had been employed about three years. Rev. Horatio J. Chase, pastor of Montauk avenue Baptist church conducted the services, and members of the Red Men acted as bearers. At the committal service in Jordan cemetery, the members of the Red Men conducted their ritual.

The funeral of Michael Salomon was held this morning at 10 o'clock at his home, 73 Montauk avenue, the services being conducted by Rabbi Alexander Bernstein, of New York. The bearers were Mr. Salomon's four nephews, Dr. Albert and Joseph Labensky, Walter Baruch and Donald Salomon. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

The funeral of Miss Mary F. Moran, formerly of this city, whose death occurred several days ago at a New York hospital, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by many mourners. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Alexander Wollschlaeger. The bearers were Julian D. Frederick S., Matthias R. and James Moran. Burial was in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery.

The police today were requested to institute a search for Frank LeFemina, 31, of 44 Smith street, an employe of the Babcock Printing Press, a manufacturing company. Mrs. La Femina appeared at the police station asserting that her husband disappeared Sunday noon and since that time his whereabouts have remained a mystery.

Title in the property located on Montauk, Hall and Pequot avenues, and Chapel street, formerly owned by the late Senator Frank B. Brandegee, has been transferred to Ernest E. Rogers by the National Bank of Commerce, administrators of the Brandegee estate. Mr. Rogers has been negotiating for the property for several weeks.

An automobile owned and operated by Peter Klarkide, 40 Front street, was damaged and Klarkide sustained lacerations, bumps and bruises late last night when the steering gear became disabled, resulting in the machine crashing against a telephone pole on Pequot avenue. Klarkide was taken to Home Memorial hospital by Patrolman John Hogan, but the patient will be under treatment at the institution only a few days.

Walter Davis, 8 Williams street, complained to the police this afternoon that his motor boat, which is moored in Shaw's cove, rear of 112 Howard street, was visited by thieves sometime Sunday and that a compass and a pump were stolen.

Mrs. Irving Jones, of Elm street, Stonington; Miss Nellie Cassara, Pequonoc road, Groton; Miss Virginia Fields, Eastern Point, Groton, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

The two days' state convention of the Junior Order of American Mechanics started here this evening with a street parade. The parade started on Bank street and after a brief march through the streets, went to Odd Fellows hall, where a lunch was served. The business of the convention will be transacted tomorrow. The parade tonight was participated in by about 300 members and was headed by the United States Coast Guard Band and Roosevelt council; the New London organization. The other organizations were escorted by the Greenport fire department band and Sam Houston drum corps, Norwich.

Eunice Edwards, widow of Andrew J. Phillips, 20, Hempstead street, died Sunday at Uncas-on-Thames, Norwich, in which institution she had been receiving treatment some time. Mrs. Phillips is survived by her mother, Mrs. Margaret Edwards, a son, Edward Phillips, and two sisters, Mrs. Mary Reagan and Mrs. Dorothy Griffin, all of this city, and another sister, Mrs. Jesse Gyger, Oregon, and a brother, Harry Edwards, of Chicago.

David J. Keatly, of Somerville, Mass., and Miss Geraldine MacIntosh, daughter of Mrs. Helen MacIntosh, 203 Huntington street, were married this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the parsonage of the Methodist Episcopal church by Rev. Charles E. Spaulding. Robert Keatly, of Somerville, brother of the groom, was best man, and Miss May Dondero, attended the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Kently are on a honeymoon trip and upon its conclusion will take up their residence at the home of the bride's mother.

In the Groton town court this forenoon before Deputy Judge Charles F. Willard, Nerosaus Bedrossine, New York, charged with reckless driving, was fined $25 and costs, the latter amounting to $14.50. He took an appeal and furnished a cash bond for his appearance at the next term of the court of common pleas.

Watson A. Burton, Willimantic, arrested Saturday, on a charge of speeding, pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $10, together with costs amounting to $12.92.

Percy Miner, Mystic, charged with non-support, was ordered to pay his wife Evelyn Miner, $10 weekly for her support and that of her two children.

Mason Wright and Joe Wilson, colored, residing near Eastern Point were arrested Friday charged with breach of the peace. They were released upon furnishing bail of $10 each, for their court appearance today, but when they failed to appear their bonds were called.

Julia and Annie Wieczorek, aged 16 and 17, respectively, daughters of Mr and Mrs. Boleslaw Wieczorek, 32 Sixth street, appear to be much abused young women and at the hands of their mother for early this morning the two girls visited the police station and accompanied by their uncle, Stanley Wieczorek, 9 West Colt street, related a heart-rending tale of the mother having not only beaten the girls, but to having attacked them with a knife. The girls attempted to sleep at their home last night, but because of the further treatment by the mother, the girls went to the home of their uncle and will remain there indefinitely, or until such time as the mother is given a hearing in the police court, which will probably be during the week. Policewoman Jane Cassidy has reported the acts of the Wieczorek woman to Acting Prosecuting Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky after having investigated the stories related by the girls and found their statements true. The Wieczorek woman, according to the report of Policewoman Cassidy, is addicted to strong drink and whenever the woman becomes intoxicated she appears to not only delight in beating the girls, but to attempt to inflict bodily injury on them. The brother-in-law of the woman also corrobrates the statements made by the girls and further expresses a willingness to give the girls shelter, until such time as the mother is made to realize that she cannot further abuse her children. The girls have work and are self-supporting, so are not compelled to live at home, but prefer to do so if their treatment is such as should be accorded to them.

Sebastian Muscarella, 87 Bayonne street, was arrested this afternoon by Motorcycle Officer George McCaskey and Patrolman William Riordan charged with breach of the peace. Muscarella and his wife have been estranged several weeks and today he went to the Muscarella home to see his children and then became involved in a quarrel with his wife, the latter seeking and obtaining her husband's arrest.

COUNCIL GRANTS PETITION OF KENYON AND SHAPIRO

(Special to the Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 21—The city council this evening granted permission to Lewis M. Kenyon and Samuel Shapiro to erect a one-story brick building at 43 Jay street, this being the petition over which there was much controversy and over which mandamus proceedings were brought befort Judge Allyn L. Brown of the superior court. The matter was continued till tomorrow, but it will not proceed farther now. A new petition was presented this evening which supersedes that which came into the council a fortnight or more ago. The opinion of the director of law was to the effect that the petitioners had the right to erect a building there, if by so doing they conformed to the laws of the city. Councilor Whiton desired an amendment to be made to the vote of the council warning the petitioners that though the establishment of the zoning districts in the city attention would be given to the character of the business established, and that it was the intention of the council not to give permission for the establishment of an unlimited business there. He desired that a separate vote should be passed on the application of Messrs Kenyon and Shapiro and such a vote was adopted, though Councilor Fox opposed the amendment saying that the council cannot pass such a vote as to restrict the use of any building that may be erected. He inquired of the city manager whether the director of law had not give nthe opinion that the petitioners could erect such a structure and be within their rights and was told that such was the opinion of the city's law officer. Councilor Fox held it was clear that owners of property had the right to build on their land and to make use of it as they desired and that the sort of building to be erected had no reation whatever to the granting of the petition. The land nor the building has not given the opinion that the petitionthe council has nothing to deny. Councilor Whiton assumed, on what had been said in the council meeting on a previous date, that it was the purpose of the petitioners to establish a wrecking business there and to consolidate the branches that now require the renting of four place. Te said it was not, in his opinion proper for the council to pass a vote that would allow a business that would be a nuisance to neighbors the action of the council should be to so inform the petitioners. When the amendment was introduced Councilor Scott asked how this notice of what the council will or will not do can influence the vote on the application to build. If a nuisance is established it can be dealt with under existing ordinances, he held. The amendment was prepared Councilor Whiton and was adopted by the council, with Councilor Fox voting against it. Afterwards Mr. Fox said he would oppose the passage because he did not believe it had any effect and his opinion was that the council was proceeding illegally and that the action the council took was absolutely without any force or standing in law.

The council declared its intention to build a sewer on Pequot avenue from Gardner avenue 4,202.5 feet north to School street.

City Manager Holt requested the council's attention to the purchase of land by the city for a water shed along Bolles' brook. He asked that the matter should be taken up in executive session and that the council agreed to do.

Councilor Scott of the committee appointed on radio interference stated that the council and the city was powerless to interfere with the established system. He said the law allowing it was passed in 1912. The trouble could be remedied if the New England Navigation company would spend a few dollars to put its apparatus in condition, but the company would not do this, though the equipment was substantially useless now. He made a report of progress, which was accepted.

Permission was given Morris L. Hendel to establish a lunch car on Bank street on the site of the Firemen's Lunch, the same to have cement walls and toilet facilities. A previous application that did not provide the toilet facilities was rejected and the new application was substituted.

An amendment to the gasoline and inflammable fluids section of the ordinance in existence was given its second reading.

Ordinances providing for sewers on Colman and Pierce streets were given another reading by title and adopted.

MINERS VOTE TO POSTPONE BIENNIAL CONVENTION

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 21—A referendum vote on the question of postponing the biennial convention of the United Mine Workers of America until January 1927, has resulted in almost unanimous approval. It was explained at headquarters of the organization today that the principal business of the convention would be the formulation of a new wage scale agreement to supplant the one entered into with the operators at Jacksonville, Fla., in 1924, and which expires in 1927, the holding of a convention in 1926, the next regular year, is deemed unnecessary by union officials.

Famous Italian Doctor Dies

MILAN, Sept. 21, (AP)—Professor Battista Grassi, the famous bacteriologist and physician, died recently at the age of 70. He was widely known in the international medical world as an investigator of malarial diseases.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

PAUL SPECHT'S ORIGINAL ORCHESTRA AT ARMORY

In response to the numerous requests made to this noted leader, while playing at the Palace Theatre last May that he favor the dance fans of Norwich with an evening of dancing Paul Specht will appear in person at the Norwich State Armory next Saturday together with his original band including the "Georgians and Romancers".

Since his last appearance, Paul Specht has added to the personnel of his band and he states the novelty concert and dance scheduled for this city will surpass any of his previous efforts.

While invariably true that the majority of orchestras appearing in vaudeville are seldom the riot when dance music is concerned due to their highly specialized offering for stage work, this is exactly the exception with Specht. Specht's international fame as the originator of symphonic rythmatic dance syncopation has gained solely through his exceptional interpretation of the modern and classical in dance arrangement. The Prince of Wales who is unusually critical in that respect considered Paul Specht his ideal in dance combinations and judging by the manner in which Specht captivated the music lovers of this city, his opinion seems more than justified.

BALTIC

The selectmen and town clerk held a session at the town clerk's office Saturday the 19th to examine the qualifications of electors and admitted to the elector's with 46 of the persons appearing on the list of the town prepared by the Registrars of Voters under the title "to be made." Thirty nine were from the 1st and seven from the second district.

During the past week two members of the Baltic rifle club received two medals from the National Rifle association. In rifle match No. 4, Harry Saggent, Baltic, came in first with a score of 176 out of 200 shooting at 50 yards; standing rifle used was Grimes Ballard. The next three highest scores were as follows: C. J. Perry, Saginaw, Mich. 167; P. T. McNeal, Ames Iowa, 154; C. S. Hayes, Chambersburg, Pa. 148.

In pistol match No. 1 firing at 25 yards, George Greishamer came in fourth. Following are the five highest scores: J. W. Aitken Rekoma, N. D. 393 out of 400; J. Benson Ancon, Canal Zone, 386; J. S. Wiggins, Luther, Okla. 385; G. Greishamer, Baltic, Ct., 385; W. S. Gibbons, Melrose, Mass 384.

Greishamer used a Smith & Wesson pistol. Both men will compete in future matches to be conducted by the National Rifle Association of America.

There is a show that opened at the Broadway theater yesterday that we advise you not to miss.

Five B. F. Keith vaudeville acts are on in this program including Bebe Daniels in the Manicure Girl.

The vaudeville is out of the ordinary; the variety alone will please the most discriminate theatergoer with its comedy, singing, dancing, mirth and novelty.

It is announced that starting Thursday, Mr. Davidson is giving up the active management of this theater to take care of his theater interest in Willimantic. He is succeeded by Mr. Collins of New York who will see to it that the wants of Norwich theatergoers will be fully satisfied.

As an example of what you may expect in the future the last of this week is coming that sensational act The Plantation Creoles, a company of fourteen people with a red hot jazz band, singing and dancing chorus and real comedians. All this in addition to the regular program. Then there will be a two for one matinee on Thursday and a prize night the same day.

Breed Theater

A woman's fight for youth and for the love of a young man many years her junior is the basic theme of One Way Street, an emotion-stirring photoplay now showing at the Breed theater.

The picture is an adoptation of Beale Davis' sensational novel, which topped the lists of best sellers for a considerable time. Produced by First National and directed by John Francis Dillon, who guided the destinies of Flaming Youth, the picture is a co-featuring vehicle for Ben Lyon and Anna Q. Nilsson.

Lyon, who rose to film fame in Colleen Moore's Flaming Youth, will be seen in the part of an American youth who becomes a pawn in the hands of an English noblewoman.

Miss Nilsson enacts the role of Lady Sylvia Hutton, who, in her quest for youth, almost wrecks the business and social careers of the young man she chooses to share her daring adventures.

The supporting cast includes Marjories Daw, Lumsden Hare, Mona Kingsley, Thomas Holding and Dorothy Cumming.

Appointed By Coolidge To Disease Congrers

Dr. Francis D. Donoghue, M. D., of Boston, Mass., who has been named by President Coolidge to represent the United States at the Fourth International Congress of Industrial Accidents and Diseases, held in Amsterdam, Holland.

MARKET WAS UNSETTLED.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(A. P.)—Heavy calling of loans resulting in the marking up of the call money rate from 4 1-4 to 6 per cent, precipitated a general selling movement in today's stock market which definitely checked the speculative operations for the rise. The break came after an initial outburst of strength in the motor shares, which carried General Motors, Studebaker and Hudson to new 1925 high levels on extreme gains running as much as 5 1-3 points above last week's closing quotations.

Call money's stiffening tendency was generally attributed to the correction of the $15,6000,000 deficit in reserve shown in last Saturday's clearing house statement. Net declines ranged from 1 to 5 points, with the sharpest breaks taking place in the high priced industrial specialties, whose rapid advance has been a feature of recent markets. Trading was relatively heavy in volume, the day's sales running well over one and three quarters million shares.

Trade and financial news was largely favorable suggesting that outside news developments were having little effect at present on market movements. Publication of the first August railroad earnings reports, which made an unusually favorable comparison with the same month last year, brought about a temporary display of strength in the rails but later they fell back in sympathy with the industrials, although the losses were not as large. Kansas City Southern, the first road to report actual figures showed net railway operating income of $495,985 last month, as against $406,860 in the corresponding month of 1924, bringing total operating income for the first eight months of the year to $3,266,856 as against $2,943,031 in the same period of the previous year.

Trading in the motor, rubber and [illegible] stocks comprised more than one-half of the day's total business. Durant was again the outstanding feature opening 5 1-3 points higher [illegible] then slipping back to 83 1-3 on profit taking. General Motors touched a record top at 107 3-8 and then dopped back to 105 1-4 for a net gain of 3 points on the day. Studebaker reached new high ground at 58 1-4, but closed fractionally lower at 56 5-8. Steward Warner was run up over four points to a record top at 79 1-8, and closed within a fraction of the high. American Bosch Magneto, Mullins Body, Stromberg Carburetor, and Yellow Cab Manufacturing advanced 1 to 2 1-2 points but Dodge common and preferred, Kelsey Wheel, Packard, Pierce Arrow, Jordan and a few others showed net losses of 1 to nearly 3 points.

The extent of the decline is illustrated by American Can's reaction from 244 7-8 to 238 3-4 and a subsequent recovery to 240, where it was off 4 3-4; and mack Trucks dropped from 220 1-4 to 213 1-2 where it was off about 2 1-2 points on the day. Other popular issues to show net declines of two or more were American Car and Foundry, Baldwin, International Harvester, Pullman, Certain-Teed Products, Montana Power, Sears-Roebuck, Westinghouse Airbrake and Worthington Pump.

American and Foreign Power developed outstanding independent strength by moving up over four points to a record high at 50 3-4 when the selling movement in other sections of the list was at its height. The Market Street Railway issues also moved against the current trend.

Call money opened at 4 1-4 per cent. advanced to 5@5 1-2 and thence to 6, duplicating the year's high price, while bank loans to the extent of $35,000,000 or more were being called. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchange rates were slightly reactionary. Demand sterling eased to $4.84 3-16 and Italian lire and Belgian francs each ruled about 5 points lower around 4.09 and 4.39 cents, respectively. French francs held firm at 4.73 1-2 cents on reports that the French debt mission would present a concrete proposal, involving immediate payments, for the settlement of its debt to this country.

TAFTVILLE

Robert Pilling of Providence street and Patrick Donahue of Norwich avenue visited the Eastern States Exposition at Springfield, Mass., Sunday.

Miss Elizabeth Houston of South Second avenue spent the week end in Plainfield.

Mrs. Henry Fontaine of Plainfield has been a recent guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Chesbro of Norwich avenue.

Christian Hoefer of Maennerchor avenue, Ermon Fontaine, of South Second avenue and John Thoma of Lisbon are motoring to Canada, in Mr. Hoefer's car.

Miss Emma Bedard of Providence street is spending a week at Brooklyn, N. Y., where she is the guest of her aunt.

Miss Helen Allard of South B street who has been recuperating after an operation for appendicitis, is able to return to her work.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brown of Maennerchor avenue have been recent guests of Mr. Brown's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Brown of Springfield, Mass., and while there attended the Eastern States Exposition.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Frohmader of Dion street, Mrs. John Grieshammer, and her daughter Miss Margaret Grieshammer of Baltic, are enjoying a motor trip to the White Mountains.

Rev. Edwin G. Crowdis, pastor of the Taftville Congregational church had charge of the service at the Norwich State Hospital, Sunday morning.

Antonio Belanger has resigned his position with the No. 1 carding department of the Ponemah company.

Mr. and Mrs. Desire Dion and family of Terrace avenue have moved to a house on Merchants avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Volkman and family have changed their place of residence on Norwich avenue.

Under the auspices of the Taftville Athletic Association, Coleman Brothers shows opened on the Providence street grounds, Monday evening. All the attractions appeared to be well patronized. A special transformer set up in one corner of the field, enabled the sho wto be well lighted with electricity. The show has been at the New London County Fair.

A photograph of the players of the Taftville Athletic Association, taken in front of the grandstand on the Providence street grounds, is on exhibition in the store of George W. Weller.

A notice of reward with photographs of George (Dutch) Anderson, pal of Gerald Chapman, and wanted for robbery and murder, is prominently displayed in the local post office.

Dr. James G. Burr of Baltic was in town Monday.

Miss Freida Bauer is ill at her home on Maennerchor avenue.

COLDEN WEDDING IS CELEBRATED IN LEBANON

A family gathering of more than fifty was entertained Sunday at the old colonial home of Willis O., and Mary Jane (Whipple) Gardner in Lebanon in observance of their fiftieth wedding anniversary. They were married in Colchester, Sept. 13, 1875.

The anniversary observance was a complete surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Gardner, having been arranged by their children. Mrs. William F. Clark, Mrs. Arthur Hewitt and J. Lee Gardner, who provided a fine collation.

The visitors were from Hartford, Meriden, Norwich, Montville, Norwich Town and Yantic. Mr. and Mrs. Gardner were the recipients of many pieces of gold, pottery, china and other articles.

Willimantic Motor Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Andrews, of Willimantic and the former's sister, Mrs. Charles F. Clark (Sadie Andrews) of Whitneyville, motored to Norwich during the past week for a call on their cousin, Mrs. John Irish, of Laurel Hill. Mr. Andrews is a widely known musician of Willimantic. The guests were pleasantly entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Irish and their niece, Miss Roath during their stay.

In $100,000 Club.

Edwin V. Ross was notified Monday by the Travelers Insurance company that he has attained membership in the $100,000 club of that company and is well on his way to membership in the $250,000 club, indicating that amount of paid-up insurance written in the year.

LETS CONTRACT FOR 6,000 TONS OF PIPE FOR LINE FROM NEW RESERVOIR

Preparations for starting work on the new reservoir for Norwich on Deep River brook in Colchester are advancing and it is probable that the first real work will soon begin in laying a section of the pipe line. It is believed that it will probably be possible to lay between two and three miles of the line before cold weather sets in that will stop the work.

The contract for the iron pipe has just been let by the board of water commissioners after receiving bids from four different concerns. About 6,000 tons of pipe will be required to cover the distance of about 9 1-2 miles from the reservoir to this city. The pipe contracted for will be in 18-foot lengths instead of 12 foot, thereby effecting a saving of from 35 to 40 joints. The contract calls for delivery of 2,000 tons this fall and the balance in the spring.

The contract has been awarded to B. Nicoll & Co. of New York city at a price which effects a saving to the city of approximately $35,000 over the other bids. This firm's bid was at one price for all three classes of pipe which will be required for the work, while the other bidders submitted different prices for the different classes.

The pipe is to be made up in three classes, viz.: A., B. and C. Class A pipe is to have a working head of 100 pounds per square inch; Class B 150 pounds per square inch and Class C 175 pounds per square inch.

Each individual pipe is tested with hydrostatic pressure 300 pounds to the square inch for Class A and 350 pounds per square inch for Classes B and C. The testing engineers will reject any pipe that shows any defect in it.

The following were the bids:

R. D. Wood & Co.—$51.45 per ton for first 2,000 tons of Classes B and C. $55.45 per ton for first 2,000 tons of Class A.

Warren Foundry & Pipe Co.—This firm submitted a price for about three miles of piping—$51.60 per ton for Classes B and C; $55.60 for Class A.

United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Co.—This firm could handle any part of 40 per cent. of the order —$51.80 for Classes B and C; $55.80 for Class A.

B. Nicoll & Co.—$47.50 for all classes. In addition the firm also assumes the inspection charges which amount to about $2,500.

The contract for the pipe has been prepared by the board of water commissioners in conference with City Engineer Shepard B. Palmer, Mayor Milo R. Waters and Corporation Counsel William H. Shields, Jr. The favorable outcome of their work will be very gratifying to the citizens.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES IN NATIONAL COUNCIL

The twenty-first regular meeting of the national council of the Congregational churches in Washington, October 20-28, promises to become an historic event in the life of the denomination. President Coolidge is the honorary moderator and it is expected that he will be present the opening night and make an address. Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter of Hartford, Ct., is moderator of the council and will deliver the moderator's address, reviewing the progress of the denomination and outlining the problems the churches are facing.

Other speakers of note who will take part in the program are Rev. Carl S. Patton of Los Angeles, who will preach the council sermon; Rev. S. Parkes Cadman and Rev. J. Percival Huget of Brooklyn, Bishop J. F. McConnell of the Methodist church, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York, Prof. Plato Durham of Atlanta. There will also be a number of public men from Washington on the program, as Chief Justice Taft, Secretary Wilbur, Commissioner Esch. Mrs. Mable Willebrandt and several of the ambassadors resident in Washington.

This meeting will be noteworthy for two reasons: First, it will witness the merging of the Evangelical Protestant churches with the Congregationalists. This denomination has been carrying forward negotiations for some years and voted last year to become members of the Congregational fellowship, adding more than ten thousand members to the denomination and several large and influential churches. These churches will be welcomed into the membership of the council at Washington.

The second event which will make this meeting historic will be the action taken on the proposal to merge the nine missionary societies into two. This proposal is the result of a study carried on for two years by a committee of twelve men and women. The first proposal was to merge the nine societies into four. This created so much discussion that the committee finally decided to recommend the complete merger of all foreign work under one board and all the homeland societies under a home board. This report will provoke wide-spread discussion and will be hotly debated. The final action cannot be forecast. If the report is adopted it will mean the merging of societies having invested funds of more than $50,000,000 and an annual income of more than $5,000,000.

Among those expecting to attend this meeting in Washington from Norwich are: Rev. Alexander H. Abbot, Rev. and Mrs. Gurdon F. Bailey, Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, Mr. Abbott and Mr. Bailey are delegates from the New London county association of Congregational churches and ministers. The party will leave for Washington on October 19th.

SNAPPY BOXING BOUTS AT GROTTO SMOKER

Sailors from the Submarine Base provided two of three snappy boxing bouts that made a capital entertainment for Nemrod Grotto's smoker Monday evening in Grotto hall. In the lightweight division, Sailors Rechin and Southard went four fast rounds and a bout of the same length was put on by Sailors Holliday and Kirby, middleweights, who traded punches in several hurricane exchanges while they were in the ring. Two local boys, Kid Rutchik and Young Levine, also provided an interesting session with the gloves.

Referee Reed, who was from the Submarine Base, entertained also with some clever acrobatic work, while Boxer Southard was heard in pleasing solos.

Light refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

NEW LONDON WOMAN INJURED AT MILFORD

Miss Sarah Lubchansky, 21, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lubchansky of New London and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Laucar of 11 Pike street, Carbondale, Pa., are patients at the Milford hospital suffering from injuries received when the machine in which they were riding collided head-on with a machine operated by Abrahym J. Lancher of Brookline, Mass., in Milford early Monday morning. Miss Lubchansky suffered a badly lacerated leg wound but her condition is not considered serious. Mrs. Laucar suffered a badly lacerated scalp wound and is said to be in a serious condition.

The Laucar machine was operated by Arthur Laucar.

The Laucars were returning to their home after a week's visit at New London. Miss Lubchansky was on her way to Columbia university.

SAW UNIQUE SPECIALTY AT SPRINGFIELD EXPOSITION

A party of Norwich visitors to the Eastern States exposition at Springfield on Sunday mentioned one of the unique specialties which one of the exhibitors, Thomas Gorton, had included with the display of the well known Gorton fish products. At the Gorton booth is to be seen Capt. Alfred Johnson, now 79, who achieved fame in 1876 by sailing a 16 foot dory alone from Gloucester, Mass., to Liverpool in 66 days. The captain is hale and hearty and enjoys telling stories of his experience and handing out cards with a picture of the dory that made the deep sea voyage.

ASHFORD WILL CELEBRATE KNOWLTON ANNIVERSARY

The town of Ashford is preparing for a big day September 30th, when the first anniversary of the dedication of Knowlton Memorial town house and community building will be celebrated at the village of Warrenville, twelve miles north of Willimantic.

The Knowlton Memorial was given to the town of Ashford a year ago by the late Charles Clark Knowlton of the Hammond-Knowlton Silk company and a native of Ashford. The building is of unique character and design the outer walls of native round stones laid in cement, and the interior of concrete walls and ceilings and inlaid hardwoods, and it cost $100,000. It contains rooms for the several town offices, with a large steel vault, the probate office, the Babcock public library of 5000 volumes, established and endowed in 1862 by the late Archibald Babcock of Providence, also two large assembly halls, on the first and second floors, the lower auditorium capable of seating 500, with stage equipment for dramatic entertainments; also complete lighting equipment and heating and kitchen outfits.

The donor gave the building especially in honor of his father, the late Jonathan W. Knowlton, a lifelong resident of Ashford, and also in honor of the Knowlton name so distinguished in Ashford history by the military achievements of Col. Thomas Knowlton and Lieut. Daniel Knowlton of Revolutionary days.

The present governor of Connecticut, John H. Trumbull of Plainville was born in Ashford about 55 years ago, although not of the Ashford family, as his father was a native of the north of Ireland. But the people of Ashford were proud of the new distinction and very promptly extended an invitation to the governor to join the Ashford family reunion on the occasion of "Old Home Day" which is the outstanding feature of the coming celebration. Governor Trumbull has accepted the invitation, and will attend.

The programme for the 30th will present afternoon and evening assemblies. The Babcock cornet band, a local institution endowed by the late Archibald Babcock at the same time he endowed the library, and said to be the oldest cornet band in continuous existence in the United States, will give a band concert at 1:30 p. m. under the lead of Prof. A. B. Lyman of Columbia; there will be chorus singing by the school children, of whom Ashford registers over 200; a brief historic address, with also five minute talks by former residents or descendants and representatives of neighboring towns; and an address by Governor Trumbull.

From five to seven o'clock there will be an early social and reunion time and the ladies of the Aid society and the local grange will serve a bountiful collation. The governor will be afforded opportunity to visit historic places in town, as the home of the Knowltons, the old-time General Palmer inn of revolutionary and stage-coach days, and which in recent years has been restored and decorated in remarkable manner by the present owners, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Haggett also the governor's own birthplace near the East Killington line.

Everybody who ever lived in the town of Ashford, or descended from earlier Ashford families, is invited to attend the celebration; also the people of neighboring towns and the general public.

More than 800 persons attended the dedication a year ago, and a similar attendance is expected this year. It is proposed to observe this anniversary every year.

The evening programs will open with a concert by a special orchestra under the lead of Professor Lyman; a "travelogue talk" will be given by Professor Charles A. Wheeler of the Connecticut Agricultural college; and then will come the dancing and "old fashion" dances will be featured as well as the modern steps.

Gilbert Mathewson is chairman of the general committee, Hon. Edwin A. Buck and Mrs. Ruth Barlow have charge of the music and the entertainment is in charge of Orin P. Durkee, Mrs. Grace Albee, and Mrs. Alexander Bassett. Representative Allen B. Lincoln will preside at the afternoon meeting.

FINES ARE IMPOSED IN THE CITY COURT

Pleading guilty to a charge of operating an automobile without a license, Thomas Burke of 36 Sturtevant street, Norwich Town, was fined and paid $25 and costs at the Monday morning session of the city court, Judge Arthur F. Libby on the bench. Burke became involved in a minor accident at Norwich Town when he collided with a bridge in order to avoid hitting a machine. He voluntarily came to police headquarters and reported that he was driving without a license.

Adolph Burkowski of 119 Thames street was sentenced to jail for 30 days and fined costs on a charge of the breach of the peace, in striking his wife. A Taftville man was fined $5 and costs for intoxication, and $10 for resisting an officer. He paid a total of $23.50. Two Montville men and a Wauregan man were each fined $5 and costs for intoxication.

Charles Schuman, 23, of 11 Freemont street, New London, was presented on a charge of not having his driver's license with him and in violation of the traffic ordinances. This was a continued case. The charge was nolled by Judge Libby on payment of $8.

The case against John Spencer was continued for two weeks under bonds of $2,000. He is charged with being a fugitive from justice and is wanted on a warrant charging non-support, the warrant being issued in High Point, N. C. Spencer is held here pending extradition proceedings.

THOUGHT WOMAN WITH KNIFE CHASING HIM

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 21.—A negro, about 37 years of age, who claims to reside on Rose street, Boston, is a prisoner at the police station tonight and mentally unsound and his condition is such that he is bordering on violent, he having been apprehended by Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray, who was attracted to the fellow by his strange actions. The insane man declares that he is Walter Adams and has hallucinations that a woman is seeking his whereabouts for the purpose of inicting bodily injury to him. When arrested and searched the man had a ticket, purchased today, for transportation from Norwich to Boston.

The man was observed by Officer Ray on Hempstead street, corner of Federal street, shortly after 7 o'clock. He was swinging his arms wildly in the air and when the officer approached the man, the latter declared that a woman near the corner of Prospect street, was lying in wait for him and that she was armed with a huge knife. The officer accompanied the fellow to a point near Prospect street and pointing to a passageway between two yards, the man declared the woman had entered there and warned the officer that she would attack the latter if he entered the passageway. Officer Ray then realized that he was dealing with a maniac and not a sane man and at once escorted the man to the police station.

FIVE NORWICH BOYS ATTENDING HOLY CROSS

(Special to the Bulletin)

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 21. — Five young men from Norwich, Conn., have registered for work in the upper classes at Holy Cross College, according to the list of more than 300 names, the largest registration ever at the college, made public today. The list of nearly 350 freshmen will not be ready for publication until later in the week.

The Norwich boys include, seniors, John F. Murphy and Matthew J. Sheridan; junior, Edward J. Sullivan and sophomores, John J. Brennan and Joseph J. Mahoney.

Shenandoah Float Prize Winner

The decorated float which was entered by Waddington, the florist, at the county fair, winning first prize, was a very accurate model of the Shenandoah, worked out in white cape flowers. Four white doves tipped off the posts with red, white and blue ribbons. The base of the float was entirely covered with oak and laurel with real flowers; and the shields on the doors were made of solid red, white and blue cape flowers. Art critics congratulated Mr. Waddington upon his float and naval men who had seen the Shenandoah in her hangar at Lakehurst, N. J., complimented him for the correctness of his model. The two little pilots at the wheels were Bobby Brettin and Mary L. Waddington, daughter of the florist. Mrs. Raymond C. Britten acted as chaperone. The prize of $100 was paid to Mr. Waddington by the society.

Boy Scouts See Movie.

One hundred and fifty Norwich Boy Scouts were guests of the Palace theatre management Monday night to see the picture, The Pony Express. They met in Shetucket street and marched to the theatre, headed by a drum corps. Scout Executive F. A. Benton expressed for the Scouts, Monday night, their thanks to the Palace theatre management for the opportunity of seeing the picture.

Forty Hours Devotion

The forty hours devotion was begun Monday evening at St. Joseph's church. There were large congregations at the services.

SUFFERED AFTER BIRTH OF BABY

Trouble Caused by Getting Up Too Soon. Relieved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Talcville, New York. — "I thought it would interest you to know what benefit I have derived from taking your medicine. A few days after the birth of my third child I got up too quick. Then just before my fifth child was born I had inflammation of the bladder and displacement. Seeing your advertisement in Liverpool (England) paper I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and that was the best confinement I had. Whenever I feel run down I always take the Vegetable Compound as a tonic. We have just removed from Brockville (Canada) so I was pleased when the store ordered the medicine for me and I got it today. I would not be without it for any price and I recommend it to ladies around here because I feel so sure it will benefit any woman who takes it." — Mrs. AGNES WIGNALL, Talcville, New York.

Women can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve them from ills peculiar to their sex. For sale by druggists everywhere.

PROTESTANT CHURCHES WILL CONDUCT TRAINING SCHOOL

Norwich is to have one week of intensive training under the auspices of the Protestant churches, for pastors, Sunday school superintendents, departmental superintendents, teachers of all groups, public school teachers, members of church educational committees, prospective teachers, and young people's workers. Six courses are to be offered, covering a wide range of subjects.

The school opens next Monday evening at 7 in the Central Baptist church and continues each evening for five nights. A union mass meeting in the interest of the work is to be held next Sunday evening at 7:30 (standard time) at the Central Baptist church. Two class periods will be held each evening so that each subject is covered in ten lessons. It will be in all respects a standard school. Suppers will be served at 6:15.

The courses and instructors are:

1.—Miss Congdon of Norwich public schools—"Organization and Methods of Primary Department." Text: "Methods for Primary Teachers."—Lewis.

2.—Mrs. Finn, field worker, department of religious education, Baptist Publication society, "A Study of the Intermediate Pupil." Text: "Early Adolescence"—Mudge.

5.—Mr. Abbott, pastor United Congregational church. "A Study of the Modern Church School." Text: "The Coming School of the Church"—Chalmers.

6.—Mr. Campbell, director of religious education for Connecticut Baptist churches. A lecture course for young people's workers.

FOR FRESHMAN WEEK AT MT. HOLYOKE COLLEGE

Miss Constance Raymond of 124 Broad street, has left to be present at the opening of freshman week at Mt. Holyoke College. Freshman week inaugurates at Mt. Holyoke College the new process of orienting freshmen by inviting them to the college a week before the upper classmen arrive. The week begins on Monday with two days of semi-social adaptation to the new environment including tours of the campus, talks on the history and tradition of the college and on the curriculum and extra curricular activities, a reception to visiting parents, a big banquet and reception in which the freshmen get acquainted with each other and with the faculty. The remaining days are given over to making schedules, interviews with advisers and with a variety of tests and personal examinations, vocabulary tests, speech tests, physical examination and a general psychological test to discover the kind and quality of brains the freshman brings to college with her. This will give the college a very complete idea of the new student's requirements and needs, and will enable them to provide for her complete development more efficiently.

192ND ARTILLERY BAND WON HANOVER CUP

The 192nd Artillery band of New London, in which there are a number of Norwich musicians, was the winner in the musical field day held recently at Meriden in competition with three other bands, the 169th of Hartford, the 102nd of New Haven and the 118th medical regiment of Meriden, in Hanover park. The prize was a silver loving cup to be known as the Hanover cup, the gift of Mr. Illins, manager of the park.

In the competition the four bands were called upon to perform upon the field the interesting features of guard mount, adjutant call and passing in review. The contest was judged on two special points, regulation appearance and tempo, by six regular army officers, whose decision was unanimous for the 192nd band.

It is hoped by the participants that a field day for the national guard bands will be an annual occurrence.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER FOR MISS GETCHELL

A miscellaneous shower was given Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. G. R. Huntley of Jordan, Waterford, by Mrs. Huntley and Miss Hazel Baker, for Miss Florence Getchell of Waterford, in honor of her approaching marriage to George A. Tague of Norwich. The house was prettily decorated in pink and green and the evening was enjoyed in games and music after which refreshments were served. The bride-to-be received many beautiful and useful gifts.

Those present were Susan Penhallow, Lulu Williams, Arlene Wilson, Irene Chapman, Ethel Thorpe, Marion Burnap, Louise Thomas, Arlene Perry, Annie Tattoon, Daisy Hoagland, Florence Hoagland, Hazel Baker, Mrs. Everett Brown, Mrs. Mildred Slack, Mrs. Fred Butler, Mrs. Elizabeth Young, Mrs. Florence Beckwith, Mrs. John Beebe and Mrs. Gideon Huntley.

APPEALS FINE ON RECKLESS DRIVING CHARGE

Kirk Wilcox of Mystic, charged with reckless driving, was found guilty when presented Monday in Groton town court before Deputy Judge Charles F. Willard. He was fined $25 and costs, but entered an appeal through his counsel, Attorney Telley Babcock of Norwich. Wilcox was arrested three weeks ago by State Policeman Arthur Whitmarsh of the Groton barracks after an accident in which the Wilcox machine collided with a truck operated by Daniel Cheseboro of Mystic.

Prosecuting Attorney Warren B. Burrows disqualified himself on the grounds that the complaining witness was one of his clients in civil actions. In his absence, Assistant Prosecutor Harry C. Brogan tried the case.

OPPOSE MATERIAL CHANGE IN NATION'S AIR DEFENSE

High Officials of the Navy Agree in Testimony Before the President's Air Board—Secretary Wilbur Was Supported by Three Ranking Admirals in Opposition to the Creation of a Department of National Defense.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22—High officers of the navy testified today before the president's air board and lined up solidly in opposition to any material change in the organization of the nation's air defense, although they differed slightly as to the administration of minor matter of the naval air service.

Secretary Wilbur, supported by three ranking admirals, emphatically declared that the creation of a department of national defense, as urged by Colonel William Mitchell, former assistant army air chief, would be a "well nigh irreparable mistake" and that the present system "is working smoothly, efficiently and economically."

He opposed, also, proposals that a separate air department be established or that the air service be made a separate corps, analagous to the marine corps, asserting that "the close relationship of aviator to the navy and the absolute inter-dependence of aircraft and ships in wartime at sea had been demonstrated time and again."

The testimony of the navy leaders placed them squarely in line with a majority of the army official, who appeared yesterday, on the subject of dimestic reorganization of the air service.

Mr. Wilbur was accompanied before the board of Rear Admiral Edward W. Eberle, chief of operations, Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics; Admiral Rear Admiral Joseph Strauss, budget officer and a member of the navy general board.

The officers were in agreement on all matters except that pertaining to personnel administration, Admiral Moffett asserting that complete control over the air personnel should be given to the bureau of aeronautics. The differences were developed when Admiral Eberle, recalled to the stand said he believed the navy air chief had given the "wrong impression" as to how many of his recommendations had been rejected by the bureau of navigation, to which Admiral Moffett is responsible.

Admiral Eberle opposed placing complete control over air personnel with the air chief and he believed the bureau of navigation 'must keep all of its complements filled, and if each branch of the service, details its own personnel, we wouldn't have a navy."

Secretary Wilbur opened today's session by reading a prepared statement in which he discussed the operation, policy and organization of the naval air service. He also set forth his views in opposition to any change in its organization, supplementing his opinions with reports from the American naval attache in London, the finding of an aviation investigating committee of the British parliament and quotations from the English press. The reports, he said, reflected a preference abroad for the form of the American air organization.

The secretary also represented a by Admiral R. E. Coontz, commander in chief of the United States fleet, drawn up after the Hawaiian maneuvers, and declaring that the naval air service must remain under the control of the navy, and that "any other arrangements would be entirely unsatisfactory."

This report, dated June 24, last, added that the "commander in chief, as a result of his close personal observations, desires to inform the Department that he considers any further agitation or argument in favor of a united air service or in favor of a separate aviation corps for the navy as being entirely out of date."

When he had concluded his testimony, Mr. Wilbur took a chair behind that reserved for witnesses and gave close attention to the hearing.

Frequently he interjected explanatory comment on later testimony, and at one time checked Admiral Strauss as he was about to state the amount of money the air service has asked of the budget for the fiscal year 1927. This information, Mr. Wilbur pointed out, still was confidential.

The proposal of Colonel Mitchell for an independent air corps, which was favored by Major General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the army air service, in his testimony yesterday, was attacked by Admiral [illegible]. He declared establishment of "an independent air force which would be controlled by another government department" would be contrary to the recognized doctrine of unity of effort in battle and would "bring disaster to the national defense interest."

"Naval aviation is a part of the fleet," he said, "and therefore should be organized to work with the fleet on principles similar to those governing other arms, such as destroyers and submarines.

"We do not want a divided authority. We do not want another navy within the navy."

FAILURE OF GIRDERS CAUSED WRECKING OF SHENANDOAH

LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 22—A failure of one or more girders forward of amidships caused the wrecking of the airship Shenandoah in the opinion of Commander Sidney M. Kraus, of the special investigation board, who testified today before the naval court of inquiry.

Basing his opinion upon a personal observation of the wreck and upon such information about the disaster as he could collect, Commander Kraus said this failure occurred simultaneously with or shortly before or shortly after some very considerable rotational oscillation of the ship in the line squall near Ava, Ohio, on Sept. 3.

This breakage resulted in the nearly simultaneous failure of the frames holding the control car up under the forward end of the ship, the officer said. He added that the control car then probably swung by the after control wires which sheared off a number of frames before it fell, carrying Lieut. Commander Zachary Lansdowne and other officers and men to their death.

Officers who salvaged the forward and after wrecked sections testified that the aluminum alloy of which the girders and beams were made was much more brittle near the sections where the ship broke than in other sections. They said there was no visible evidence that there had been any chrystallization or any erosion of the metal and they offered no theory as to the cause.

Commander Kraus, who observed the construction of the Los Angeles in Germany for 18 months, declared that in his examination of the wreckage he found no evidence of any defective material or defective work. He also said he did not believe any of the helium gas cells had burst due to internal pressure, adding that thence in the stern and bow, which necessarily were subjected to the greatest pressure were intact.

Besides hearing Commander Kraus and the salvage officers, the court received a detailed report from Commander Jacob H. Klein, president of the special investigating board sent to Ohio, and listened to the stories of three other surviving officers which corroborated in the main the accounts given by the large number of officers and survivors who passed before the court in quick succession at the opening day yesterday.

The last of the witnesses immediately available were heard today and while the court decided to meet again tomorrow its procedure is uncertain. It may examine much of the Shenandore wreckage which arrived at the air station here today from Ohio.

Announcement was made during the day that the scene within the great hull of the Shenandoah would be reenacted for the court within the interior of the dirigible Los Angeles at the same. This may take place tomorrow, the survivors now here will take positions at the station or places where they were just before the wreck and follow through the actions they took up to the time of the breaking up of the ship and later.

ROYAL MARRIAGE CAUSE OF REJOICING IN ITALY

RACCONIGI, Italy, Sept. 22. (AP)—Kings and commoners, princes and princesses of nine royal houses and hundreds of lowly subjects of the Italian crown today joined in rejoicing over the marriage tomorrow of Princess Mafalda, daughter of the king, and Prince Philip of Hesse.

On the eve of the union of the scions Savoy and Hesse, two of the oldest families in Europe, this quaint mountain village was the scene of a festival recalling the magnificence of feudal times. It was a day dedicated to the aristocracy, but Victor Emmanuel did not forget his "people."

As the nobles celebrated within the confines of the ancient royal castle hundreds of poor villagers were the guests at a modest banquet provided at the expense of the crown in the village hostelry. The royal family made a surprise visit during the meal and were greeted with a great ovation. Liberal monetary gifts also were received from the sovereigns.

The royal festivities began in the afternoon with attendance at a theatrical performance in the Sicilian dialect at Verne Villa, the actors earning the plaudits of the audience, comprising exclusively royalties, nobles and governmental and social dignitaries. A reception in the beautifully decorated hall of the villa was followed by a dance, at which the youthful guests, notably Crown Prince Humbert, stepped expertly to jazz tunes.

The distinguished gathering then ranged around twenty banquet tables which were decorated with the finest examples of the pastry cooks' art.

It was after the liquers the real celebration began. Led by King Victor and Queen Helena the guests proceeded through the garden to the shores of the tiny nearby lakes.

At the shore of the lake the assemblage was a gorgeous spectacle, with many boats and barges gaily illuminated with colored lights.

SWEDEN TO EQUIP ALL NAVAL PLANES WITH PARACHUTES

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Sept. 22—(A. P.)—As a step in the national effort to eleminate aviation accidents in Sweden, all military air planes are to be equipped at once with parachutes. This decision, which has just been officially announced, follows a series of experiments and a careful study of results obtained abroad, particularly in the United States.

Since its military reorganization last spring Sweden now has a unified air service, equally independent of both the army and the navy, on the plan advocated in the United States by Colonel William Mitchell.

Regret Deal in Art Treasures

LONDON, Sept. 22—(A. P.)—Surprise, regret and resignation marked the comments today on the deal disposing of the art treasurers of the late Lord Leverhulme—surprise at the unexpected boldness of the coup engineered by Mitchell Kennerley of New York, regret at seeing London's supremacy as an art centre passing to America, and resignation at the realisation of the hopelessness of competing with the United States in such matters.

ASSIGNMENTS MADE BY UTILITIES COMMISSION

HARTFORD, Sept. 22. (AP)—The public utilities commission announced today that the application of the New England Transportation company, the bus transportation subsidiary of the New Haven road, for a route between Waterbury and Danbury will be heard at the city hall, Waterbury, at 10:30 a. m., Thursday, Oct. 1. The hearing was postponed from Sept. 16. The proposed route will be by way of Middlebury Center, Lake Quassopaug, Southbury, South Britain, Lake Zoar, Sandy Hook Center and Newton Center.

The commission has assigned applications by five individuals or companies, regarding nine routes in the vicinity of Putnam for hearing at the municipal building, Putnam, at 10:30 a. m., Wednesday, Sept. 30.

The applications are as follows: H. J. Barrett, from the Massachusetts state line through Mechanicsville, Putnam, Danielson, Brooklyn, Central Village and Moosup; Interstate Buses corporation, from Rhode Island state line through Putnam, Woodstock and Quinebaug to Southbridge, Massachusetts; George J. Gary, from Putnam through Pomfret, Phoenixville, Ashford and Willington Hill to West Willington; George J. Gary, from Putnam through Pomfret, Rockville, Chaplin and to Willimantic; George J. Gary, from Woodstock through Putnam to the Rhode Island state line.

MATTERS BEFORE ASSEMBLY OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS

GENEVA, Sept. 22—(A. P.)—Confirming the plans of the leaders, the league of nations assembly in plenary sessions of the commissions today laid the foundations of future international disarmament and economic conferences.

The disarmament commission adopted a resolution whereby the league council will make a preparatory study for a conference for the reduction and limitation of armaments, so that as soon as general security has been achieved a conference will be convoked in order that "a general reduction and limitation of armaments may be realized."

The outstanding feature of today's discussion was the declaration of a British delegate that it is generally recognized that the trilogy, arbitration, security and disarmament, indicates the road on which progress can best be made towards world peace—a declaration which gave immense satisfaction to the French as indicating British acceptance of the underlying ideas of the Geneva peace protocol.

As for an economic conference, the resolution drafted invites the council to examine at the earliest possible opportunity the creation of a special committee to preparae the work for an international conference, which should examine into the economic prosperity and discover the best methods of surmounting difficulties and avoiding disputes.

TOWN TREASURER COMMITS SUICIDE IN CHARLTON, MASS.

CHARLTON, Mass., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Harris Dodge, town treasurer, for 25 years and a well known business man of the town, committed suicide by shooting himself in the temple at his home at 9:30 this morning. While no reason for the shooting has been discovered as yet, state accountants who arrived in town yesterday to audit the treasurer's books have been unable to find the 1925 cash book and several other books connected with the office.

George A. Masters and Willard K. Bowen from the state department of accounts, said tonight that as a result of the suicide and owing a failure to find the missing bokos, it will probably be necessary to make a thorough find the missing books, it will probover a period of 25 years.

POPE HAS GRANTED SPECIAL DISPENSATION FOR MARRIAGE

ROME, Sept. 22. (AP)—The pope has granted a special dispensation for the marriage of Princess Malfalda, Catholic, and Prince Philip of Hesse, Lutheran, for the particular reason that not only does Malfalda remain undisturbed in the Catholic faith, but has promised to bring up the children of the union in the same religion, without interference or restraint from her husband.

Furthermore, Philip renounces all rights to his succession, which makes it even more certain that Malfalda will remain Catholic, because, otherwise, if her husband ever became reigning prince it would be indispensable for his wife and children to turn to the Lutheran faith.

TRACTOR RACE TO BE HELD ON POTATO FARM IN CHESHIRE

CHESHIRE, Conn., Sept. 22—(A. P.)—A race in which no state or local speed laws are expected to be broken, but which in itself will probably be the first of its kind in the state, a tractor race, is set for Friday on a potato farm herwe. Potato specialists from the agricultural college will give talks on tillage and as field sports there will be filling and sewing up bags of potatoes for cash prizes. The Daigle Brothers who came from Maine will be the hosts.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST RED PROPAGANDISTS IN BRITAIN

LONDON, Sept. 22.—(AP)—The daily mail says the government has initiated a big campaign against Red Propagandists in Great Britain and has already decided to deport about fifty Russians and french nationals. The home has ordered Scotland yards to prepare a list of aliens who have long been suspected of working here in the intereats of the Bolshevik.

Former Meriden Bank Teller Sentenced

Floyd B. Boardman Pleaded Guilty to Embezzlement of $10,000—One Year in County Jail the Penalty.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 22—(A. P.)—After he had pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzlement of $10,000 from the Meriden National bank, Floyd D. Boardman, 26, former discount teller, was sentenced today to one year in the New Haven county jail by Judge Edwin S. Thomas, of the United States district court. A federal grand jury had returned a true bill against Boardman earlier in the afternoon. His sentence was recommended by Assistant United States Attorney John A. Danaher, personal friend of the accused, in a plea for clemency.

Boardman, who was well known as an athletic promoter, was arrested in Meriden on June 27, when it was alleged that he had stolen about $10,000 by minor peculations extendinf over a period of time. He was bound over in the Meriden city court and held for trial at the September term of the superior court. Meantime he was re-arrested on July 1 by federal authorities, arraigned before United United States Commissioner F. J. Corbett, of Hartford, and held for his term of the federal court. The charges in the state court were dropped when the federal officials stepped in.

It was claimed by Boardman that he lost considerable money "backing" Meriden sports, particularly trying to organize a crack semi-professional football team. He also backed basketball and baseball teams.

The federal grand jury sworn in today returned three indictments and then adjourned until October 5 when the bulk of its work will be done. Because of the illness of United States Attorney Cohen, only three cases were presented today.

The case of the United States against Gerald Chapman, a suit for damages as a result of a mail robbery, was ruled off of the calendar today because of non-appearance. It is not expected to be brought up again this term.

50,000 BRITISH SOLDIERS ENGAGED IN MIMIC WARFARE

SOMEWHERE IN WILTSHIRE, England, Sept. 22—Under lashing equinoctial rains and over a country always sodden and often churned with mud, a great four days' mimic battle between nearly 50,000 soldiers of England's army opened today. Thousands of the troops engaged were schoolboys when the great war was being waged in Europe and knew nothing by active experience of the Flanders mud, which today's operations recalled only too vividly to thousands of the older men.

The former treated the weather as a joke, the latter ploughed through the sticky earth with toical determination, cheered by wartime ration of rum, which is served to all ranks twice daily and which perhaps partly inspired the hearty singing in which all indulged as they marched to take their positions.

The main armies have not yet clashed but throughout the day there was much skirmishing by smaller bodies of troops.

The two forces onposing each other are the blue and the red armies, the blue defending London against invasion.

The war began at dawn with a surprise attack by the blues, which, although unexpected without a formal declaration of war, did not find the invaders asleep. Red trops were rushed to the front, bridges and other communications were destroyed, and the attack was checked almost at its inception.

The main armies will probably meet each other in a day or two on a 35 mile front between Newbury and Southampton, and it is here the great test of attack and defense aided by all the modern appliances of war will come.

WHOLESALE DESTRUCTION OF LIQUOR IS ORDERED

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—More than a quarter of a million dollars worth of liquors, seized during the last six months on boats in the metropolitan area, was today ordered destroyed by federal court.

On the last were: 67,750 quarts of Scotch whiskey, 96 quarts of rye whiskey, 1,240 gallons of wines, 435 quarts of champagnes and 170 quarts of brandy.

At the same time United States Attorney Buckner turned over to the treasury department a vessel known as the "Francis P. Richie." This ship, which was seized on July 23, will hereafter be used by the "dry navy" under authority of a law passed by congress on March 3.

"This law," Mr. Buckner said, "will prove very useful not only in recruiting a number of boats in the possession of the government for the enforcement of the prohibition law but also in putting an end to the practice of rum-running boats being put up for auction, purchased at a bargain price and immediately put back into the rum-running trade."

LUDWIG WAS INEXPERIENCED IN OPERATION OF SEAPLANE

HARTFORD, Sept. 22. (AP)—Harry M. Ludwig, who was killed in the seaplane crash at Chester last week had less than twenty minutes actual flying instruction with the seaplane type of aircraft in which he lost his life, according to information gathered by state police. George Pranaitis, inspector of aviation for the state police, said tonight that Ludwig had been under instruction approximately four hours in the land type of airplane, but as far as could be determined, his seaplane instruction experience was limited to one flight of about twenty minutes' duration.

The four hours of land aircraft instruction was under the direction of Percival H. Spencer, of this city. Mr. Spencer told Inspector Pranaitis that these hours of instruction included about thirty practice landings and that he was under the impression that Aviator John Tweed, of New Haven, was giving Ludwig instructions in seaplane handling. Mr. Tweed was in turn under the impression that Ludwig was an experienced aviator and had loaned him a plane, while repairs were being made to the Ludwig plane.

Inspector Pranaitis says that the four hours of practice would have entitled Ludwig to a student's pilot license if he had applied and passed the state examination.

WOMAN WAS ALIVE WHEN STUFFED INTO FURNACE

NEW YORK, Sept. 22. (AP)—Charged with stuffing Mrs. Sophie Poleski, the wife of a close friend, into a blazing furnace in a lower East Side lumber yard last night while she was still alive, George Symuk, a giant fireman, was held without bail today on a charge of murder. He will be given a hearing Sept. 29. Police who went to the Poleski home after the murder found the husband, John, in bed suffering from a badly cut and bruised head.

"The devil got into my head and I did it," Symuk told Assistant District Attorney Ryan in regard to the murder. "She brought me some wine last night. She had a bottle filled with green stuff, too. She wanted me to drink some of it but I thought she was trying to poison me. I fought with her about staying with her husband. I hit her over the head with a bottle—then the devil got into my head and I did it."

Poleski was unable to clear up the mystery surrounding his injuries. He said that he was awakened about 2 o'clock this morning when "somebody" rained blows on his head as he lay in bed. This explanation failed to satisfy police and he will be questioned further tomorrow.

MOTORIST SENTENCED TO SERVE THREE DAYS IN JAIL

BRIDGEPORT, Sept. 22—(AP)—John Huche, Brooklyn, N. Y., driver of an automobile which ran down James Holt, Maiden Lane, Bridgeport, former prohibition agent, in Stamford, July 4, 1923, crippling Holt for life, was sentenced to serve three days in jail by Judge Frederick Huxford in the criminal court of common pleas this afternoon.

Huche's appeal from a fine of $100 and a thirty days jail sentence, imposed in the Stamford city court following his arrest on charges of reckless driving and operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, has been awaiting a hearing in the higher court for two years. It was largely delayed because of his absence from the state.

A civil suit was instituted by Holt in superior court. Judge William M. Maltbie awarded him damages of $5,000. Huche not appearing in court to make and defense. It is said the judgment has not been paid.

COL. COOLIDGE OFFICIATED AT MARRIAGE CEREMONY

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Colonel John C. Coolidge, father of the president, who administered the oath of office to his son in the sitting room of his farm house home here two years ago, tday exercised his capacity f justice of the peace at a different ceremony. In the same room and almost on the spot where the historic scene of August 3, 1923, was enacted, Col. Coolidge presided at the marriage of a young Vermont couple.

With the bride's parents, her brother and a girl friend as witnesses, Miss Doris Keith of Ludlow was married to Hollis Holt of Bellows Falls. A friendly group of Plymouth folk gathered outside the Coolidge home to shower the young couple with rice and wish them happiness as they drove off after the ceremony.

STOLEN AUTO WENT "DEAD" IN FRONT OF OWNER'S HOUSE

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—(A. P.)—The home-loving cat of popular fable has nothing on Maurice Paul's automobile. Stolen a few days ago from the curb in front of Paul's house, it went "dead" today at the same spot as it was being driven past by the new possessor. The driver was arrested when he returned with a fresh supply of gasoline.

OBITUARY

Byron W. Kuhn

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 22. —(AP)—Byron W. Kuhn, maker of presidential hats, died at the age of 73 years, after two years' illness. Mr. Kuhn, a pioneer of Milwaukee, was one of the few hat makers here in the earlier days. During his active years he made hats for six president, U. S. Grant, R. B. Hays, Grover Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt, William H. Taft, and Warren G. Harding.

The hats were in the nature of gifts.

ASSURANCE TO DEPOSITORS BY WILLIMANTIC TRUST CO.

Statement Followed a Brief Run on the Savings Department Yesterday—Treasurer Huber States That the Bank Has "Giltedge" Securities to Cover Deposits of Over $1,117,000—With $250,000 Surplus and $100,000 Capital Stock, the Directors Declare That Rumors of Weakness Are Without Basis of Truth.

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 22. (AP)—Stories spread by persons who had withdrawn deposits they had with the Willimantic Trust company led to a brief run on the savings department today, and something over $25,000 had been withdrawn up till afternoon.

The action of depositors led the bank officers to inquire into the reason for so many withdrawals and they found a recurrence of stories which had led Treasurer Herbert W. Huber on August 1 to call the attention of State Bank Commissioner Byrne to the character of these.

The withdrawals began shortly after a depositor late yesterday withdrew his money. In August the rumors current were that the bank was in a weakened condition. The state bank commissioner replied when the treasurer called his attention to the rumors that the bank stood among the best in the state and that stories to the contrary were "malicious." The commissioner offered to co-operate with the bank officers in prosecuting any one who circulated stories affecting the bank.

Treasurer Huber today stated that the bank has savings deposits of over $1,117,000 with "gilt edge" securities to cover this amount. In addition there is $250,000 surplus and $100,000 capital stock. The directors added to this with a statement to the effect that the rumors were without basis of truth.

The withdrawals have come mostly from the employes in one industrial plant.

RUN RECURRENCE OF WHAT OCCURRED AUGUST 11

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 22. (AP)—What are said to have been unfounded and perhaps malicious rumors regarding the solvency of the Willimantic Trust company caused a run on the bank here Tuesday with the withdrawal of thousands of dollars from deposits mostly by depositors of the laboring class. A careful investigation proved beyond a doubt, Thursday, that the alarm that the bank was insolvent was based on absolute falsity. The rumor got its start by some party apparently aiming to damage the reputation of the bank. As if by common agreement the employes of one of the mills in the city marched to the bank and called for their savings. By Tuesday morning the rumor had spread widely and the bank was crowded throughout the day with local and out-of-town depositors. But very few would admit their real motive for making their withdrawals. The following self-explanatory letter is published below and should convince even the most skeptical as to the soundness and reliability of the institution:

State of Connecticut
Office of the Bank Commissioner
Hartford, Aug. 4th, 1925.

Mr. H. W. Huber, Treasurer,
Willimantic Trust Co.

Dear Sir: In answer to your letter of July 28th you are advised that according to our last examination of your bank which was of recent date, we found you to be in a very sound, solvent, healthy condition. In addition to your capital of $100,000, you had surplus and profits of approximately $150,000 with clean assets and a very substantial appreciation of the value of your securities over the figure at which you are carrying them on your books. Any rumors affecting the standing of your institution are absolutely without foundation and are purely malicious. The state of Connecticut, realizing that we always have with us certain people who are only too willing to believe and circulate any gossip derogatory to any financial institution, has passed a very rigid law imposing a severe penalty upon any person found circulating such rumors and this department stands ready to see that the proper action is brought under that law.

Yours very truly,
J. B. BYRNE,
Bank Commissioner.

The law against the wilful and malicious making, circulating or transmitting of derogatory statements affecting banks provides for a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment of not more than one year or both.

LATEST REPORTS FROM WAR FRONT IN MOROCCO

FEZ, French Morocco, Sept. 22—(A. P.)—The rainy season and winter coming on apace are Abd-El-Krim's most powerful allies, and the Moorish chieftain makes no secret of this fact in his appeal to his followers. On the other hand the French command asserts that offers of submission continue to come in.

Speaking at Targuist Abd-El-Krim assured his adherents—"Winter will soon re-establish our victorious situation. The Europeans troops are summer fighters; you are warriors in all season."

The French information bureau is silent concerning Abd-El-Krim's reported wound in the leg from a machine gun bullet.

One official, however, charged with keeping in touch with Abd-El-Krim's movements for Marshal Petain, said: "For a disabled man Krim appears to get about in a more lively fashion than a sound warrior. He has been seen in various parts of the front in the past ten days which are so far apart that no one but a fast cavalier could negotiate the distances."

Caid Ahmed Ben Zelem, one of the chiefs of the Urriguel tribesmen, was killed today when he advanced unarmed toward some dissidents and requested them to submit. The response came in the way of a salvo from mauser rifles.

RAN IMMORAL RESORT TO RECUPERATE FINANCES

BRIDGEPORT, Sept. 21. (AP)—Owing taxes to the city of Bridgeport and threatened with a foreclosure suit by a Bridgeport bank for failure to pay mortgage interest, Mrs. Mary De Mark, 60, "one of the most hardened, persistent, elusive and defiant offenders," against the conventions the city has ever known, re-opened her immoral resort at 29 Dourove street, for the express purpose of obtaining from the illicit earnings of women enough money to ease her financial distress.

This explanation was made to Judge George E. Hinman in criminal superior court this afternoon after Mrs. De Mark entered a plea of guilty. She was sent to jail for one year.

The De Mark resort was one of the most notorious in Bridgeport's old Tenderloin district. More than $10,000 was expended to make it "cop proof." It was elaborately fitted with a series of push buttons by which its inmates communicated in code, and there was an alarm buzzer which sent red lights flashing warningly in every room whenever a raiding party of police were sighted.

BRIDGEPORT MEN DENY CHARGES OF INCENDIARISM

BRIDGEPORT, Sept. 22. (AP)—The belief was expressed by Daniel E. Johnson, chief of the Bridgeport fire department, before Judge George E. Hinman and a jury in criminal superior court this afternoon, that the mysterious fire which damaged stock and the interior of the second floor of the F. and K. Cloak and Suit company, 1342 Main street, last November, could have been caused by a "powder flash" or gas explosion, resulting from an incendiary "time arrangement" by which electricity or a burning candle may have been utilized to burn to a certain inflammable point at a certain time.

Moe Casper and Harris Fienberg, New York city, are on trial charged with having set the fire deliberately for the purpose of defrauding insurance companies. They were said to have been insured for $16,000 and to have endeavored, through a third party, to obtain policies in the sum of $25,000. They declare they are guiltless of the charges.

BOB-HAIRED BANDIT HELD WITHOUT BAIL

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—(AP)—Kitty Burton, the latest New York girl to be arrested as a "bob-haired bandit" was held without bail today for action of the grand jury on a charge of attempted robbery after being described by her attorney as "a victim of circumstances," who was duped into accompanying three hold-up men. He said that the men tricked her into accompanying them as they believed that they would be less likely to be suspected if they had a woman with them, and that when she had ceased to be of use to them, they threw her into the path of their pursuers in the hope that attention would thus be distracted from themselves.

Entering a plea of not guilty for his client, the lawyer asserted that the young woman had gone into a jewelry store yesterday with three men she knew slightly solely in response to the request of one of them to assist him in selecting a wedding ring. She was doing this, the attorney said, when her companion attempted to rob the store. When the men ran, she was frightened and followed them. Their automobile was started without her, but she managed to jump on the running board clinging to the car during a pistol battle with policemen. As the car went around a corner one of the men hit her hand with a pistol butt and she fell off, the attorney said.

The hearing was adjourned until tomorrow when she will be arraigned with Henry Berry, driver of the automobile. Berry who was shot in the head during the pistol battle, will be discharged from a hospital tomorrow.

DIVORCED WIFE SUES PHYSICIANS SECOND WIFE

DANBURY, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Mrs. Sophie Wight, divorced by Dr. John H. Wight, prominent Bethel physician in Yucatan, Mexico, today brought suit against the physician's second wife, Mrs. Caroline Holter, charging alienation of affection. Damages of $5,000 are asked in the complaint, which is returnable to the October term of the superior court. Constable Thomas H. Manion placed an attachment of $6,000 on property owned and occupied by Dr. Wight and his second wife, located at 25 Greenwood avenue. The property was recently purchased by Dr. Wight from State Labor Commissioner Harry E. Mackenzie.

Early last June, Dr. Wight, who is about sixty years of age and prominent in medical circles in Fairfield county, told Mrs. Wight, to whom he had been married over thirty years, that he was going to divorce her. Shortly after this he left Bethel, following the disappearance of Mrs. Holter with whom he had known.

The next heard from Wight was in July when he wrote to friends in Bethel and stated that he had secured a divorce in Merida, Yucatan, and had married Mrs. Holter in Key West, Florida.

GREENWICH MAN INJURED IN COLLISION OF AUTOS

GREENWICH, Sept. 22. (AP)—Adrian A. Atwell, of 27 Sherwood place, Greenwich, is in the Greenwich hospital in a critical condition following an automobile crash in which his car collided with the car owned by William Hodge, the actor, and in which Jane Hodge, his daughter, and a friend, Miss Ruth Kanirer, were riding with the chauffeur.

The accident occurred on Lake avenue, the Atwell machine being turned completely over. Atwell was said to have been intoxicated.

Miss Hodge and Miss Kanirer and their chauffeur were not injured.

WILLIMANTIC

The winter schedule was resumed at the meeting of Willimantic Rotary club held Tuesday noon, in the Y. M. C. A. President John F. Ahern was in charge. Harry W. Standish was named song leader for the day. He directed several numbers and then elected Louis A. Kingsbury to take the leadership in the singing of A Hot Time by the head tablemen, President John Ahern, James P. Bath, Gerard E. Loiselle, James P. Mustard, Richard E. Dodge, G. Everett Harrington, Fred L. Avery and Henry M. Congdon. The meeting next week will be an evening affair to be held at Spring Hill, Storrs, beginning at 6.30 o'clock. The program is in charge of the Political Trio, Charles R. Pomeroy, John R. Pickett and A. Linn Weatherhead. October 12 at noon, the members of the Norwich Rotary club will provide a program for the local club. Next Friday evening the club council, consisting of the officers, directors and committee chairmen will hold the first fall meeting. Charles W. Alpaugh, a former member now a resident of Cincinnati, Ohio, sent his greetings through William A. Dawson. A general report of the meeting of the club executives of the 30th District in Springfield, Mass., September 4th, was given by Secretary Loiselle in which the recommendations made regarding club activities were detailed. A second paper on the duties and responsibilities of the club president was read by the secretary, as a supplement to the general report. A second supplementary paper dealt with the duties and responsibilities of the club secretary. Maurice Smith of Elmyra, Ohio, a son of Frank M. Smith was present as a guest. John T. Quinlan was at the piano. The session adjourned at 1.30 o'clock.

The coming activities and privileges at the local Y. M. C. A. are being announced in a circular letter signed by President James E. Fullerton and General Secretary Albert B. Smith, on the opening of the indoor season of the institution. Richard Holden is physical director, Ivor Prater is in charge of the office and Albert Dion supervises the bowling alleys. The old locker system has been substituted for the basket system now in common use in modern buildings. According to notification received from the state board of health, women and girls must wear regulation cotton suits when using the swimming pool. The suits are to be left at the office and be laundered before using again. Enrollment week has been planned from October 12 to 20. The gymnasium classes start Monday next and classes in public speaking, salesmanship and first aid and a round table discussion group will be started later.

Funeral services for Mrs. Hannah M. Crandall Thompson were held at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon at 62 North street, Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock of the First Congregational church officiating. Burial was in the Crandall plot in Willimantic cemetery. Avery and VanZandt had charge of the arrangements.

Motorcycle Officers Arthur Hurley and Grant Bombria became cowboys pro tem in a miniature rodeo, Monday evening, when called to the yard of No. 4 mill to capture a stray cow which possessed some of the high-heel tricks of the western steer. Brass buttons failed to impress the cow and it led the officers a fast chase. There was danger that the animal would retain its freedom when Officer Hurley remembered his art he had learned in the corner drug store. He borrowed a clothesline, made it into a lariat and with an accuracy that would make Tom Mix look like a beginner he lassoed the cow and held it into submission until a few boys from Brick Top Road appeared and laid claim to the animal. The cow had waded across the river near the Horseshoe Bridge and made its way along the bank to the mill yard.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Delorme and son Louis, Jr., attended the Eastern States' Exposition at Springfield, Mass., this week.

Arthur Gelinas and Joseph Bosse attended the Exposition at Springfield Tuesday.

The first meeting of the creditors of the bankrupt estate of Salim Haddad, grocer, was held before Referee in Bankruptcy Edward M. Yeomans in the superior court chamber here on Tuesday morning. Attorney Harry S. Gaucher represented the bankrupt. Joseph Peck was appointed trustee and Attorney John King and Frank P. Fenton appraisers.

Miss Elizabeth White of Ripley Hill, Coventry and Miss Doris Palmer of Chestnut Hill, Mansfield, hold the distinction of being the first two girls to be enrolled in the vocational agriculture course at the Windham High school. According to R. L. Hahn, the instructor at Windham, the course never would or should become as popular with farm girls as with farm boys, but the training is very helpful to girls desiring to enter some of the specialized phases of farming, such as poultry or small fruit.

Church street is gradually taking on a new appearance as employes of the street department, under Superintendent John S. Sullivan, prepare it for a final coating of asphalt for a permanent improvement. The roadbed has been torn up to a depth of seven inches below the gutter line. A cement bed, five inches deep on the sides and averaging to three inches in the center will then be laid and followed up with the asphalt.

Earl R. Wright of 291 Jackson St., is a patient at St. Joseph's hospital being treated for a badly crushed right foot, getting a broken toe and four crushed toes while at his work at the American Thread company plant. Mr. Wright was operating an elevator in the spool shop and accidentally stepped over the edge of the elevator flooring as it was reaching the third floor.

Michael Longo, who sustained severe injuries in an automobile accident in Brooklyn Monday morning when Michael E. McCarthy and Maurice Bendett of this city, were also injured was reported as being in an unchanged condition. He is on the dangerous list at St. Joseph's hospital.

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 23—Charles Joki, employed by Miller Brothers, road builders, is suffering from a fractured left foot sustained about eight o'clock Tuesday morning when the member was run over by the wheels of an automobile hearse owned by Undertaker Harry Lambert of Meriden. Joki was working beside the road when the hearse passed close to him and in swerving from a break in the road struck the man's foot. The driver of the vehicle failed to stop and a message to the Danielson state police barracks brought Officer Williams back with the driver in his custody. The operator stated that he was not aware that he had struck anyone. The injured man was treated by Dr. C. A. Jenkins of this city and later removed to his home in Brooklyn.

JEWETT CITY

The friends of Joseph Zubroski have been very helpful to him, both before and after the death of his wife. She underwent several operations, and a daughter has spent a number of months in a hospital. Mrs. Sophie Kolbus and Mrs. Anna Dziedzic have collected $16.45, and Mrs. Kapciokew and Mrs. Payok $41.40. Nearly one hundred dollars was given him by his associates in Ashland mill. Ashland club also, has and will continue to make necessary provision for the welfare of the afflicted family. No one could be more appreciative than Mr. Zubroski is of the very material kindnesses shown him.

A meeting of the executive board of the Jewett City chapter of the American Red Cross was held Monday evening. It was voted to appropriate five hundred dollars toward the support of the public health nurse. Miss Brennan gave her report for four months. In May there were 148 Metropolitan visits and 37 others; June, 153 and 67 others; July, 150 and 40 others; August, 141 and 34 others—a total of 592 Metropolitan visits and 168 others. Three hundred and ninety-five dollars was paid by the Metropolitan company and $25.30 was collected for other calls. The matter of knitting the allotment of seventeen sweaters, which is this chapter's part of the thirty thousand needed for disabled ex-service men, was discussed. Four have already signified their wlan to help make the boys comfortable. The work is as necessary as it was during the war, for the government does not furnish sweaters.

One of the DeMicco triplets has died; the burial took place Tuesday, in charge of Hourigan Brothers.

Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Smith, of New York, have been visiting at Mrs. R. R. Churell's. Dr. Smith returned to New York Monday, Mrs. Smith remaining here.

The Chamber of Commerce is to meet this (Wednesday) evening in the Legion rooms.

Mrs. W. B. Montgomery is to entertain Pachaug Ladies' Aid society Thursday.

Otto Gilbert has purchased a new house on East Main street.

T. E. Lee is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Homer L. Lee, in Webster.

Mrs. James B. Palmer is very fortunate each year in finding fringed gentians, and has gathered them this year.

The meeting of the Hose company, Thursday evening, will probably be attended largely. It is understood that Foreman Wakeley will not reconsider his resignation. The hose house was built by the borough, and its equipment and maintenance is paid by the taxpayers of the borough. It would seem that the first consideration should be for the welfare of the borough property and lives, under these circumstances. The members of the company have the use of the house as a sort of club, and the borough taxpayers are only too glad to have it so. But the taxpayers have the right to expect protection for their property in return. There are two sides to every story, but the best good for all should be the uppermost consideration.

NOANK

The West View bowling team played the Prospect Hill Five Monday night at Liberty Hall alley. All games were close and interesting to watch, keeping the people on their toes every minute. G. Smith for West View was high man getting a score of 250 for his team; A. Jones was high for Prospect Hill making 250 for his team. The West View team won two games out of three. Refreshments were served. The next games will be played next week on the same alley.

The Methodist Episcopal church has arranged with Lewis E. Smith, a successful evangelistic preacher and singer of Boston, for a series of special services here commencing Wednesday October 7 and closing Sunday October 18. The church members and other interested friends are commencing this week a period of special spiritual preparation, in the course of which they will meet frequently from house to house for conference and prayer. The first of such meetings was at the home of Mrs. Geo. Porter Tuesday evening. Another will probably be held Friday at some place to be announced. The Thursday evening prayer service will be held as usual in the church. The pastor, Rev. J. G. Sallis commenced Sunday his line of thought in connection with this approaching campaign, speaking on "If God be for us who can be against us."

Ban Offensive Film Titles

BERLIN, Sept. 22—(A. P.)—Cinema proprietors and film producers have been warned by the central committee of German Film Industries against the employment in obscene or offensive film titles. It is claimed that often such offensive designations are used for harmless films as a sensational medium for attracting a certain type of public.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

When the sun was going down Tuesday evening the Brooklyn fair was about ready for the thousands who will throng to see it today (Wednesday). There appeared Tuesday to be great interest and effort in making this year's exhibit better than any of any previous year. The work that has been done during the past few months in improving the buildings on the fair grounds has served to show the fair off to better advantage. The grange displays will be especially intercated this year.

Gasoline sales are said to have taken a considerable slump since Labor day. This claim appears to be reflected in the fact that motor traffic is materially reduced during the past two weeks—not that cars have been put up for the year, as used to be done, but they are not being operated so frequently or over such distances as during the summer period. The week end traffic continues to remain very heavy, but this is not true week days and there is a great shrinkage of evening riding.

Rev. Walter B. Williams, who recently resigned as pastor of the Westfield Congregational church of Danielson, and Mrs. Williams are to leave here Thursday for Berkeley, Cal., where Mr. Williams is to be pastor of the North Congregational church.

Tuesday morning the funeral of Mrs. Vitaline Poirier was held from her home on Franklin street with services at St. James' church at 9 o'clock. Rev. Joseph Deschaux, M. S., was celebrant of the solemn mass of requiem with Rev. James McCarthy, M. S., and Rev. F. X. Richards, M. S., deacon and subdeacon, respectively. Burial was in St. James' cemetery, the committal service conducted by Rev. Fr. Richards. The bearers were Joseph Lamoureaux, Benoni Meunier, Pierre Turgeon, August Trahan, Joseph Gingras and Nestor Godreau. Martin T. Burns was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

From across the nearby border of western Rhode Island comes the admonition that eastern Connecticut should look to its own defences when it comes to bantering publicity about the amount of illegal liquor business being done over that way. "Why, there is so much stuff being sold on the Connecticut side that they are spoiling the business" wails one dealer, who threatens to complain to the Connecticut police.

At St. James' church Monday morning, Mrs. Louise Fournier Pepin and John M. Bessette of the West Side were united in marriage and are now in New York on their wedding trip. Both are well known residents of the West Side. Mr. Bessette is a former representative of the town of Brooklyn and at present and for many years the tax collector of that town, where he has been a resident for years.

Once again it has been demonstrated that advertising in The Bulletin pays. The past week a reward was offered by a Providence firm for the recovery of a police dog having a collar with a Stratford, Conn., tag. It was believed that the dog might be in eastern Connecticut, where it was raised, and this assumption proved correct. The advertisement was the means of locating the dog at the DeMaris farm, in the town of Lisbon and of its being returned to the owner. Henri L. Baer of East Killingly made this known Tuesday.

There will be what is termed a double session of the public schools of Killingly today (Wednesday) this session ending at 1 o'clock, when the schools will close for the day. The arrangement has been made in order to permit the pupils to attend the Brooklyn Fair.

POSSIBLE ARTILLERY RANGE FOR USE OF THE 192ND. F. A.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Sept. 22—The countryside hereabouts has just been checked up and looked over by Colonel Morgan J. Morganson, of the 192d Field Artillery and Captain William Clark, F. A., DOL, with a view to locating an artillery range for use of the 192d Field Artillery, Captain F. O. Armington of the Service battery, a unit of the regiment stationed here, said Tuesday that he does not understand that a suitable location for such a range was located.

What is wanted is an area six miles in length and a mile in width, free of obstructions and not crossing highways so that target practice with the guns of the regiment may be conducted during each summer encampment or at other periods if so desired. Finding such an area in country hereabouts is not an easy thing to do.

Locating such a range as is required somewhere in Connecticut is in line with an economy program under which the 192d Field artillery would spend its annual period of summer field service within the borders of its own state.

It is understood that it costs $50,000 to send the regiment to Camp Eustis, Va., where it went some years and $25,000 for the transportation to Tobyhanna, Pa., where this year's encampment was held. A very heavy percentage of this money could be saved by having the regiment encamp in Connecticut.

An artillery regiment must have a range for practice, hence the mission here of Colonel Morganson and Captain Clark. One familiar with northeastern Connecticut would have to thing long and hard to designate a locality where a six mile range a mile wide could be found. Much of this area should not be wooded, for the range would have to be cleared of all obstructions, for one reason as protection against fires that bursting shell might cause. However, if there is such a range and it is accepted by the government this corner of the state might have an artillery regiment in its midst for 15 days or more next summer.

PUTNAM

The loss to the Standard Oil Co., in the big fire of Saturday will probably be double the first estimate of $25,000. There was an immense stock of gasoline in the storage tank and hundreds of barrels of oil. Because of it being heated the value of the oil as a lubricant has, it is said, been practically destroyed.

Funeral services for Charles A. Smith, 72, were held Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at local undertaking rooms. Mr. Smith died Cargill House where he had made his home for some time past. Death occurred suddenly but according to the medical examiner, was due to natural causes. Mr. Smith was born in Thompson and lived there for many years. Chester Green of North Grosvenor-Dale, a nephew, is his only living relative.

SCHOOL GIRL STRUCK BY CAR — LEG AND JAW BROKEN

Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 22.—Vera Zalesko, ten years old, daughter of Joseph Zalesko, of Mechanicsville, was struck by an automobile, Tuesday morning, while on her way to school and was seriously if not fatally injured. She has a compound fracture of both bones of the right leg, a fractured jaw, numerous bruises, and, it is feared, internal injuries. The car was driven by John O'Carroll, of Springfield, Mass. assistant to the president of the Springfield Advertising Co. He was on his way from Springfield to Providence. In company with other children the Zalesko girl was running back and forth across the road, evidently engaged in a game of tag. Mr. O'Carroll, who is 25 years old, seemed greatly distressed over the accident. He said that he observed the children and tried to use extra precautions, but before he knew it the girl was in front of the car and he could not stop in time to prevent knocking her down. Michael Keefe of Ring street was passing and Mr. O'Carroll called to him and together they placed the injured child in the latter's car and drove at full speed to the hospital. The physicians there are uncertain as to the outcome of the injuries.

TWO AGED SISTERS CHEATED OUT OF THEIR $20,000 HOME

A Boston paper of Tuesday said:

A report of a special master, filed yesterday in the superior court at Plymouth, Mass., reveals a tragic story of how two elderly sisters, direct descendants of the Pilgrims, beset by illness and want, offered to deed their cherished Duxbury shore home to a Newton woman in return for shelter and care during their few remaining years, and how, after they had signed the deed taking away their home, they finally landed in the almshouse.

The sisters are Misses Helen and Imogen M. Phillips. The former is 80 and Imogen is two years her junior. The woman who received the deeds of their mansion from the sisters is Mrs. Mary W. Hicks, prominent Newton clubwoman and wife of Richard H. Hicks, well known artist, of 960 Beacon street, Newton Centre.

A party of Elks, playing Santa Claus in a little Connecticut town last Chistmas, came across the two sisters, one of whom is blind, living in a small house and seemingly out of their sphere, and these Elks were responsible for bringing the plight of the sisters into the courts of the Bay State in an attempt to recover their Duxbury shore home.

Attorney William N. Cronin, of Boston and Duxbury, representing a conservator that has been appointed for Miss Imogen Phillips, is leading the fight to recover the sisters' home, which the master in his report stated was worth $20,000.

Morton Collingwood was the special master appointed by the court to hear the facts in the strange case. A bill in equity has been brought in the superior court by Attorney Cronin.

According to his report, on file at Plymouth, the story of the sisters is as follows: Up to 1920 they lived in a small house on their shore estate at Duxbury in summer months and rented the larger one. With this rent and the sale of Indian baskets and other souvenirs during the summer the sisters received an income sufficient to support them in modest comfort. They occupied the larger house in winter. The winter of 1920 and again of 1921 found much illness in the Phillips home. There was a mortgage of $5,400 on the property. Illness so ate up their meagre income that the interest became long overdue on the mortgage. The bank commenced to press for it. The sisters couldn't meet it. They wrote to Mrs. Hicks for financial aid.

It was suggested in this letter, written by Imogen and produced in evidence before Master Collingwood, that if Mrs. Hicks would furnish the money for the mortgage and then furnish Imogen and her sister with a home in Woodstock, Conn.; and with food, she would in turn deed the Duxbury property to Mrs. Hicks.

The master's report goes to show that he found that Mrs. Hicks, represented by Attorney George M. Nay, of Boston, secured from Miss Phillips a deed to their Duxbury home and that then the sisters went to Woodstock to live.

The master's report at this juncture reads: "The house was provided by Mrs. Hicks—I find the house was not a suitable dwelling for two elderly ladies of the types of the Misses Phillips to occupy as a home. I also find that while in this house they were not furnished at all times with sufficient food. They were assisted by town authorities. Later they moved to a house in Woodstock Valley, Conn. I find this was not a suitable abode. While in Woodstock Valley (Mrs. Hicks) the defendant supplied one quart of milk daily and wood for fuel. There were times when the sisters were aided by local authorities. Mrs. Hicks established a credit for them at a local grocery store of $3 a week."

It was the cheer-spreading party of Elks who brought the old women a turkey tat forcibly called the attention of the Connecticut state authorities to the plight of the descendants of the Pilgrims. Negotiations were opened with Duxbury authorities. It resulted in the old women coming back to their native home—to the poorhouse.

Duxbury selectmen engaged Attorney Cronin to act for the sisters. He had a conservator appointed last spring and will now bring the master's report into the superior court in an attempt to restore to the sisters their $20,000 shore home.

The master states he finds that Mrs. Hicks agreed to support them for the rest of their lives when she took the deed and further finds that the Newton woman failed to perform that agreement. He further finds that Miss Imogen Phillips was not represented by counsel when she signed the deed that made her practically homeless.

A motion has been made that the report be accepted and Attorney Elwood A. Howe, of Boston, has filed 15 objections to the report.

KANSAN FINDS TWO STATES FULLY REGULATING HOTELS

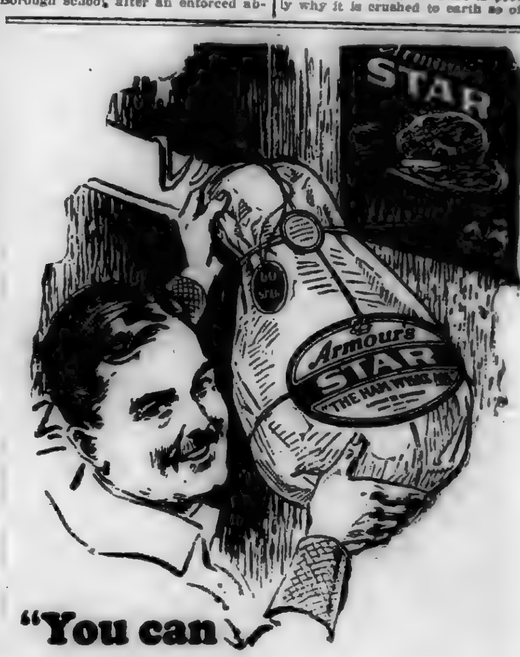
TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 23—Hotel regulation by commissions created solely for that purpose is performed in only two states, Kansas and Florida. Phil E. Zimmerman, hotel commissioner in Kansas, has determined after making a survey of the entire country. The hotel commission of Kansas and Florida were created by legislative enactment the same year, 1913.

Twenty other states have hotel regulation in some degree, Mr. Zimmerman learned.

"But inspection and supervision of hotels in those states are sideshows for bigger circuses," he said. "Such functions of the state are performed by boards of health, fire marshals, public utilities commissions, welfare boards or other bodies."

Those twenty states are Minnesota, Washington, Wisconsin, Alabama, South Dakota, Kentucky, Idaho, Nebraska, Arkansas, New Mexico, Utah, Oklahoma, Iowa, North Dakota, Tennessee, South Carolina, Montana, California, Vermont and Ohio.

Truth is constantly getting in the way of some people. That is probably why it is crushed to earth so often.



"You can serve it in 60 Different Ways"

WESTERLY

With Rev. William Read of Providence, state secretary, presiding, a state conference of the Baptist denomination of the Westerly district, including delegates from the Calvary, Union and First Baptist churches of Westerly, Hope Valley, Bradford, Shannock, Carolina and the First Baptist church of Charlestown at Perryville, was held Tuesday night at the First Baptist church on Broad street, Westerly. Among other speakers was Rev. Mr. Sturtevant of the Baptist religious work for the district of Providence and Mrs. Leslie M. Swain, of Providence, representing the Baptist Women of Rhode Island. A supper was served, under the auspices of the World Wide guild.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fowler of Lake County, Fla., were Westerly and Pawcatuck visitors Tuesday, on their return south from a journey north through fourteen states of the Union. Travelling in a motor bus, fitted up with home conveniences and with the outside inscribed "Lake County, Florida," the sides of the vehicle adorned with paintings of Florida scenery, they have visited New England with motion pictures and pamphlets on Florida, in the interests of the Lake County, with its "1400 lakes and forest hills" Chamber of Commerce.

Petit jurors will report this (Wednesday) morning at the third day of the September session of superior court for Washington county at the county court house at West Kingston. Associate Justice Antonio A. Capotosto of Providence will be on the bench. The Kingston trial calendar will be called, Wednesday having been given over to the grand jury, the calling of the assignment docket and motion calendar. Tuesday the divorce cases were heard.

Westerly petit jurors under summons to report today (Wednesday) at 9.30 o'clock are Walter H. Greene, weaver; Ernest W Crowther, spinner; Robert M. Carr, undertaker (excusable under the law); Arthur E. Trotman, insurance agent; William C. Turgee, store manager; Charles H. Cushman, superintendent; William R. Chapman, timekeeper; Henry J. Goulet, superintendent and Newman F. Tuckerman garagekeeper.

It was nearly 5 o'clock Monday afternoon before the grand jury, John J. Burdick of Charlestown, foreman, returned to the court, when Clerk W. Herbert Caswell received true bills as follows:

State, Thomas E. Brown vs. Edward Gajoli of Fall River, Mass., James Mann of Middletown, N. Y., William Evans of Boston, Mass., and Joseph Risolvi of West Roxbury, Mass., breaking and entering in the daytime the dwelling of Albert Earl on the Post road on August 23, 1925, and larceny of goods valued at $10. Pleas of nolo entered.

State, Thomas E. Brown vs. Earl Russell and Roy Russell, breaking and entering in the daytime the unoccupied dwelling house of Agnes K. Merrill and Louis N. Merrill at Pleasant View on June 25, 1925 and larceny of goods valued at $400. To plead on Wednesday.

State, Fred T. Mitchell vs. Robert Ennis and Ambrose Maine, alias, for breaking and entering in the night time the Jones block at Wakefield on May 22, 1925, and larceny of goods. Maine sentenced to two years and Ennis to one year.

State, Fred T. Mitchell vs. Robert Ennis and Ambrose Maine, alias, for breaking and entering in the night time on May 22, 1925, the South County Garage at the intersection of Kingston road and the Tower Hill road in Wakefield and taking and carrying away from the possession of George S. Merrill and Charles Seymour one Ford coupe valued at $200. Defendants pleaded nolo.

State, Thomas W. Pierce vs. Edwin A. Whittren and Arthur D. Cole of North Kingstown, breaking and entering in the night time on June 30, 1925, the store of Mary B. Reynolds and Frank H. Reynolds and occupied by William E. Mott on the Post road and larceny of cigarettes and cigars valued at $4.83.

State, Frank J. Smith, chief of town of Narragansett vs. Thomas Curley, Joseph McCochran, John McDonald and Robert McGuire, operating car belonging to A. E. Crandall in the absence of the owner. Defendants pleaded nolo.

State, Fred T. Mitchell vs. Ambrose B. Maine, alias, and Robert Ennis, alias, breaking and entering in the night time on May 22, 1925, the paint shop of Paul Wood & Son in South Kingstown with intent to commit larceny. Defendants pleaded nolo.

State, Fred T. Mitchell vs. Robert Ennis and Ambrose T. Maine, alias, breaking and entering the garage of Percy Brown with intent to commit larceny. Defendants pleaded nolo.

State, Frank J. Smith vs. James Vincenzo Diano, committing violent assault upon the body of James Montey with a dangerous weapon at Narragansett Pier on May 4, 1925. Pleaded not guilty.

State, Fred T. Mitchell vs. Anthony Savarese, driving automobile into the state without owner's consent April 14, 1925. To plead on Monday.

State, Fred T. Mitchell vs. Anthony Savarese, making a violent assault upon Joseph Pepe with a dangerous weapon at Charlestown on Aug. 2, 1925. To plead on Monday.

This (Wednesday) morning, previous to the Kingston Trial calendar being taken up the Attorney General's docket will have the right of way.

The first case on the Kingston trial calendar, an action at law, Joe Spieg, et al, Casey, vs. George Wood and William Sleeman, Rathbun, by agreement of counsel will go over. The equity case, Lewis H. Knowles Huddy, Emerson & Moulton vs. the Town of Narragansett, Watts, stands next on the calendar.

This (Wednesday) morning at 9 o'clock in the Immaculate Conception church, High street, Rev. Fr. J. F. Vincent will solemnize the marriage of Miss Nancy M. Lanphere and M. Walter Flynn, Jr., clerk of the third judicial district court, both of Westerly. The bride will be given in marriage by her uncle, Capt. Horace F. Sisson. The maid of honor will be Miss May Ring, of Norwich.

In the session of Stonington town court Tuesday morning before Judge William A. Wilcox of Pawcatuck, Leon Weaver of Noank having been taken into custody by Constable George Denison, when found in his automobile, "near 101 ranch" in the Road district of the town of Stonington, and reported in an intoxicated condition with his automobile across the highway, was arraigned on an intoxication charge by Town Attorney George R. McKenna. He pleaded guilty and was fined $2 and costs of $11.51 amounting to a total of $13.51 which he paid.

John Leshner, 33, of 175 Congress street, Boston, complained of as passing an intersecting street at a high rate of speed, will perhaps in the future go slower and at that very point be able to read the large billboard sign of the State of Connecticut on which the automobile laws are painted. Sunday afternoon, Connecticut State Trooper Giles Watson of Groton barracks was stationed on the Stonington-Westerly highway at the intersection of the Anguilla road where the signboard is located and summoned Leshner to appear in court. He pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs of $12.43, amounting to $22.43, which he paid.

The Women of the First Baptist church had a social and afternoon tea at the home of Mrs. I. M. Lancaster, on Narragansett avenue, Monday.

ZONING BOARD PERMITS PLEASANT VIEW HOSE HOUSE

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 22.—Westerly zoning board, Arthur L. Perry, chairman, Frank A. Sullivan, Charles L. Fontana, D. Harold Rogers and William Broadfoot, with Inspector Rossi and Attorney Ferguson, met Tuesday evening in the council chamber of Westerly town hall.

Kenyon Ricci was voted a five year permit to erect and maintain a dye cleaning establishment in a residential area 400 feet east of McGowan's corner and located off Bradford road there being no objection.

The Pleasant View beach fire district was voted permission to erect a hose house on a lot 200 feet east of Winnapaug road, between the properties of George E. Phillips and Joe Wagner, in a residential district on the northerly side of Atlantic avenue. This was with the proviso that the building should not project beyond the existing building line.

Eric Hill, represented by Samuel H. Davis, was granted a five year temporary permit to erect a gas filling station on the east side of the Westerly Hopkinton new state highway about 300 feet south of the Meetinghouse bridge, where on an eight acre tract he plans also to provide a place for the operation of canoes on the Pawcatuck river. The gas pump privilege permit is to be issued when a plat is submitted to the board showing the location at least 75 feet from his southerly property line.

Richard E. Newton was granted a five year permit for a third gasoline pump to be located at his place on the Boston Post road.

When the plat is filed showing a gas pump location 50 feet from the center of the new state highway and on the left side of it where the state road turns off High street in a business section, a permit will be granted the owner.

Alexander Greig was granted a permit for a two family house on a lot owned by him on Melrose park heights which is 95 square feet less than the required zoning area and where the formal filing and acceptance of the road development by the town authorities had previously been lacking. The development company having not previously met all the requirements.

The Standard Oil Company of New York having purchased the property of Charles L. Fontana, corner of Railroad avenue and High street asked in a letter addressed to the Westerly town council for a permit to locate a three thousand gallon tank. This is to be located under the ground at this point on the south side of Railroad avenue, where they plan to construct and maintain driveways across the sidewalks, permission therefore having been obtained from the Westerly highway commission with the understanding that a sector of land on the corner will be deeded to the town for highway purposes to make a more rounded corner. Here a filling station will be erected and eventually the dwelling there will be torn down and the trees cut down.

In an informal way the board discussed location at Bradford, also the expected application of Mrs. Bessie M. Fancher, for the construction of a six-car garage on the Post Road, when she should acquire the property and for which 18000 square feet would be required where there now is only 11,250 square feet.

Councilor Ferguson, of the board, advised the members relative to the board members expressing individual opinions on matters to come before them when the only action can be taken at the regularly conducted zoning board meeting which he said would prevent much embarrassment for the individual members of the board.

SOUTH KILLINGLY

Mrs. Etta Spink has returned from a visit with her son Walter in Willimantic.

Raymond Barlow and family were recent visitors with relatives in Valley Falls.

Truman Young has ended his work for a Danielson firm and has gone to Terryville, where he has obtained employment.

At the meeting of the Sons of Veterans Tuesday evening, Commander W. Grant Mooney gave an interesting report of the national encampment held in Grand Rapids, Mich., which he attended.

Several from here attended the Grange supper and entertainment in Ledyard Tuesday evening. Old Mystic Social Circle put on the entertainment making a great hit.

Dr. and Mrs. C. F. Congdon, Miss Florence Johnson, Miss Louisa Schroder and Mrs. W. Phillips were in Old Mystic Monday evening attending the surprise given Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Pollard, by Old Mystic Social Circle.

OBITUARY

Alexander M. Purdy, M. D.

Mystic has lost two of its leading members of the medical profession in less than one week. Dr. J. K. Bucklyn died last Wednesday and Monday afternoon Alexander Marshall Purdy, 62, passed away. He was born in Stamford, Conn., Sept. 20, 1862, the son of Rev. Alva Briggs Purdy and Eliza Marshall. His father was a Methodist minister holding pastorates in this state and lived to be nearly ninety, dying within a year. Dr. Purdy spent his early school days at Tompkins Cove, N. Y., and later was graduated from Bridgehampton Long Island Literary and Commercial Institute and was a student in Brooklyn, N. Y., schools. He began the study of medicine with Dr. Davis in Plainfield, Conn., and in 1884 was graduated from the University of Vermont Medical School. He started practice in Voluntown and finding Old Mystic was in need of a doctor as Dr. A. T. Chapman had been stricken with blindness, he located there and in a short time had a lucrative practice. He married Miss Carrie Kingsley, daughter of John P. Kingsley, of Plainfield and commenced keeping house in the center fo the village.

In 1887 an opening for a large practice in a western state was offered him but he was obliged to decline it on account of the illness of his wife. He moved to Mystic where he practiced for the remainder of his life, except for a period when he was physician for the Groton Iron works during the World war.

He was elected health officer for the town of Groton in 1901 holding the office continuously and resigning when he went to Groton. He was a member of the New London city and county medical societies and of the State Medical Society.

Fraternally he was a member of Stonington Lodge No. 26, I. O. O. F., and a member of the Lodge of Red Men. He was a man of pleasing personality and of sympathetic character. He is survived by four children, born of the first marriage, Clifford and Marshall Purdy who reside in New London, Dorothy, the wife of Harry Burdick, of Plainfield N. J., and Miss Constance Purdy a graduate of W. M. I. school, New London of the class of 1925. His second wife, who was Miss Addie Clyde and a son Francis and a brother Calvin J. Purdy also survive him.

His death occurred one day after his sixty-third birthday.

Improved attendances and more adequate musical programs marked the services at the Methodist Episcopal church Sunday. Mrs. Ruth Macdougal was the soloist at the morning service, and the choir sang an anthem. Much interest was shown in the evening when Treffly Morin sang "The Living God" and "The Lord is my Light." The pastor, Rev. J. G. Sallis will continue his studies in Thessalonians at the midweek service Wednesday evening. The Sunday School board is to meet after the service. The Ladies' Aid Society opened the season with a successful picnic at Lord's Point last week and this week Thursday will resume regular meetings. The Epworth League is planning a Box Social.

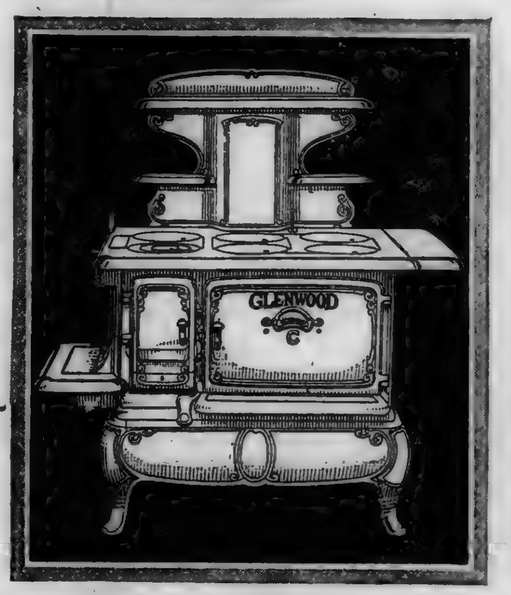
"The children love the pies and cakes I bake in my Glenwood Oven"—

THE 20-inch-square oven of this Glenwood coal range gives you plenty of space for a heavy roast. Yet the whole oven is so evenly heated that you can depend on it to bake the lightest, flakiest pastries just right. The Glenwood Balanced Baking Damper leaves no chance for making mistakes and it cannot warp or stick.

A patent spring latch instantly releases the nickle edge-bands when you clean the range. With its all-over finish of gray or black porcelain enamel you need only wipe off this range with a damp cloth to make it sparkling clean.

This range burns either coal or wood and is made with or without a hot water reservoir attachment

Glenwood RANGES



Model "C" for Coal or Wood
In pearl-gray or glossy black enamel, which eliminates stove blacking forever. Also in the standard black finish. With or without a reservoir for hot water.

YOUNG RATTLERS REARED ON WHITE MICE IN MUSEUM

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 22—Eight tiny rattlesnakes—button, rattle and all—at the Minneapolis museum represent the first young born of rattlesnakes which mated after being placed in captivity, in the belief of Miss Grace R. Wiley, curator, whose contention is supported by famous naturalists and the Ditmars of New York City.

The young were born to one of three genuine rattles which, until their capture three years ago, roamed the plains of Texas. The original litter numbered eleven but three died shortly after birth. The remaining eight, fed principally upon white mice, are growing rapidly. They measured 12 inches in length at the second month, twice that at birth.

The baby rattlers are kept in a small box separate from the glass case containing the parents and other members of the snake colony. The female snake, not being of the mammal species, could do little to care for her young after birth, so Miss Wiley segregated them until they were strong enough to protect themselves from being crushed by the large ones milling about the cage.

Small white mice, raised by the museum, are the only food given the young while the grown serpents are denied such luxuries as a regular diet.

LEGION PROGRAM FULL OF SONG AND GAITY

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 22—(A. P.)—Omaha streets are going to be full of song and gaity when the American Legion National Convention comes here in October.

Entertainers will come from every part of the United States. The list is open to any Legionnaire who can sing.

Ten entertainment stations are to be down town where the Legionnaires will congregate. Stages will be provided. Entertainers will "do their stuff" at station number one and get away to station number two, then to station number three and so down the line.

Judges will be at each station. Entertainers will be ranked according to the reception given them by the audiences. Cash prizes will be awarded.

This is said to be the first time a plan of this kind has ever been used at an American Legion convention. It is just a part of the general plan of entertainment which will keep the Legionnaires on the alert during the entire weke.

NATIONAL GRANGE EXTENDS ITS ACTIVITIES TO FAR WEST

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 22—(A. P.)—The country's oldest farm organization the National Grange, born of the reconstruction days after the Civil War, is spreading to the newer farming communities of the far west, where grange halls, familiar sights in small towns and villages elsewhere, are rising.

Maintenance of its position and its extension to the newer agricultural sections are the two major objectives of the Grange today.

In the interests of the organization, L. J. Taber, national master, recently completed a 25,000 mile trip in which he visited virtually every state. Dues paying members now total 800,000, and there are 3,100 grange halls scattered over the country with a replacement value of more than $20,000,000.

Agriculturally, Mr. Taber said, his observations have shown the country in a sound condition and the farmers' difficulties are slowly mending. Development of co-operative buying and selling associations will be a factor in bringing a more permanent recovery, in his opinion.

Another five years, he said, should see the restoration of the purchasing power of the farmer. This year will be the best for the farmer than any period since the post-war depression, he said.

The Grange now is organized in 33 states with a membership greater than at any previous period. Last year more than 200,000 meetings were held.

Corn Subs for Snow in Movies.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 22. (AP)—There are few commodities that some time or other do not find their way into motion pictures. Another of the many uses to which corn is put is artificial snow flakes for winter film scenes, which are manufactured in a mill here. The owners of the mill have received orders for large quantities of the white corn flakes, the making, of which has become an important part of their business.

Berlin Re-engages Crew Coach.

BERLIN, Sept. 22. (AP)—Ted Sullivan, former champion sculler of England, Australia and New Zealand, will resume his position as trainer for the Berlin Rowing club October 1. He trained the club's crews for three years before the World war.

PAYMENTS BY FRANCE

As the result of the study which the French debt commission has been giving to the problem before it, and the preparation of the plan which will be submitted to the American commission when the time comes, the decision that France will begin its payments at once and not seek delay was apparently regarded as a bit of good news that would be well received in this country.

The announcement did come as a bit of surprise inasmuch as such talk as has been indulged in concerning the payment of the debt has had to do with probable delays both as to principle and interest payments. Thus this country was prepared to have France ask for a moratorium and it is believed that there was a general disposition to grant it if asked.

But France has apparently been giving careful consideration to the meaning of any such delay. It knows what it is paying now in the way of interest, a higher rate than will be paid after the debt is refunded, and it knows that there has been piling up a substantial amount of interest, much of which would not stand against it today had arrangements been made some time ago for repayment. For the same reason, it can be appreciated, it probably sees the advantage of getting down to payments just as soon as possible because the sooner it is done the less the debt will amount to and the quicker it can be cleared off. To wait for ten or a dozen years would simply be inviting the addition of a huge interest account which would swell the total that would have to be met in the period of say 62 years. France can gradually cut down that amount by paying as it goes along and it is gratifying to note that it is prepared to do so.

It will be a matter of only a few days now before the negotiations will be underway, when the proposition of the French commission will be in the hands of the American commissioners. There appears to be no good reason why an adjustment should not be reached after a thorough understanding of the situation.

BALLOT BOX SCANDALS

As the result of the primary last week the cry of fraud has been raised in Philadelphia. The ballots haven't been recounted, or the tally sheets looked over, but inasmuch as it is claimed that voters in one district have sworn that they cast their ballots for Judge Renshaw when the record shows no vote at all in that district for Judge Renshaw it furnishes on the face of it strong evidence that something is wrong. And if that condition prevails in one district it is a logical conclusion that it prevails elsewhere, since there were other districts where this candidate was recorded as having no votes.

Whether Philadelphia is going to do anything about this disclosure no one knows. Perhaps there is no chance that the candidate could have received enough votes to have won but the indications point to some clever political game having been played in the counting room. Whether ballots were caused to disappear or were overlooked or forgotten will never be known unless there is a recount, barring the fact that someone who might have been connected with the deal tells the story.

But election frauds are as old as the hills, and it is not unreasonable to expect them to continue as long as ballot snatching or ballot box stuffing can be carried out. It is to be noted in this connection that such charges can be made just as long as the system of voting by ballot is in use. Had Philadelphia registered its primary votes on voting machines there would have been no failure to count the votes as they were cast and there would have been no reason to question the vote as shown on the machines.

It is just such a situation which emphasizes the need of protecting the voters by the use of machines which eliminate the possibilities of honest and intentional mistakes, which record the votes as they are cast and require no recounts. Philadelphia would probably resist machines even as New York is doing at the present time but in fairness to all concerned their use should be required.

FIGHTING IN MOROCCO

While there may be criticism from Spanish sources regarding the situation in Morocco, inspired by the present position of the Spanish forces at Alhucemas, it is to be realized that there is a complicated situation in the putting down of the Riffian revolt and that the waging of war in that region is subject to weather conditions. Likewise, it is to be remembered, especially from Spanish sources, that Spain's position today is to be a large degree due to Spanish failure in the past.

Spain waged a losing war against the Riffians which all but drove them out of Morocco, but even after the Riffians turned toward the French it was a long time before Spain recognized the advisability of cooperating with the French and bringing pressure to bear upon the Riffs from opposite directions.

Spain has received support which permitted it to take Alhucemas but weather conditions have driven the supporting warships to a distance which causes some fear for the troops. It is also being emphasized that as soon as the rainy season arrives there will be an end to war activities, and that it cannot be expected that the end of the Moroccan warfare will be right away.

Much has been done since the understanding reached between the French and Spanish in regaining territory which the Riffians had taken, in securing the foothold on the coast and relieving Fez from the danger of capture, but it is too much for the Spanish to figure that a crushing blow can be administered immediately. The rainy season cannot be escaped, but it is to be realized that in holding up operations until the rainy season could be made to figure in the conflict the delay on the part of Spain in coming to an understanding with the French plays a conspicuous part. That cut down the time for operations before the wet period. Though not intended it really played into the hands of the Riffians and gives them a chance to get the benefit of the delayed campaign which the rain will make inevitable.

WAYSIDE STANDS

With the coming of good roads the raisers of produce in the country have not been slow to recognize the opportunity of establishing stands by the roadside for the disposition of their products. On the other hand those who pass the farms have not been backward in approaching the chance of getting fresh vegetables, fruit and other produce.

Just as long as there is the disposition on the part of the producer to meet the requirements of the buyer, that is to deal only in fresh goods it can be expected that there will be a reasonable response on the part of the traveling public. The association of vegetable growers a national organization, has registered a protest against the practice of placing on such stands goods which are brought from elsewhere, instead of being raised on the farm where the stand is located. The protest is against misrepresentation.

Wayside selling will increase or decline in accordance with the fairness with which the buying public is treated. If there is an attempt to palm off anything as first class and fresh goods, when a test is all that is needed to prove it, it can be expected that public reaction to such a deal will be prompt and effective. Not only will it mean the end of business with that particular individual but it will have its effect upon all others, whether honest or not. This will be true whether it concerns quality or price. Playing the fakir will bring a reaction which will give the roadside selling idea the worst kind of a blackeye. Good business principles will develop increased business, which is desired rather than suspicion.

UNIVERSAL FINGERPRINTING

When Police Commissioner Enright advocate that everyone in the country over the age of twelve be fingerprinted it may seem entirely unnecessary and a long job, but from the increased value which has been attached of late years to finger prints it can be appreciated that such a record would be of great value.

Finger printing is not solely for the purpose of dealing with criminals. In such connection it is highly important, but it serves also as a means of identification and a protection to the individual in case of business or illness. Finger printing in done in many banks to assure the identity of the depositor, in hospitals to make certain that babies do not become mixed and of course in connection with the tracing of criminals.

If all children were finger printed at the age of twelve and all persons entering the country were treated likewise it would not be many years before there would be a complete record of the people in the country, barring of course those who get in illegally, and under such conditions there would be fewer cases where persons who were lost or suffering from aphasia or amnesia remained unidentified.

Because such action has been recommended does not mean that it will necessarily be put into effect. It is impossible to overlook its good points, however, and to appreciate the advantages which would be afforded under such a system. The very fact that it works so well in dealing with crime is one of the best arguments why it might be employed with equally good results for other purposes.

HEADIN' 'EM STRAIGHT

Joe Carbert was what is known as a hard man. If he had been otherwise it would not have been possible for him at the early age of 37 to have given himself the pleasure of saying to Gertrude, "You may pick out any spot you like for the new place. I guess we can afford to trail along with the best."

His wife's rather frightened eyes had shone softly. It took away her breath, made her speechless with emotion.

Laurene, aged 13, knew exactly what she wanted to do and did not hesitate to speak.

"We'll go to Spring Woods," Laurene said instantly, picking out the most exclusive colony near Chicago, the richest, the most fashionable. "All the girls at school who are anybody live there. I'd die any place else!"

Her father had whistled with raised brows. "Well," he demurred a bit, "we don't know anybody out there and it'd be hard for outsiders to get acquainted! I sort of wanted a big place outside of town with everything just right in it in a nice, quiet place, and a chance to be somebody among the rest. There's an estate out at Lawn View—"

"Nobody ever heard of Lawn View!" Laurene had cried stormily. "The girls wouldn't come to see me out there! Please, mother, he said any place we wanted!"

Together they overbore Joe.

The days resolved themselves into a swirl of lots, acres, big old homes, house plans. In the background Joe listened to Gertrude and Laurene chatter about the future. Everything centered about Spring Woods and when he insisted on at least driving them out to look at the place he liked at Lawn View they were politely cold.

To Joe Carbert the serene peace and quiet of Lawn View, with its substantial air, its lack of ostentation, appealed mightily. Without putting it into words he had the feeling that here was something stable in this hectic day of the world. But Gertrude and Laurene had found two acres at Spring Woods which were ideal and Joe sat silent while they decided what they wanted.

"The stables can be here," Laurene had said, enthusiastically, marking on the plan of the grounds.

"Stables?" echoed her father. Why stables in these days?"

Laurene had grimaced at him prettily. "Riding horses!" she had enlightened him. "You know I've always had a pony and taken lessons and everybody rides at Spring Woods—"

"Guess we can tuck one horse into a stall somewhere," her father agreed.

"No use lumbering up the place with stables for that!"

Laurene came over and sat on the arm of his chair with a quite grown-up air of patience. "Oh, you've got to keep about eight or ten saddle horses," she told him. "For guests, of course! We'll have house parties and they always have plenty of horses at all the big places! People won't come to see you if you don't give them a good time!

"And I want a swimming pool," she went on, "a bigger one than any of the other girls have — and when I was out at Sarah's they had a guest house on the place separate from the house! We've got to have a guest house! And, oh, dad, some of the girls have their own personal maids and I'll die if I can't have one, too! I want to say 'My maid did this,' or 'My maid did that!' And I want—"

"You're 13 years old," Joe Carbert said out loud to himself, regarding his daughter with keen eyes. He looked at the pretty, rather vacant little face for a long time, and Gertrude, watching him breathlessly, said nothing. She sensed a crisis. There were times when Joe went ahead and wouldn't listen to her.

Suddenly getting to his feet Joe Carbert dusted his hands together with a quick motion as though shaking off something clinging. His jaw set in the hard fashion men in the outside world knew to their dismay.

"We're buying the place out at Lawn View, where nothing much ever happens," he remarked quietly as he left them.—Chicago News.

Stories That Recall Others

Among the Leading Lights.

The incident occurred during a visit to one of those solid old families that have been in progress from the time it meant the ox cart to the automobile and from the tallow candle to the electric light. The incident centers about the latter.

The mother of the family, one of those whose duties never let her lose sight of the newspapers and news, no matter how trivial, was cleaning and trimming the oil lamps, and looking ahead a few weeks when the wiring ordered for the electric lights would be put in.

"I'll be glad when we get the electric lights. These things are an awful lot of bother," she said. "I guess nobody has them any more but us and the Coolidges." And she smiled.

Trapped by an Iceman.

The three bachelor maids live together in an apartment. No mere man ever ventures to invade their domicile on other than stated and special occasions—except the iceman.

It was a hot day and the ice tag was hung out of the window but no more laborious activity was undertaken. All was calm and peaceful until about 2 in the afternoon. Then they went into the kitchen for a snack and a pot of tea for three. The day was so warm that all habiliments not strictly necessary were left elsewhere than in the kitchenette. A glance in the ice box brought the sad news that the ice man had missed them. So the tea was poured into cups instead of high glasses, the sandwiches were spread and they sat down to sip and chat.

Suddenly a heavy step was heard on the stair and a brawny overalled figure loomed up with a chunk of ice. Three shrieks blended into one, and three fluttering figures plunged through the doorway, almost upsetting the astonished bearer of frigidity. When the doors had closed behind the fleeing nymphs and the iceman was left alone, he put the ice in the refrigerator and muttered as he trudged down stairs: "Must have thought I was goin' to eat 'em alive," and three muffled giggles became three hearty laughs as the party reorganized, this time for iced tea.

From Small Beginnings

Alfred Gerault, who Sang When He Worked

Rap-a-tap-tap! Rap-a-tap-tap, went the little hammer as the workman nailed the cloth on a chair. He was a jolly-looking workman, that Frenchman, and he hammered the brass-headed tacks in with a spirit as though he were playing a famous tune. Every little while he sang bits of song—for he was a happy worker, and he loved to sing. He was only a young man, and the days when he had been living out in the country in the happy little cottage where he had been born were not so far away that he had forgotten them at all.

As he worked on his chairs there in the City of Paris, about 1880, he thought of his father and his mother and of the simple people among whom he had been brought up. He remembered just how his mother's voice had sounded as she sang old songs. Those were the songs he sang now. People stopped to listen to him. They like dthe songs. They liked the idea of happiness. He saw the people, and sang more songs. When his old songs seemed worn out he made up new ones, or borrowed songs from someone else; and so Alfred Gerault, maker of furniture, went on rap-a-tap-tapping and singing songs. "Send me a song for my paper," said a man who heard him. So Alfred Gerault began to write. He wrote not only songs but also articles in favor of the humble people like himself. People liked these, too, and so at last he stopped mending sofas and chairs and became an editor.

He had little experience in the world; he had had no opportunity to study economics and the philosophy of government; but he saw around him bad conditions. He did the best he could to make things better, and so was elected a representative. Now he plunged into political life, and found it much more exciting than his old days. He ceased to sing quite so often, but he knew, as every one else, that his success had started with his singing of songs. The man who is happy at his work is not going to be a total failure anywhere.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

The Puzzled Watcher

Why is it that we often yearn
For things which us do not concern?
—Peter Rabbit

Peter Rabbit was growing more and more puzzled. Naturally he was growing more and more curious. He hesitated to ask Ol' Mistah Buzzard where Ol' Mrs. Buzzard had her nest. That would be almost too personal a question. So Peter did his best to find that nest. When he had looked and looked until his neck ached from keeping his head tipped back and still had failed to find that nest, he acted on the suggestion of his big cousin, Jumper the Hare: he decided to watch Ol' Mrs. Buzzard.

"That nest just can't be anywhere around here in the Green Forest," said Peter to himself. "It jut can't be. I've looked up in every tree and I haven't found that nest. It just can't be that there is a nest big enough to hold Ol' Mrs. Buzzard as I would have seen it. It must be that Ol' Mrs. Buzzard has put that nest a long way from here. I wouldn't be a bit surprised if it is over on the Big Mountain."

The more Peter Rabbit thought of this the more likely it seemed. So then instead of running about with his head tipped back until his neck ached he tried hiding where he could watch the tall, dead tree on which both Ol' Mistah Buzzard, and Ol' Mrs. Buzzard delighted to sit. He thought if he could keep watch of them he might be able to see in which direction Ol' Mrs. Buzzard flew when she returned to her nest.

Now Peter can be very patient when his curiosity is great enough. It was great enough this time and Peter really was very, very patient. He was on hand bright and edrly the first morning of his watch. In fact, he was there before jolly, round Mr. Sun began his daily climb up in the blue, blue sky. As it began to get light he could see that there was only one Buzzard perched on the tall dead tree. When it grew a little lighter he saw that that was Ol' Mistah Buzzard, Ol' Mrs. Buzzard was nowhere to be seen.

Presently Ol' Mistah Buzzard went to look for his breakfast. Peter watched him sail up and up and up in the blue, blue sky. He saw him sail in great circles that grew wider and wider. He was so busy watching Ol' Mistah Buzzard up in the blue, blue sky that he forgot everything else. Finally he just happened to glance up at that tall, dead tree from which Ol' Mistah Buzzard had flown. A great big bird with a bare red head was sitting on Ol' Mistah Buzzard's favorite perch. It was Ol' Mrs. Buzzard. Where she had come from Peter hadn't the slightest idea. But there she was.

"Now," thought Peter, "all I have to do is to keep watch of her."

He didn't have to wait long for Mrs. Buzzard to fly. Presently she went sailing up, up in the blue, blue sky. She, too, began to sail in great circles, and once more Peter's neck began to ache as he sat with his head tipped back watching her. Ol' Mistah Buzzard joined her and together they sailed high up in the blue, blue sky, round and round each other, until presently Peter couldn't tell which was which. He thought he knew but he didn't. The one that he thought was Mrs. Buzzard at last came sailing down, down, down straight toward that tall, dead tree. Then, just as the great bird alighted, Peter discovered that it was Ol' Mistah Buzzard and not Mrs. Buzzard at all. Hastily he looked up in the blue, blue sky. It was quite empty. Ol' Mrs. Buzzard was nowhere to be seen.

Presently Ol' Mistah Buzzard went to look for his breakfast.

If ever Peter Rabbit had felt foolish in all his life he felt foolish then. He patiently waited and waited but he saw nothing more of Ol' Mrs. Buzzard. He knew that she had probably found a breakfast somewhere and then had gone straight to her nest. But as to where that nest was he was no wiser than before. It was very provoking. Anyway, that is the way Peter felt about it.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, who is to head the official inquiry of the destruction of the dirigible Shenandoah, is a veteran officer of the U. S. navy who has served in all parts of the world and on many important stations. Admiral Jones is a native of Virginia, where he was born in 1863. He was graduated from Annapolis in 1884 and by gradual promotions reached the grade of captain in 1911. Before reaching flag rank he commanded the Birmingham, the Tennessee, the Rhode Island and the Florida. During the World war he first commanded Squadron 1 of the patrol force, Atlantic fleet, then Division 6 and the Newport News division of the cruiser and transport force. For his services he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal. In 1921 he became the commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

THE STORY OF THE SHENANDOAH

"America's best-known vehicle was the Shenandoah. Hundreds of thousands have seen some of the country's 'crack' trains and giant ocean liners; literally millions have watched the silvery Shenandoah steal silently across the sky" said a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"This airship comprised many wonder stories of modern science. Its length 680 feet, is two-thirds that of the Leviathan, yet its weight of only 37tons is a tiny fraction of the Leviathan's 50,000 tons.

"As the airship floated mysteriously overhead, it looked like a magnified cigar, wrapped in tin foil, with six baskets hanging from it. Inside the covering were 20 great gas bags, with a total gas capacity equal to the cubic contents of a train of 200 freight cars. These were interspersed with from 40 to 78 gasoline tanks and a complement of one-ton water tanks.

"This equipment was supported by a metal framework which was a veritable maze of girders, struts, and beams; there were 3,000 struts alone in the intricate design.

"It is for this metal framework that duralumin was used—an alloy so light and strong that a girder 18 feet long can be balanced on one's little finger, yet if the tips are placed on blocks it will bear the load of eight men sitting upon it.

"The engines could drive the craft for more than two days and nights at 60 miles an hour, or if the ship slowed down to a mere average express-train speed of 50 miles an hour, it could travel for 90 hours.

"In one of its six cars was a photographic laboratory, so that motion picture reels and photographs might be developed on board and the pictorial story of a flight be ready when the ship landed, or even thrown overboard by parachutes at designated places. Another car had a sound-proof radio compartment with a powerful sending apparatus and telegraphic implements.

"The airship was the 'Pullman train of the skies, albeit faster and smoother, providing its passengers with dining-car food, comfortable berths, shelter from the elements, and unrivaled 'observation platforms.'

"The most astonishing mechanical contrivance on the Shenandoah was the water-recovery apparatus, which replaced the gasoline burned with an equivalent weight of water, and thus saved the valving of the precious helium.

"You will recall, from your chemistry courses, that gasoline consists of hydrogen and carbon When gasoline is burned, the carbon combines with some of the oxygen from the air to form carbon dioxide, and the hydrogen, with other oxygen, forms water.

"Automobilists notice in cold weather that their exhaust pipes steam. Occasionally the moisture freezes and forms a frostlike ring on the vent. The apparatus for recovering water on the Shenandoah consisted of several tiers of long, light pipes, exposed to the cooling air, so that the superheated steam condensed and filled water tanks. This manufactured water compensated for the weight of the gasoline consumed.

"Formerly, as fuel was burned, the ship grew lighter and tended to rise. Thereupon the gas expanded, and it was necessary to release enough helium to equalize the lift of the gas to the weight of the ship.

"Even though helium cost has been brought from a radiumlike luxury price to $51 for a thousand cubic feet, the amount the Shenandoah had to valve on long trips was an expensive operating item. On its famous St. Louis visit, for example, 200,000 cubic feet of helium had to be valved. The water-recovery device meant a saving on one such trip of $16,200—enough to pay for the experimentation and installation of the mechanism."

INDIANS FIGHT IN COURTS FOR RIGHT TO USE MESCAL

HELENA, Mont., Sept. 22—Whether the Bible is sufficient authority for the use of mescal in religious ceremonials by the Crow Indians is a question to be determined by the Montana Supreme court this fall.

Big Sheep, a Crow Indian, was arrested and convicted in the district court for Big Horn county, charged with possession of narcotics. Federal agents found in his possession a sack containing 56 mescal buttons.

Big Sheep explained that he is a leader of the congregation of the Native American church and that the decoction from the buttons is a necessary part of the ritual of the church. State and federal laws say it is a prohibited narcotic. The Indian appealed from the decision of the district court citing three scriptural references that he alleged as his authority for possession of the buttons and use of the liquor made from them.

These include the second verse of Romans XIV, the seventh verse of Revelations II, and the entire chapter of Isaiah LIII.

Big Sheep declares that he owned the 56 mescal buttons before 1923, when the Montana law became effective and that the liquor prepared by stewing and boiling the buttons was taken only in accordance with teachings and doctrines of the Bible and for no other purpose.

HENRY LAFONTAINE PLAYS ORGAN IN OLD CATHEDRAL

Latest news from Charles J. Dyer and Henry LaFontaine comes from Brennero, Italy, which they describe as a charming old town. Mr. LaFontaine writes of his most successful trip; he studied in Munich with an old master and has met many persons prominent musically and otherwise. He has been working at the organ in the ancient cathedral in Brennero, where the parish is that of most hospitable Franciscan Fathers, one, in particular, very well known as a church music composer.

The tourists were guests of Mr. Dyer's friend, Siegfried Wagner at Bayreuth for the year's Festival also of Baron Frankenstein, intendant of Munich Festival. Mr. LaFontaine describes the entire tour as a glorious trip.

STORM CLOUD HAS REAL SILVER LINING FOR NEVADA RESIDENT

TONOPAH, Nev., Sept. 22. (AP)—A recent cloudburst on the land of L. L. Loony, of Rochester, Nev., washed away a good portion of the ground around his house. When the storm was spent, a vein of mineral was exposed.

He started to dig. At a depth of 20 feet he opened up a vein of ore assaying $80 to the ton. He was soon on his way to the smelter with the first carload.

Cloudbursts are common on the Nevada desert and are generally considered plagues.

COUNTY W. C. T. U. RE-ELECTS ITS OFFICERS

Seventy-five delegates representing the eight unions of the county assembled at the Huntington Street Baptist church, New London, on Tuesday for the annual convention of the Women's Christian Temperance union of New London county.

Mrs. Walter M. Slocum, of New London, called the convention to order at 10 o'clock. The assemblage sang the Crusade Hymn, after which Mrs. Fred Saunders, of New London, led in the devotional period. Cordial greetings were extended to the visitors by the Rev. Joseph A. Elder, pastor of the Huntington Street Baptist church, and by Mrs. Norman Hicks, president of the New London union. Miss Nellie Starr, of Montville, gave a fitting response. The secretary's report was submitted by Mrs. Cady S. Rogers, of New London and the treasurer's report was given by Miss Harriet Cross, of Norwich. The presidents of the eight unions in the county then gave five minute reports on the history of their respective unions which will form the basis of a county history to be read at the jubilee in Middletown Oct. 23-24. The morning sessions terminated with noontime prayers and memorial services led by Mrs. William A. Ames.

Shortly after noon the delegates sat down to a delicious luncheon in the parlors of the church.

Mrs. Lottie A. Woodford, of Wisconsin, national scientific temperance instructor and lecturer, gave an address in the afternoon in which she stressed the point that prohibition should be more rigidly enforced and prohibit all liquors, including beer and wine. Mrs. Hattie Newton, of Durham, state president, and Mrs. Marguerite Goodale, of Durham, state secretary of young people's work, also spoke.

Mrs. J. J. Fields, of this city, made her report as superintendent of county fair work and Mrs. Getchell reported for the mission department.

The union voted $20 as an appropriation for the flying squadron. It appointed the president as delegate to the national convention in Detroit in November.

The officers were all re-elected as follows:

President, Mrs. Walter M. Slocum, New London; vice-president, Mrs. Anna C. S. Feaner, New London; secretary, Mrs. Cady S. Rogers, New London; treasurer, Miss Harriet G. Cross, Norwich.

COMMISSIONER WILL GIVE HEARING ON RE-LOCATION OF HIGHWAY

State highway commissioner J. A. Macdonald has expressed a desire to hold a public hearing on the matter of the proposed re-location of the state highway between Norwich and Putnam. In a letter to Herbert R. Branche, chariman of the executive and civic committee of Norwich Council, No. 309, United Commercial Travelers of America, State Highway Commissioner Macdonald sugested October 7th as the date for the hearing, the commissioner feeling that in all fairness to people who are not members of civic organizations, a public hearing should be held to give all an opportunity to present their views, for or against the proposed re-location plan.

Acting on Commissioner Macdonald's suggestion Mr. Branche has arranged to have the public hearing held Wednesday, Oct. 7, at 2:30 p. m. in the town hall, town of Plainfield, the hall being located in Central Village.

Commissioner Macdonald's letter to Mr. Branche is as follows:

Hartford, Sept. 16, 1925

Mr. H. A. Branche,
Chairman Executive and Civic Com.,
Norwich Council, No. 309, U. C. T. of A.,
Norwich, Conn.

Dear Sir:

Mr. John Smith, division engineer at Norwich, has referred to me copies of resolutions, newspaper articles, letters, etc., pertaining to a plan for the re-location of the Norwich-Putnam trunk line highway.

So much has been said along this line, both for and against, that it would seem very desirable for me to hold a public hearing. There are a good many people who naturally would be opposed to this road who do not belong to any of the organizations that the proposition has been submitted to, and it would seem in all fairness that they should have an opportunity to discuss the matter fully.

I have an open date on Wednesday, October 7th, and if it were possible for you to provide some place of meeting along the line of this road, I would say, centrally between Norwich and Putnam, where all persons interested could appear and give their views on the subject, I would be glad to come with the engineers connected with the highway department and hear all for and against. If you agree with me and can provide a place of meeting, will you kindly see that all newspapers in the vicinity are notified so that the public will be fully advised.

Will you kindly advise me as soon as convenient relative to this.

Your truly,
JOHN A. MACDONALD,
State Highway Commissioner.

To this letter Mr. Branche has sent the following reply:

Norwich, Conn., Sept. 19, 1925

Mr. John A. Macdonald,
State Highway Commissioner,
Hartford, Conn.

Dear Sir:

Replying to your letter of Sept. 16th, I have secured the town hall in the town of Plainfield, which is located in Central Village, for a public hearing, October 7th, at 2:30 p. m.

Have arranged to have the meeting publicized through the columns of all newspapers between Norwich and Putnam, inclusive, beginning the 23rd of the month.

Can assure you of a representative gathering of citizens at the hearing.

Yours truly,
H. R. BRANCHE.

FIFTEEN STORRS GRADUATES IN STATE HIGH SCHOOLS

(Special to the Bulletin)

STORRS, Conn., Sept. 22.—Fifteen graduates of the Connecticut agricultural college began teaching this month in the high schools of the state or were engaged in other educational work, according to the announcement of Professor Charles B. Gentry, dean of the division of teacher-training at Storrs.

Young women graduates teaching home economics in the Smith-Hughes vocational schools, are as follows: Miss Marie Bronson of Waterville, at the Baldwin high school, Watertown; Miss Pauline M. Girard of Thomaston, at the Deep River high school, Deep River; Miss Alice Hubbard of Winsted, at the Madison high school Madison; Miss Hannah K. Jensen of Manchester Green, at the Hamilton high school, Ridgefield; Miss Catherine Manchester of Winsted, at Glastonbury high school, Glastonbury; Miss Hazel M. Clark of Windsor, at the John Fitch high school, Windsor; Miss Christine McMenemy of Manchester at Bacon academy, Colchester.

Miss Florence G. Bailey of Meriden is teaching home economics at Milford, and Miss Pauline Graf of Stamford is teaching the same subject in Stamford. Other young women registered in this division of the college, with the work they are now engaged in is as follows: Miss Irene M. Cooke, of Los Angeles, Cal., publicity work for Pratt Institute; Miss Cora LaVallee of Danielson, with Hartford Charities; and Miss Dorothy Stellenwerf of Mansfield Center, with the Connecticut Food and Dairy Council.

Young men teaching agriculture in the Smith-Hughes vocational schools of the state are Samuel A. Holdridge of Norwich, at the North Stonington high school, North Stonington; William A. Hutton of Southington, at Thompsonville high school, Thompsonville; and George E. Wells of New Milford, at the New Milford High school. Foster H. Weiss of Stamford another graduate of this division of the college, is doing advanced work at the Massachusetts Agricultural college.

JOURNEYING TO ITALY FOR TEMPORARY STAY

Ralph Divito, a resident of this city for 20 years and a former member of the Norwich police force, is to leave the city this (Wednesday) evening for New York whence he will sail on Saturday for Italy on the steamer Conte Rosso of the Lloyd Sabando line. Mr. Divito has disposed of his Norwich real estate and will be accompanied by his wife and 13-year-old daughter, Christina. They expect to be gone from 1 1-2 to 2 years, but eventually to return here.

A nine day trip across the ocean will take them to Naples from where they will go to Valle Della Lucanis, in the province of Salerno, the former home of Mr. Divito. He is making the change for the benefit of his health because he is suffering from rheumatism, which affects his feet. When he visited Italy a year ago he found that the trouble left him entirely and he is now to take the baths near Naples in the expectation that he will be completey cured. His many friends will hope that he will realize the benefit he is looking for and will be glad to see him again when he returns.

MANSFIELD ESTATE AGAIN IN THEATRICAL WORLD

Congratulations from many eminent people of the theatre have been arriving daily at Mansfield Grange, New London, since the announcement of the incorporation there of the Richard Mansfield Players, a professional resident company.

Mansfield Grange—the home of the great American actor Richard Mansfield—was for a time the center of social and theatrical interest. With the establishment of this new company of professional actors of the highest rank, the Mansfield estate at New London, Connecticut, after some years of inactivity, once more becomes prominent in the annals of the theatre. The unique and most unusual feature concerning the Richard Mansfield Players of New London is that the entire company will reside at Mansfield Grange and will rehearse all of their plays in the great music hall from whose walls hang most interesting paintings of characters made famous by the great actor.

Preparing For Harvest Social

A very successful meeting of the Harvest social committee of the Catholic Ladies of Columbus was held Tuesday evening. This affair is to be held at Hill Top Casino and the following patrons and patronesses were chosen: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. McVeigh, Mr. and Mrs. James J. Dutton, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Shea, Mr. and Mrs. B. Coyle.

The following is the committee: Miss Loretta Gadle, chairman; the Misses Mary Hamill, Marie Desmond C. Finnegan, L. Gilligan, M. Keller, June Ulman, Doris Furlong, Frances Kelly, Mae Riley, Mazie Sweeney, C. Reduen, Vera McGuinness, Frances Klingberger, Mabel McCarthy, Agnes Bresnehan, Eleanor Donovan, Mary Brennan, Julia Gallagher, Elizabeth Toth, Margaret Shea, Myrtle Buteau, Agnes White, C. Kelly, M. Carey and Lillian O'Brien.

BEGIN NEW SUIT TO CONDEMN McCOOK LAND

Papers were served on Captain Anson T. McCook of Hartford on Tuesday beginning new condemnation proceedings in the name of the state of Connecticut against property owned by the McCook family adjacent to the Seaside sanatorium at Niantic. This suit is brought by State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown of New London county and it replaces a former suit instituted by Attorney General Frank E. Healy. A bill providing for the taking of considerably more of the McCook land than was contemplated in the suit brought by the attorney general was passed at the last session of the general assembly and consequently the former suit dropped. This bill was the subject of much political maneuvering in the general assembly and was considered by many to have been a slap at the attorney general by the Roraback faction of the republican party.

The papers served Tuesday summon John J., John B., Frances A., Anson T. and Lucy E. McCook, all of Hartford, and Philip J. McCook of New York city and Eliza L. Root of Hankow, China to appear in the superior court of New London county on the first Tuesday of October, 1925.

The petition cites that on June 22, 1925, the state of Connecticut was the owner of certain land and buildings in the town of East Lyme and as a tuberculosis sanitarium operated by the state for the public benefit. It also relates the action of the general assembly at its January session, in passing the act providing for the acquiring of land for the sanitarium which was approved by the governor, June 22.

The suit contemplates the taking of land from the McCooks having a fronting of about 391 feet on the shore and comprising five acres, more or less.

The papers state that on June 22, 1925, the governor appointed Arthur M. Brown to carry out the provisions of the act and say that the attorney cannot agree with the owners of the land upon the amount to be paid for it.

The land is owned by the estate of Eliza S. McCook, her husband, John J. McCook, being the executor.

The state prays that the amount to be paid for the land be determined.

The writ is signed by Charles V. James as a commissioner of the superior court. The action is dated September 18.

C. E. UNION HOLDS ITS ANNUAL MEETING

The New London Christian Endeavor Union held its annual meeting Tuesday evening at the Montville Baptist church with a large attendance of delegates from the various unions. Percy Allen, president for the past year, presided. The society having the largest percentage of members present was the Quaker Hill Society, with 79 per cent. Next came the Montauk Avenue Baptist church society, 76 per cent., and then the First Congregational church, New London, 70 per cent., Niantic Baptist church society, 60 per cent., and Montville Baptist church, 59 per cent. Other societies were represented.

The principal speaker of the evening was Rev. J. W. Nield. The officers elected for the coming year are:

President, Richard Hancock, New London; vice president, Morgon Syney of Niantic; secretary, Miss Cecelia Turner of Niantic; treasurer, Ralph Madison of Groton. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

TAXI AND BUS IN COLLISION ON MAIN ST.

A Luxor taxi cab driven by Thomas Shahan, proprietor of the taxi service, was in collision on Main street, near Chelsea bank, about 11 o'clock Tuesday evening with one of the Connecticut Company's motor busses. According to Mr. Shahan he was driving toward the square and when near the Chelsea bank, a machine owned by Francis T. Diggins of this city and driven by a man named Lynch, suddenly pulled out from the curb.

To avoid a collision with Mr. Diggins' machine, Mr. Shahan pulled quickly to the left and ran into the Connecticut Company bus. No one was hurt. The Luxor cab sustained a damaged rear right mudguard and running board and the bus received a broken tie rod and a damaged right front mudguard and the bumper was also damaged.

Runabout and Truck Collide

A runabout owned and driven by N. Eugene Smith of 28 Broadway and a small truck owned by John Makimo of Sprague, who was driving it, were in collision about 11 o'clock Tuesday morning at the corner of Sachem and Washington streets. Mr. Smith was driving down Washington street as the truck came out of Sachem to cross over into Williams avenue. The damage to each car amounted to more than $10, according to the report that was made.

Payments to Hospitals

The order for the quarterly payments to hospitals by the state was signed Tuesday by Acting Governor Brainard, the total being $91,437. Included in the list were the following: Lawrence, New London, $2,250; Day-Kimball, Putnam, $2,250; Johnson Memorial, Stafford Springs, $500; St. Joseph's, Willimantic, $1,125; Home Memorial, New London, $1,000.

NORWICH STORE WINDOWS DRESSED FOR PRIZES

The window dressing prizes for the fall openings of the local merchants which will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week will consist of blue ribbons for first prize, red ribbons for the second prize, and three white ribbons for honorable mention. In order that the judges will be in a position to pass fair judgment on the various lines of merchandise which are carried in Norwich, the stores have been grouped in the following classifications: department stores, ladies wear, mens wear, furniture, shoe stores, hardware, auto accessories, electrical goods, drug stores, restaurants, jewelers, candy, florists, provisions, and six lines of merchandise whoih have been grouped under a general classification.

The stores will be judged Wednesday evening by the following judges who have courteously agreed to perform this function: Mrs. Ozias Dodge, Arthur L. Peale, and Edwin V. Ross. The judges will award the ribbons for each classification. The windows will be judged on attractiveness, originality, and salesmanship. The merchants' windows will be thrown open Wednesday evening for the inspection of the general public and Swahn's military band will parade through the business streets commencing at 7:30 this (Wednesday) evening. A great deal of interest and rivalry is being shown by the merchants in the display of their goods and the quality of their merchandise. During the spring openings held last March the streets were crowded with people from both local and out of town and many comments were made upon the excellent showing of the merchants in their window dressings.

This is a general co-operative movement on the part of the merchants for a uniform fall opening of all the stores and the public will become acquainted with the fall and winter styles in the various lines of merchandise that will be sold in Norwich. It is a fact that the merchandise carried by the local merchants is not excelled by any of the stores in the larger cities. Comparisons of merchandise and prices will bear out this fact. The merchants extend a cordial invitation to the people of Norwich and the surrounding towns to view their display of fall merchandise on Wednesday evening when Swahn's band will render music during the window dressing contest.

SPEAKS ON CONDITIONS AT PRESENT IN ITALY

The Italian congregation of the Central Baptist church gave a banquet Tuesday evening at 6:30 o'clock in Bushnell chapel at the church in celebration of the 55th anniversary of Italian independence day, which is Sept. 20th. An excellent menu, which included a number of distinctive Italian dishes, was served by the committee in charge and music by the Sunday school orchestra entertained the fifty at the tables.

Dr. Antonio Magnano, of Colgate university, the speaker of the evening, was introduced by Rev. Valentino Panizzoli, pastor of the Italian mission, and gave an especially instructive talk upon present day conditions in Italy. He reviewed something of the history that led to the unification of Italy and spoke of Italy's great contribution to the World War when she refrained from siding with the triple alliance, but joined the Allies and threw two and a half million men into the field.

As to Mussolini and the Fascisti, he said that Mussolini had come into power because he had created a group of men to restore order in Italy from the chaos that prevailed after the war. Striken prevailed everywhere, the communists were threatening to obtain the mastery, and the government did nothing while parliament wrangled. Mussolini has accomplished wonders in stabilizing the country, in crushing out the rabid socialism and communism. The best people backed him with their money, and history will accord Mussolini a high place for what he has accomplished in saving Italy. But now there is a great satisfaction at his repressive measures, particularly in repressing free speech and the free press. No one today knows what is in the back of Mussolini's head as to the future of Italy and when he is asked he makes no answer, said Dr. Magnano.

STORRS STUDENTS MUST NOT HAVE AUTOMOBILES

Students at the Connecticut Agricultural college will not be permitted to have automobiles at Storrs during the coming college year, according to an announcement made by President Charles L. Beach. This rule will go into effect with the opening of the college this week.

It is the opinion of President Beach that too many students engage in a free lance jitney bus business without license and that many others prefer to ride around the state instead of studying.

Transportation facilities from Storrs and Willimantic are limited and students in the past have procured machines and have set up independent jitney service. President Beach said Tuesday that not only did these students conduct their business without the required license, but work of this kind interfered seriously with their academic grades.

That the student jitney service was successful from a financial standpoint is shown by the experience of one student who started during his sophomore year with a small touring car. At the time of his graduation last June he owned two expensive passenger cars and had telephone connections direct to his dormitory room to facilitate the dispatching of his cars.

C., Martin of East River, and James L. of Hartford. She also leaves a brother in Washington.

BOLD BRITISH MARINERS START ODD LIFEBOAT TEST

LONDON, Sept. 22—In order to test a theory concerning supplies that should be compulsorily carried by the ships' boats in case of disaster, and how far wireless equipment can aid seafarers who are compelled to take to their boats, three Cornish mariners and a wireless operator have started on a 35,000 mile voyage. They left Newlyn, Cornwall, in a converted life boat, 40 by 10 feet, supplied with power by a 16 horsepower internal combustion engine. The boat carries five tons of foodstuffs.

The party expects to be away two or three years, during which they will go through the seven seas, make calls at 50 ports and visit practically every part of the British Empire.

The leader of the expedition, Captain George Hutchins, decided to make the test as the result of the sufferings and privations endured by the master and crew of the Trevisa, when that vessel was lost.

"BUCKY" HARRIS SUSTAINS INJURY THAT MAY KEEP HIM OUT OF SERIES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23. (AP)—On the eve of the world's series, Stanley "Buck" Harris, manager and second baseman of the Washington champions, suffered an injured finger today and was forced out of the game and possibly out of the opening game of the season's classic.

The middle finger of Harris' right hand was badly gashed when he dove into third base in the first inning of today's contest with Cleveland. The finger still was lame from a previous injury and Clark Griffith, president of the club, said later that he was doubtful if his manager would be able to start in the world series.

Although the champions are expected to have easy sailing for the remainder of their regular schedule, requiring only three victories in their eleven games to clinch the title, the prospect of Harris' absence from the world series lineup was regarded as a serious setback.

In addition to ranking as one of the best fielding second basemen in the league, Harris has figured prominently in the "dominating spirit" of the champions on the field. Spencer Adams, a recruit, took his place today and probably will remain at the keystone station during Harris' absence. Stewart, a new-comer from Birmingham, in the Southern league, also is a second baseman but he is not eligible for the world series.

Walter Johnson and Roger Peckinpaugh, veteran pitcher and short stop, respectively, of the Nationals, also are out of the game with injuries but both are ready for duty if necessary, Griffith said, they are expected to be in shape for the world series.

YOUNG COULON'S CAREER AS A BOXER IS VERY INTERESTING

With everything to gain and nothing to lose Young Coulon is training as he never trained before for his coming bout with Happy Rollinson, state flyweight champion, at Duwell field here on Friday evening, the preliminary to the Leonard-Ferguson title bout. If he loses the bout it is no disgrace but if he wins Young Coulon will take the state title and will advance with a great stride in the road to pugilistic fame.

Young Coulon, who claims Taftville as his home, has an interesting career. Young Coulon's real name is Beauregard and ever since he was a youngster in his early teens he has been a fighter. When we say fighter we mean all that the word implies. A remarkable thing, in a boxer, is that he fights for the love of the game more than for the money and fame. When Young Coulon was "king of the kids" up around that section of Taftville known as Fancy Corner, he was always looking for a chance to put on the gloves and mix it with some one. As the boys of his own weight were loath to put on the gloves with him he had to take on the heavier boys of the village, boys that outweighed him 30 to 50 pounds. In order to stand up to these heavy opponents Young Coulon learned to hit with terrific force and also acquired the ability to absorb punishment. However, his science was not developed and until he entered professional ranks two years ago he knew little of the finer points of the game, but his boring in on his man and his hitting power carried him through the early stages of his professional career.

Gradually he picked up the science of the game, spending a good part of his time in New Bedford in a stable of flyweights where he learned to combine skill with his hitting powers. With the acquisition of a scientific defense he lost nothing of his slashing, hammering attack but now has developed into a real menace in the flyweight division. During the past years Young Coulon has fought close to 30 battles and his percentage of wins is large. Last winter was spent in Florida where he fought nearly every week and his record of knockouts mounted with amazing rapidity. During the spring he was a leading attraction on the New Bedford, Fall River and Boston cards. Now in this bout of Friday night he has the chance of his career and he is going to make the most of it.

Word comes from Leonard and Ferguson who meet in the main bout of the evening for the state welterweight title, that both boys are in shape for their tilt. Each has been training faithfully for the past ten days and both claim that the title will be decided in this bout.

MOOSUP-RIVERVIEW SERIES STARTS ON NEXT SUNDAY

During the past two weeks, Henry Loughran, manager of the Moosup baseball club, and Bill Donovan, manager of the Riverview club, have been trying hard to bring their clubs together in a series. Yesterday afternoon after a lengthy discussion over guarantees, umpires, who had the option on Jack Clabby's services, etc., it was agreed that the series would start Sunday in Moosup (Sept. 27).

It will be remembered by all the fans that Loughran employed practically the entire Riverview club last season, (Burns, Sank, Couillard, Harrell, Moore, Tony West and others), and won many games; he therefore claimed the championship of eastern Connecticut, and still holds that claim notwithstanding the fact that he has not played one club within the borders of this state. This season he has an aggregation of ex-Holy Cross players bolstered up by two former Red Sox veterans, Hal Janvrin and King Bader. Manager Donovan will present the same roster of players who have been with the Riverview club during the season, namely—Belair, Goodridge, West, Harrell, Forslund, Normandin, Mills, Moore, Stubbs, Kiernan, Clabby, Hamel, Nosell and Zemke. Here is one aggregation that will be on the field ready to start at 3 p. m., as advertised.

TWI-LEAGUERS TO GET TICKETS FOR BOXING SHOW

It was voted at a meeting of the managers and directors of the Norwich Twi-League Tuesday evening to give a ticket for the Leonard-Ferguson to every player in the league instead of holding a banquet as first decided upon. The prizes for the league were not given out as the final averages have not been checked.

ACADEMY HOLDS FIRST SCRIMMAGE OF SEASON

Tuesday afternoon on the Academy campus, Coach Whitney gave his charges their first scrimmage of the 1925 season. To the numerous spectators, including many alumni and former players at the local institution, the squad showed unusual promise considering the fact that it was their first real workout to date.

The first team made many long gains but met with determined resistance when touchdowns seemed almost inevitable. For the first team Schwartz played center with Polsky and Fidell at guards; Mouseley and Stefano held down the tackle berths with McCluggage and Waters at ends; Captain Williams was at quarter, Pheno Tombari and C. Brewer at half while Radio Ed Brewer held down the fullback position.

The seconds were composed of Sullivan at center who was later replaced by Frink; Connell and Bell at guard with Kramer and Mullens at tackle, Moore alternating with Kramer at tackle, and Cimikoski and Mish at end composed a line which at times was a stone wall. In the backfield N. Courbois was at quarterback with McGlone, Smiling Johnny Green and Vitagliano at half and Jack Marks at fullback. As Coach Whitney has repeatedly told his men they will have to work hard to stay on the squad and no one is sure of his position.

It is expected that the team will have another stiff scrimmage this Wednesday afternoon at the campus, which will probably be the last this week, as it is not likely that any intense practice will be had on Thursday, which is the day before the game with Westerly high school at Norwich.

BULKELEY FOOTBALL TEAM FAR FROM IMPRESSIVE

NEW LONDON, Sept. 22—The Bulkeley High school football squad held a hard fast workout Wednesday afternoon at Morgan Park. The afternoon's work opened with kicking practice in punting and drop kicking, which was followed by signal practice, for the backs and centers, and plunging and dummy scrimmage for the linemen. The team wound up the practice with a half mile jog around the track.

Bulkeley's team this year is far from what it has been in the past. A large number of men have been lost by graduation and withdrawal from school, while the men, who have taken their places are both green and light.

The team is noticeably weak in the kicking department, Montali being depended upon mostly for dropkicking. Bulkeley will meet the principal high schools of the state and has an exceptionally hard schedule, which is as follows:

Sept. 25, Stonington at New London; Oct. 2, Hartford Public High at New London; Oct. 10 Leominster at Leominster; Oct. 17, Crosby at Waterbury; Oct. 22 Commercial High at New London; Oct. 31, Bridgeport at Bridgeport; Nov. 7, N. F. A. at New London; Nov. 14, Lasalle at New London; Nov. 21, Fordham Frosh at New London.

BROOKLYN BEATEN BY OLD TIMERS OF DANIELSON

The fast Old Timers team constituted of a number of stars, defeated the Brooklyn team at Connecticut Mills Grounds Sunday in a fast clean game.

Brooklyn came out strong with several changes in their lineup and were confident of beating the Old Timers but much to their surprise the Old Timers proved to be their superiors.

Many who saw the Old Timers in action think they could cross bats with some of the fastest teams in Eastern Connecticut and come out victors.

In the seventh inning the Old Timers hit Ashley very hard scoring seven runs in the early part of this inning. "Shine" Morland received a bad sprain in his foot and was relieved by Labelle who pitched a splendid 2 innings, giving Cleveland's pitching.

BEST COLT RACE OF YEAR FEATURE AT SYRACUSE

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 22, (AP)—The Horse Review, $6,000 futurity for three-year-old trotters, the feature of today's Grand Circuit, proved one of the best colt races of the year and was won by Aileen Guy, driven by Ben White, only after four stubborn heats had been raced.

The favored Hollyrood Leonard won the first two heats of the Capital City 2:04 trotting stake, but the third heat went to Ethelinda, which placed in the first two heats.

Crawford won the M and M stake for 2:13 trotters in straight heats from a small field.

Tom Dennison, winner of seven straight races over Ohio half-mile tracks, won the 2:15 trot, the only class race on the card, in straight heats.

The track was fast but a cold, raw wind made racing disagreeable.

U. S. Wins Yacht Races.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Sept. 22.—(A. P.)—By winning the sixth and final brush today, American yachts of the six-meter class defeated the Scandinavian Yachting Union, represented by boats from Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland, in their international series on Long Island Sound, four races to two. A total of 121 1-4 points were scored by the victorious fleet against 95 1-4 for the invaders.

NEGOTIATIONS FOR ANOTHER WALKER-SHADE BOUT START

NEW YORK, Sept. 22. (AP)—Negotiations for a return match between Mickey Walker, world's welterweight champion, and Dave Shade of California, were opened today by Tex Rickard, Madison Square Garden promoter. The indecisiveness of Walker's victory over Shade in a 15-round title clash at the Yankee Stadium last night, the promoter said, prompted him to start dickering for a return match to be held during the winter season in the new Madison Square Garden.

While no contracts have been drawn up, Rickard said today that Jack Kearns, Walker's manager, is willing to sign for the match but that Leo P. Flynn, manager of Shade, has not yet been approached. Flynn, however, is expected to seize the chance for another crack at the title.

Official figures last night's show reveal that a crowd of 25,000 paid $185,156 to see the fight. With the state and federal taxes subtracted, Rickard emerged with a net gate of $159,906.80.

Of this Walker is understood to have received a flat guarantee of $100,000 with Shade getting a 12 1-2 per cent. cut.

YALE FOOTBALL APPLICATIONS MAILED TO THE GRADS

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 22—Application blanks for football tickets to the four big games in which Yale will play this season will be mailed on Thursday to all Yale men, whether graduates or former members of the university, it was announced today. The applications are for the Yale-Pennsylvania game in the Yale bowl on October 17; the Yale-Army game in the bowl on October 31; the Yale-Princeton game, also in the bowl on November 14 and the Yale-Harvard game at Cambridge November 21.

No block orders for seats will be received at Yale for the Army game. It is expected that the regular applications of Yale men, together with the applications of the holders of season books, will exhaust the supply of tickets for the Army and Princeton games. This will result in no seats being available for public sale for either of these games.

Block orders for seats will be received for the Pennsylvania game, and season ticket holders may apply for any number of tickets on special blanks available at the ticket office. Only regular Yale applications will be honored before season ticket book holders.

PIRATES NEED TWO WINS; SENATORS THREE FOR FLAG

CHICAGO, Sept. 22—Pittsburgh fans after a wait of sixteen years, tonight can almost hear the flapping of a championship pennant the first one since 1909. The Pirates by defeating the Philadelphians today increased their lead to 5 1-2 games over the New York Giants, who were idle in St. Louis.

The Pirates need only one more game to win the 1925 flag in the senior circuit, even if the Giants win all ten games which it still is possible for them to play. The final standing would be:

Pittsburgh	93	61	.607
New York	93	61	.601

The Washington Senators, by beating Cleveland while Philadelphia lost to St. Louis, widened the gap between themselves and the Athletics to 8 1-2 games.

By taking three more contests out of their remaining eleven while the Athletics win all their remaining ten, the world's champions would finish seven points in front as follows:

Washington	95	58	.621
Philadelphia	95	59	.319

The standing tonight:

National—

Pittsburgh	93	61	.630
New York	82	61	.573

American—

Washington	93	58	.650
Philadelphia	85	59	.590

ANOTHER AGGIE PLAYER RECEIVES PAINFUL INJURY

STORRS, Conn., Sept. 22—The Connecticut Aggies suffered another casualty today, when in the course of a strenuous scrimmage, Bill Donovan of Middletown, promising backfield candidate received a badly wrenched knee. It is doubtful if he will be able to play against Wesleyan Saturday, although no definite announcement could be made tonight.

Today's drill was largely devoted to offensive and defensive work with the forward pass, and dummy scrimmage. Coach Dole intends to have his well prepared for Wesleyan's aerial game, and at the same time have his eleven show a few passes themselves.

Lou Logan, captain and tackle of the freshman team returned to Storrs this morning, and received his first workout with the squad this afternoon.

Dempsey-Wills Again

CHICAGO, Sept. 22—The proposed Jack Dempsey-Harry Wills heavyweight championship match, which Promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons says he will stage next June 4, moved a step forward today with the announcement by R. R. Benton, representative of the champion, that he had telegraphed Dempsey to come here Sunday.

Dempsey is now in San Antonio, Texas.

On Monday or Tuesday, Benton, Dempsey and Fitzsimmons will go to South Bend for a final meeting and posting of forfeits. Mullins, according to Benton, will also be there.

GRIMES LOSES TOUGH GAME TO CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 22, (AP)—Burleigh Grimes, veteran right-hand pitcher of the Dodgers, lost one of the toughest games of his career today when Chicago beat him, 3 to 2 in 12 innings, extending Brooklyn's losing streak to nine games.

Grimes had the distinction of hitting into two double plays and a triple play, the first one seen at Cubs park this season. On each occasion he blasted promising rallies. The Cubs kept nicking at him for a total of 16 hits, bunching them in the seventh and twelfth innings. A wild throw by Corgan in the ninth inning following a double by Metzger enabled Chicago to score.

The triple play came in the eighth inning with Corgan on third base and Taylor on first. Grimes grounded to Adams whose throw to Staley forced Taylor and was doubled at first on Staley's relay to Grimm. Corgan attempted to score on the play but was nipped at the plate, Grimm to Hartnett. Score:

HARVARD VARSITY RUNS WITH THROUGH SCRUBS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 22—Harvard's football squad staged its first scrimmage of the season today and for the first time moved its workout from Soldiers' Field to the stadium. In less than an hour the varsity scored six touchdowns, with Al Miller, speedy backfield giant, Captain Dolph Cheek contributing the feature plays.

A 65 yard run by Miller was the spectacular incident of the afternoon. He took the ball on a kick formation when Cheek had dropped back, and ran until forced out of bounds four yards from the goal line. After three downs Cheek went over for a touchdown. Cheek himself figured in two stirring plays a 15 yard gain around end and a forward pass to Miller which netted 16 yards.

The forward pass again was in evidence when Clem Coady, playing at fullback on the second varsity, shot the ball to Crosby for a gain of 25 yards. Thirty six men were used during the scrimmage in which the first, second and third varsity teams took part. The varsity was on the offensive for the first half of the workout and on defensive the remainder. Line Coach Leary pronounced the work of the line good for this early stage of the season.

YANKEES AND WHITE SOX SPLIT IN DOUBLE HEADER

NEW YORK, Sept. 22. (AP)—New York and Chicago divided a double header at the Yankee Stadium today, the Yanks winning the opener, 11 to 6, and the White Sox taking the final, 4 to 2. The Yanks beat Hollis Thurston and Dickie Kerr in the first game but Ted Blankenship allowed only six hits in the second, chalking up his 15th victory of the season.

Ben Paschal aided the Yankee cause in the opening game by hitting for the circuit twice, both clouts remaining inside the playing field. Bob Meusel hit his 30th homer of the season in the first game and his 31st in the second. Ruth went hitless in both games and contributed an error in the second game which allowed a Chicago runner to score. The score:

SENATORS ADVANCE BY BEATING CLEVELAND

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22. (AP)—Washington advanced to within three victories of its second consecutive pennant today, defeating Cleveland, 3 to 2, while St. Louis downed Philadelphia. It was Coveleskie's 20th victory of the season.

With the world series only two weeks away, Manager Harris was forced out of the game with a badly lacerated finger on his throwing hand. He was spiked when he slid into third base in the first inning. Score:

GIARD HOLDS ATHLETICS AND BROWNS WIN

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22. (AP)—Joe Giard, youthful St. Louis southpaw, showed rare form today and blanked the Athletics in the opening game of the series, 1 to 0. Giard gave the Mackmen only nine hits, most of which were of the infield variety.

In the first inning Tobin singled, stole second and scored the game's only run on Jacobson's double. Score:

TIGERS TAKE BOTH ENDS OF DOUBLE HEADER

BOSTON, Sept. 22. (AP)—Detroit took both games from the Red Sox today, 11 to 8 and 7 to 2. Seven runs in the sixth inning of the first game settled that contest in favor of the Tigers. Owen Carroll, former Holy Cross star, pitched the second game for Detroit. It was his first full game in the American league and his second victory of the season. Pitcher Ross of the Red Sox had his nose broken by a bad bounding ball off Wingo's bat in the first game. In the second contest, Heilmann hit a home run off Fuhr in the ninth with Manush on base. STATE JR. O. U. A. M., AT NEW LONDON, ELECTS N. BRITAIN MAN COUNCILOR

(Special to the Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 22—At the convention of the Junior Order American Mechanics held in Odd Fellows hall here today, F. W. Pinkerton, of New Britain was elected state councilor. Other officers were elected as follows: State Vice Councilor, Joseph Wellington, Jr., Norwich; State Treasurer, F. C. Prelle, New Britain; State Conductor, L. B. Clyne, Hartford; State Warden, E. Sturdevant, Danbury; Inside Sentinel, Clifford S. Ryder, Waterbury; Chaplain Walter Banks, Stamford. The convention opened with State Councilor Howard B. Marshall, of this city presiding. Mayor Waldo E. Clarke gave the address of welcome, which was responded to by State Councilor Marshall. In the business transacted, the most important, other than the election of officers was the selecting of New Britain as the place for the convention next year.

Frank LaFemina, 44 Smith street, employed by the Babcock Printing Press Manufacturing company, who disappeared from his home Sunday causing his wife to request the police to assist in locating her husband, returned home last night, although Mrs. LaFemina did not report the return of her husband to the police.

D. J. Barry, 98 Oakridge street, Norwich, came to New London last evening and attended a performance at the Lyceum theatre. During his stay in the playhouse Barry's car was parked on Washington street, a short distance from the theatre, and while Barry enjoyed the performance a thief went to the machine and stole a spare tire and cover. Barry discovered his loss after the performance and reported the theft to the police, but no trace of the property was obtained. Thieves have made a practice of late of lying in wait for autoists to park cars on Washington and Meridian streets, while their owners went to the playhouse and then they steal spare tires or whatever plunder may be found in the cars. So far the thieves have eluded detection.

Alfred Hallett has returned to his apartment at the Hotel Mohican, having spent a fortnight in New York state and in Canada.

Frank L. McGuire, who recently acquired two pieces of property, one on Main street, and the other on Masonic street and Theodore Bodenwein, who acquired the building corner of Main and Masonic street, today caused title in the realty to be transferred to the Title Building Corporation, of which Messrs McGuire and Bodenwein form a controlling interest. The value of the realty transferred is $25,500.

New London has taken the first steps to put into practice the authority given by a general zoning law enacted by the general assembly at its last session. There are sections in which the law should be made operative—where the beauty of the streets and the land, and the high class residences should be preserved as such. At the same time the city authorities should not be overzealous and allow aestheticism to interfere with progress toward a busier city and one in which the inhabitants could earn their living. More industry is needed in New London—the city needs it badly, and must have it if the people are to prosper. The Bulletin some months ago pointed out that there was not as much industry in New London today as there was two generations ago and it now repeats the statement. In the early "90s" on Water street from East New London to Shaw's Neck there was a line of business houses. The water front was a busy place. All this has changed now and old things have passed away without being succeeded by new ones in industry.

Many are asking whether zoning will help or deter the city in the march of progress. The city council has appointed the planning board members a commission with authority to establish the zoning law in practice. That board has done nothing, so far as the public is aware, toward entering upon its duties actively. The laws provide that public hearings must be held where sections are to be restricted to residential use, or at least to decide whether manufacturing will be allowed in a defined section. Even then, if twenty per cent of the residents in that section avail decide that they desire the establishment of a named industry the law provides that they may have what they want. So the duty of the zoning commission is important. It is such as the commission manifestly should not undertake with discretion, but which the commission should attack with a determination to benefit the city by whatever is done.

Herbert Hendel, 32 1-2 Truman street, reported to the police last evening that he had lost his wallet containing $40 and his operator's license and practically accused a member of a Connecticut avenue family of having found the wallet and to have kept possession of its contents. When an officer went to the Connecticut avenue house, the occupants were quite indignant at the officer's visit because Hendel had already been to the house three times and was given assurance that the pocketbook nor the money was not there.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles R. E. Stoeckel today caused the operator's license of Charles Kaufman, 276 Montauk avenue, to be suspended. Commissioner Stoeckel also caused the operators' licenses of Joe Hassan, 565 Bank street; Stephen Walters, 17 Cole street and Floyd Mitchell, 28 Truman street to be returned to the respective owners.

Mrs. Augusta Donzella, 59, residing on Walbach street, died at Home Memorial hospital late yesterday afternoon where she had been under treatment but a short time following a shock. Besides her husband Mrs. Donzella is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Leon Bartolucci of 26 East street.

Walter Adams, colored, who claims to reside in Boston, was taken into custody last night by Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray on Hempstead street. The officer was attracted to Adams by the latter's actions when the man declared that a woman with a huge knife was threatening his life. Adams who came to this city from Norwich during the late afternoon, was examined by Acting City Physician Albert Labensky late last night and was committed to the Norwich State hospital for observation.

Mrs. Hannah Gorman of Niantic; Mrs. Mary Gray, Ledyard; Charles Stevens, United States destroyer Cassin, and Mrs. Isabel Joy, Westerly, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

Mrs. Roger Dennis of Colman street, employed as stenographer in the office of City Clerk Julius D. Moran, is having her vacation of two weeks.

Sebastian Muscarella and his wife have decided that they will not live together in the future. They have been married long enough to have a baby eight months old and over this child they are now putting their troubles before the public. They were in court this morning where the wife charged the husband with a breach of peace in having attacked her mother, Rosie Petrini. The "attack" attorney for the young man claimed was in the nature of imagination. He declared that the husband met the mother-in-law with the baby and that Sebastian merely wanted to caress the child. It was represented that the young people had agreed to disagree, and that they would not change their minds in regard to this while the parents of the wife were disposed to set up an attitude that was antagonistic to the husband. It was represented that Sebastian was supporting the child and that he was willing to continue to do that, but he desired the privilege of seeing his baby at intervals. That question was not before the police court and could not come there. Sebastian was charged with a breach of the peace and that was the only question in the court. The prosecutor, after the statements had been made as to the attitude of the wife and husband, was of opinion that they might be reconciled in a period of a few months, so suggested that the case should go over till the 25th of January next. That action was taken.

Ernest Coe, a taximan, was in the police court this morning to answer a charge of reckless operation of his machine and with the running down of John Brennan, an employe of the Crown theatre on the 7th of August. Brennan stepped from the sidewalk from behind other vehicles parked at the curbing and found himself in front of the Coe auto. Before Coe could stop the machine Brennan was struck. He sustained injuries that have kept him a patient at the hospital until this week. He was not ready to go on with the case today because witnesses were not in court. The hearing was postponed for a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Taylor and Mrs. Joseph Keeney have returned to their home in Philadelphia, having spent several days as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Williams of Briggs street.

The condition of Mrs. Annie Fox, 72 Mountain avenue, who has been critically ill with pneumonia, is reported today as being noticeably improved.

The grist for the New London police court was started late this afternoon and as a result two indiscreet men are locked up at the police station and will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning. The men are drunks, both being apprehended on State street by Patrolman Michael Dorsey when the pair were making a nuisance of themselves.

The New London police late this afternoon were requested by the Norwich authorities to be on the alert to apprehend James Smith, a patient at Norwich state hospital, who made his escape from the institution earlier in the day. Smith is described as being about 50, five feet eight inches in height and of dark complexion. When he disappeared, Smith wore a brown suit, white shirt, with a green stripe; brown sweater, black shoes and cap.

The mandamus proceedings in which the city of New London is cited before Judge Allyn L. Brown for appearance tomorrow will go forward notwithstanding the city has withdrawn its opposition to the work of building at 43 Jay street. The purpose of the plaintiff is to get a judgment from the court that will serve as a guide in similar cases in the future.

Half a dozen drunks were taken into custody this evening and will be in court tomorrow. The change in temperature was given by the police as a way of accounting for the sudden appearance of the inebriated individuals for the thermometer showed a drop of about 20 degrees from that of yesterday during the hours of sunshine. It was predicted that the temperature would drop to 50 degrees during the night. The wind was from the north.

KELLOGG DEFRAUDED BANKS IN NEW LONDON AND NORWICH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 22—Sergeant John Cavanaugh, who left New London last Saturday for the purpose of obtaining extradition papers at Hartford and Albany, N. Y., in order that Albert Kellogg, former New London youth may be brought back to this city from Sag Harbor and answer a charge of defrauding the New London City National Bank of $250 will be back in New London tomorrow afternoon. Sergeant Cavanaugh notified Acting Captain James C. Sullivan this afternoon that he was leaving Albany to go to Sag Harbor and would return to New London with Kellogg by steamer at 3.30 tomorrow afternoon.

Besides defrauding the New London bank, Kellogg, who is but 17, also defrauded a bank in Norwich of $250 by a worthless check scheme. Kellogg also stole a motorcycle from a resident in Uncasville and had the cycle in his possession when he was taken into custody by the Sag Harbor authorities.

ROOF AT JOHN K. FORAN'S IS DAMAGED BY FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 22—The residence of John K. Foran, Faire Harbour Place, was discovered to be afire early this evening, about 6.30. A telephone message to the fire headquarters and to the Pequot and Ockford Hose houses brought out the apparatus to subdue the flames. The fire was on the roof and is believed to have been caused by sparks from the chimney of the house, a wood fire having been started in the fire place. A space of about ten feet square was burned in the roof but the damage otherwise was trifling. Only chemicals were used to subdue the flames. The property is insured so that Mr. Foran will not sustain loss.

PACIFIC BOTANICAL GARDEN PLANNED ON OAHU ISLAND

HONOLULU, Sept. 22.—(AP)—The island of Oahu will be made a Pacific botanical garden under plans of the Pacific Biology commission and suggested by Willis T. Pope, horticulturist at the United States Agricultural experiment station.

Numerous sites have been offered where food trees and plants from Pacific lands might be planted and cultivated. Different altitudes, different amounts of moisture and elements of climate are required for various plants and most of these requisites are found on the island. It is possible, however, that the higher slopes of the extinct volcano crate of Mauna Kea, island of Hawaii, also will be utilized for the cultivation of fruit and other food trees from the temperate zones in the Pacific area.

Pope reported that considerable progress has been made since Prince Chandaburi, brother of the king of Siam, planted the first food trees from his country on the Pan-Pacific research institute grounds. Other distinguished visitors also have planted foreign trees of food value on the institution grounds and at various places on Oahu.

Seeds and cuttings of various plants have been received by the commission from every part of the Pacific area and are being cultivated in suitable locations.

It is a wise fool who can keep his lack of wisdom to himself.

TOURISTS FROM MYSTIC COVERED 1,000 MILES

A company of tourists returning from a week's trip through Connecticut, Massachusetts and New York state; the main objective being Niagara Falls, were callers Sunday at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lamb, of Norwich Town.

Those in the party, which covered 1,000 miles, were Dr. Lamb's sister, Mrs. Harriet E. Brainerd, her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Gremley, of Mystic, and Mr. Gremley's mother, Mrs. Charles Gremley, of Greenmanville.

Leaving Sunday morning, Sept. 13, they went by way of Hartford, through Pittsfield to Albany, continuing on to Duanesburg, where they remained that night, having travelled 191 miles the first day. When starting out again Monday morning, the journey was continued through Syracuse, around the beautiful Seneca Lake, to Geneva, remaining there over the second night.

Leaving Geneva, Tuesday morning, the tourists reached Niagara Falls about noon, having passed through Batavia and Buffalo. Much enthusiasm was manifested concerning the beauty and grandeur of the Falls, which were witnessed from both the American and Canadian shores, especially at night, when illuminated with various colored lights. This spectacle is considered one of the world's greatest natural wonders. Tuesday night was spent in the city of Niagara Falls. Wednesday morning explorations began, when the entire party was taken in an elevator down a depth of 180 feet, to the base of the Falls. A visit was also made to the power plant, the world's largest hydro-electric unit, having 70,000 horsepower. Mr. and Mrs. Gremley were included in a party accompanied by a guide, that visited the Cave of the Winds. Before venturing on this thrilling experience, which involved nearly one hour, those who had the courage to endure the journey, were obliged to dress in special costumes from head to foot. All personal clothing was placed in separate lockers, jewelry, money and any kind of valuables were put under lock and key and placed in the safe deposit by those in charge. The several keys were each attached to a cord, every person having his or her key tied around the neck, until the return from the cave, when articles were redeemed, etc.

To visit the Cave of the Winds is called the wonder trip to Niagara. From no other place or point is Niagara's grandeur so well displayed. The trip is thrilling because of the sheer beauty of the scenery unfolded at every step and turn. The start is from the pavilion, a picturesque building set among the unspoiled wildwood of Goat Island. The costumes worn by the visitors are sterilized, protective suits of flannel, outer garments of rubber, and felt shoes. The way is lead by competent guides down the winding Biddle stairway, at the foot of which the roaring cataract tumbles its waters at one's feet. As one passes across sturdy bridges and platforms, built new each season, there are new delights and new thrills almost at every step. Silvered clouds of spray sweeping the paths and sunkissed rainbows forty feet in diameter weaving halos of beauty about the scene. The Cave of the Winds is a cavern 150 feet across, the only natural opening behind the Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Gremley stated that after climbing the long stretch of spiral stairs one is almost breathless yet it was an experience never to be forgotten for the sights disclosed were well worth the strenuous efforts.

Before leaving the city of Niagara, the tourists were pleasantly entertained on a visit to the shredded wheat factory.

Leaving Niagara Falls Wednesday afternoon, the tourists proceeded over the million-dollar highway to Rochester, spending the night there; and the next day motored from Rochester to Utica, remaining there over Thursday night. In leaving Utica Friday morning, going through Schenectady to Pittsfield, the tourists stopped at Canajoharie and were shown over the entire plant of the Beechnut factory. Here as at the shredded wheat plant, conditions were remarkably sanitary, the visitors being shown every conceivable process from the time products were in the crude form, until completed and ready for sale. There are about one thousand employed here, and in the several factories, sixty-three different products are dispensed.

After staying over night in Pittsfield the journey homeward was taken up Saturday morning to a point as far as Springfield, where the afternoon and night were spent, continuing on to Norwich Sunday morning, stopping to call on their relatives, before proceeding to their homes in Mystic. The tourists commented on the excellent roads encountered, also the courtesy shown them on the entire journey, which included a number of theatre parties in some of the larger cities.

While at Niagara Falls, it was learned that Labor day, 1925, was the largest in its history, for tourists flocked there for over the week-end from every state in the United States and Canada. This was also noted in the many thousands of automobile registrations. Over the holiday every hotel, boarding house, even private homes were filled to capacity. People slept in parks on benches, on verandas, even the railroad station was thrown open and in many instances tourists were obliged to sleep in their automobiles.

NEGRO GIRLS SHUN MINISTER HUSBANDS, REPORT ASSERTS

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—(A. P.)—Modern Negro girls do not want ministers for husbands because "the girls would have to give up dancing movies and card parties," and because Negro ministers have much smaller incomes than men of their race in other professions and in business. This is disclosed in a report made public of a survey of theological schools for Negroes made under the direction of the Institute of Social and Religious Research by Dr. Robert L. Kelly and W. A. Daniel.

Negro ministers are not so well educated as men of their race trained for other fields of activity, says the report, and their influence as leaders of their people in this country is waning. While the first efforts of Negro education were especially directed to the training of ministers and the best men in the schools used to go into the ministry, the theological schools are now nearly all of lower status than other schools of higher education for Negroes, with lower entrance and graduation requirements and comparatively small enrollment.

"In most cases," the report adds, "the members of the theological faculty compare much more favorably with the rest of the faculty than do the students in the theological department with the students in other departments." It is further pointed out, the report states, that of all the men graduating from the 52 Negro theological seminaries in the United States last year had gone directly into the ministry, as is usually the case, less than three per cent. of the vacancies could have been filled by men "whose combined literary and theological training would be equivalent to three years above high school."

HASKELL ENROLLMENT 100 PER CENT. AMERICAN

LAWRENCE, Kas., Sept. 22. (AP)—Haskell Institute may set down its claim to honor as "one hundred per cent. American." For only true Americans may enter here.

Largest of the government's Indian schools, already opened for its fall term, Haskell Institute last winter drew 1,040 American Indian girls and boys from nearly eighty tribes. From Key West to Ketchikan they came, and from Yakima to Yonkers.

Twenty-eight states sent quotas of students to Haskell last year. Oklahoma's delegation numbered 333, almost one-third of the student enrollment. Yet her neighbor state to the south, Texas, had but one representative in the student body. Kansas was second in numbers with 104 and South Dakota next with 103. Alaska was represented by a single student of the Eyak tribe.

Outnumbering any single Indian tribe are the Sioux, whose 119 members here came from five middle western states. Cherokees and Potawatomis made up the third largest tribal delegation.

The Chippewas came from the greatest area. They had roved the continent. Then there are Apache and Mojave, Navajo and Papago, Hopi and Piaute from the southwest; Bannock and Nez Perce, Flathead and Shoshone from the northwest; Kickapoo and Sac and Fox, Chippewa and Ottawa, Wyandotte and Winnebago from the middle west, and from Oklahoma and the south come Chickasaw and Choctaw, Creek and Cherokee.

Kilkenny Honors American.

DUBLIN, Sept. 22. (AP)—Kilkenny Corporation has conferred the freedom of the city on Chevalier Patrick Haltigan, reader of the house of representatives at Washington. His father, John Haltigan, was a leader in the Fenian movement and the monument to the latter in St. Patrick's cemetery, Kilkenny, has said Senator De Loughrey, been a shrine of pilgrimage for Kilkenny Nationalists.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BUYS THAMES STREET GROUP OF BUILDINGS

The sale of a group of three adjoining buildings on Thames street has just been made by John A. Moran, real estate broker, who has sold to James O. Mahoney the block of buildings running from the corner of Main and Thames street to the old Rogers machine shop property. The sale was made for David N. and Charles M. Gordon.

Mr. Mahoney has secured a block containing ten stores and eleven apartments, which are comprised in the P. J. O'Connor block, the A. L. Potter block and the former McMahon property, all on the easterly side of the street and running through to the bank of the Yantic river. Together with the real estate, Mr. Mahoney acquires the coal business of the Thames Coal Co., which is located in the property. He makes the purchase for investment purposes and secures the largest block of business property in the west end of Norwich.

Palace Theatre

Sing Sing, the unpopular home on the Hudson of New York crookdom, underwent close scrutiny at the hands of Thomas Meighan and his associates during the filming of the star's "The Man Who Found Himself," an original story by Booth Tarkington, to be shown next week at the Palace theatre.

In "The Man Who Found Himself" Meighan again has the kind of role which first endeared him with motion picture fans—an inmate of the model penal institution at Ossining, N. Y. But this time he is not behind the walls to expiate his own wrongdoing but rather serves in the place of a "respectable" brother whose "flyers" in Wall street with money borrowed from his father's bank result in the firm's going to the wall and becoming criminally liable to the state.

Virginia Valli is the girl in the picture. Meighan breaks jail when he learns that she is going to marry the man directly responsible for his being in prison. It's a scene of real drama when the three of them come together—Meighan returning to prison to give himself up in the belief that even "the only girl in the world" has deserted him.

Subsequent events prove that this is not the case, however, and there's a real smash climax when a couple of Meighan's prison cronies "frame" him.

Broadway Theatre

The big event comes to the Broadway theatre tomorrow. It's big in every way. The B. F. Keith vaudeville scheduled includes The Plantation Creole Revue. It includes fourteen people in one big act, a red hot jazz band, singing and dancing chorus and comedians. Besides this big act there will be four other acts on the same program and Alma Rubens with Frank Mayo in a fine photoplay, The Price She Paid.

As a big surprise, Prize Night will be instituted. A carload of very valuable presents are to be given away, including a number of cash awards, all on Thursday night. Tell your friends about it and be there yourself. Everyone has an equal chance and worth winning. You get full value for your money in the show alone.

Palace Theatre

Novelty—and more novelty—is the demand of the American music public, says Lieut. Com. John Philip Sousa, who this season will make his third-of-a-century tour at the head of his famous band.

Sousa believes that his success as a bandmaster in a considerable degree has been due to the fact that he realized early in his career the American demand for novelty. Two novelties the Sousa public has been trained to expect annually. One is the new Sousa march and the other is the new Sousa numoresque. Since the days when he wrote The Liberty Bell for his first tour, every Sousa season has seen at least one new march, and this year there will be two, The Black Horse Troop, dedicated to the great Cleveland military organization, and The National Game, a baseball march written at the invitation of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of organized baseball. The Sousa humoresque always is a revue of the popular tunes of the day, with one being used as a theme. This season the theme is Follow the Swallow. A year ago it was What Do You Do on Sunday, Mary? and the year before that it was the classic chanson, Mr. Gallagher-Mr. Shean. To these annual novelties this season are added a new suite, Cuba Under Three Flags, which is Sousa's impression of the changing of Cuba's music from Spanish to American to Cuban, and Sousa's American jazz.

One of the Sousa features this season will be the revival of The Liberty Bell March. This march will be played with a set of chimes cast in England and costing more than $10,000. The chimes soloist will be George F. Carey, for several seasons a member of the Sousa organization.

Palace Theatre

Although now recognized among the leading comedians of the screen, Larry Semon, who will be seen Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Palace theatre in a screen version of The Wizard of Oz, the famous fantastic play by L. Frank Baum, started his career as a journalist, little realizing that he was destined to win fame in other fields.

Larry was born of theatrical stock, while his parents were on the road with a show, and he was raised in a thoroughly theatrical atmosphere. In fact, he assisted them in their vaudeville act from the time he was first able to toddle on the stage until he left his parents to enter boarding school.

As his father was adverse to a stage career for young Larry, the now famous comedian received a thorough training in art, for which he had early shown a remarkable aptitude. For several years after the completion of his schooling he earned his livelihood as a newspaper cartoonist. His sport cartoons were published widely throughout the country.

But the lure of the theatre was bred in him and it was not long before he turned his attentions to the screen. Larry had been watching and studying the development of motion pictures, and he had developed several theories of his own about screen drama. His screen debut, though it is not generally known, was as a director, and he continued to produce for some time before he first appeared before the camera.

After a series of productions which he wrote and directed, Larry made his first appearance on the screen in a short comedy. His success was instantaneous, and many similar pictures followed. Later, like so many others, Larry decided to try his hand at longer comedies, and the enthusiastic reception accorded The Girl in the Limousine, his first feature production, convinced him that there was even greater success in store for him in this new field.

In The Wizard of Oz Larry Semon has attempted the most ambitious production of his spectacular career. This play, which will be remembered everywhere as the vehicle which first brought the famous team of Montgomery and Stone to stage fame, is based on the most popular of L. Frank Baum' Oz books, which have been so great a source of amusement to every child.

In producing The Wizard of Oz it was the intention of Chadwick Pictures corporation and Larry Semon to perpetuate the living images of the characters of the Land of Oz that all children have grown to love. In this new picture the Straw Man comes to life just as he has lived for years in the minds of the children of the world. Larry Semon has given body and soul to this great child's myth. Oliver (Babe) Hardy is the Tin Woodman; Charles Murray is the new Wizard; Dorothy Dwan, who recently married the star, plays her first big role, that of Dorothy. Other players who have contributed to this new Wizard of Oz are Braynt Washburn, Mary Carr, Virginia Pearson, Josef Swickard and Otto Lederer.

Coming to the Breed

Clothes, clothes, clothes. The wail of all women be they rich or poor. Windows full of clothes to attract them; advertisements of the most appealing sort to intrigue them because for generations that has been the thing to which they have been most susceptible.

There are women who starve their very souls—for clothes.

There are others who go hungry to satisfy their appetite—for clothes.

A Slave of Fashion is in line with this most feminine of all yearnings. This Hobart Henley production made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is coming to the Breed theatre on Sunday. It is from an original story written by Samuel Shipman, adapted and made into continuity by Beas Meredyth.

Norma Shearer is the star of the production, while Lew Cody is featured. Others important in the cast are Vivia Ogden, Mary Carr, Miss Dupont, James Corrigan and Sidney Bracy.

MARKETS AT A GLANCE
New York

Stocks firm: Rail and moderate priced motor shares lead recovery.

Bonds irregular; new offerings of $77,000,000 readily sold.

Foreign exchanges, easy; sterling declines to $4.84 1-2.

Cotton steady; bullish private crop estimates.

Sugar easy; European selling.

Coffee lower; New Orleans selling.

Chicago

Wheat easy; increasing stocks.

Corn barely steady; larger country offerings.

Cattle steady.

Hogs dull.

MARKET WAS UNSETTLED

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Money rates were again a dominating influence in the price movement in today's stock market, which displayed alternate periods of weakness and strength. Closing quotations were irregular, a long list of motors and public utilities showing net gains of 1 to nearly 3 points with corresponding losses in many of the motor accessories and specialties.

Execution of a large accumulation of over-night selling orders inspired by the rapid marking up of the call money rate late yesterday, gave opening prices a heavy tone. When these were disposed of the market began to rally but turned heavy again when the renewal rate on call money was raised to 5 1-4 per cent, the highest in nearly two years. The subsequent lowering of the rate to five per cent started another rally, which was still under way when the market closed. More significance was attached by bankers to the stiffening of time money rates and the fact that call loans against acceptances were moved up full one per cent from 3 3-4 to 4 3-4.

About one-third of the day's total business took place in the motor and accessory stocks, whose combined sales exceeded 600,000 shares, of which slightly less than half was in three issues—Studebaker, Hupp and Willys-Overland common—all of which attained new peak prices for the year. Talk of special dividend distributions accompanied the rise in some of these stocks.

Steel shares moved within rather narrow and irregular limits, although trade advices were generally cheerful. United States Steel common closed 5-8 lower at 122 1-4 after having sold a point above that figure. Bethlehem, Gulf States and Republic steels were heavy but a sudden revival of activity in United Alloy sent that stock up more than a point to 31 3-8, which price was later shaded on realizing.

Weakness again cropped out in some of the high priced industrials.

General Electric broke seven points to 311 and American Can nad General Baking showed net losses of 3 1-4 and 4 1-2 points, respectively. Sugars turned heavy on the announcement that the raw product had sold in the New York market at the lowest price since 1922. Reduction in the New York Airbrake dividend sent that stock down from 41 to 36 5-8, a new low, despite the fact that such action had freely been predicted within the last last week.

Bullish operations were successfully conducted in a number of specialities Remington typewriter soaring over eight points to a new high record at 91 1-2 on publication of a favorable earnings report. Other outstanding strong spots included American tobacco "B", Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies, Childs company, Detroit Edison, Fleischmann, Mackay preferred and Underwood typewriter, all up two points or more.

Trading in the rails slowed down, pending the publication of additional August earnings reports, but Southern railway and Atlantic Coast line developed independent strength.

Call money opened at 5 1-4 per cent, the highest renewal rate since January 3, 1924, but dropped also to 5 per cent in the afternoon closing at the low figure. Time money stiffened slightly with rates quoted at 4 1-2 to 4 3-4 per cent. instead of 4 1-4 to 4 3-4, commercial rates were unchanged.

Reactionary tendencies prevailed in the foreign exchange market. Demand sterling ruled around $4.84 1-8, or below the generally accepted "gold point." French francs held firm around 4.73 1-2 cents but the Belgian, Italian, Dutch and Norwegian currencies lost ground. Polish Zlotis broke eighty points to 16.70 cents.

NORWICH, CONN., WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 23, 1925

FULL ASSOCIATED PRESS DESPATCHES

The Bulletin.

Norwich, Wednesday, Sept. 23, 1925

THE WEATHER.

Conditions.

The northeastern disturbance remains practically stationary north of New Foundland.

During the last 24 hours it has become cooler over the middle and north Atlantic States.

The outlook is for showers on Thursday in New England. It will continue cool on Wednesday in middle and northern districts and temperatures will rise somewhat on Thursday in the interior of the middle and north Atlantic states.

Winds.

North of Sandy Hook: Fresh northwest and west, weather partly overcast Wednesday.

Sandy Hook to Hatteras: Fresh north and northeast weather partly overcast with occasional showers over south portion Wednesday.

Forecast.

For southern New England: Partly cloudy Wednesday, followed by showers Wednesday night and on Thursday; warmer in the interior Thursday.

Observations.

The Bulletin's observations show the following changes in temperature and barometric changes Tuesday:

	Ther.	Bar.
7 a. m.	46	30.20
12 m.	54	30.20
6 p. m.	56	30.20

Highest 54, lowest 46.

Comparisons.

Predictions for Tuesday: Partly cloudy.

Tuesday's weather: Fair, followed by cloudy, cooler; north to northwest wind.

GREENEVILLE

The Ladies' Aid of the Third Baptist church met with Mrs. James Spicer of Prospect street last Friday evening with a large attendance. This was the first meeting of the fall season, and plans were discussed for the winter's work. It was decided to hold a Christmas sale, with a supper early in December and a food sale in the near future. The treasurer's report showed a substantial sum in the treasury and for the past few years the Ladies' Aid has furnished the fuel for the church. A social time was enjoyed with selections on the victrola and refreshments were served by Mrs. Spicer assisted by Mrs. Herbert Peckham.

The World Wide Guild of the Third Baptist church met with Miss Dorothy Conklin, of Central avenue on Friday. The leader, Mrs. Henry Sebastian was in charge of the meeting and after the devotional exercises and business a social time was enjoyed. The Guild is planning to hold a harvest supper soon.

The community workers of Greeneville, held their first meeting of the season with Mrs. John McNeely of Boswell avenue recently. Election of officers was held which resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Charles F. Sears; vice president, Mrs. George A. Howard; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. John McNeely; work supervisor, Miss Nellie Hayes.

Plans were discussed for the fall and winter work as already the workers have five quilts to tie. Reports were given by the various committees which proved that the workers, though not so large in numbers are very much alive and are still planning to go forward, under the leadership of their efficient president. Several extra meetings will be held especially for work and the regular meetings will be held as usual, the second Thursday in the month. After the business session a social time was enjoyed and dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. McNeely assisted by Mrs. Frank Quinley.

The United Workers of Norwich are putting on their regular annual canvass of the city for money and clothing and it is hoped that Greeneville will respond very generously, especially at this time when they have started on the new building for the Sheltering Arms Home. They also have many calls for the sick and needy of the city and always help irrespective of creed, color or race.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Howard entertained Rev. Chester Persing of the Gale Divinity school over the week end. Mr. Persnig occupied the pulpit of the Third Baptist church on Sunday and will again supply the church on Sunday, October 4. Next Sunday will be observed as Layman's Sunday and the morning service will be conducted by a number of laymen from the Central Baptist church. The evening service and C. E. will be omitted as the church is uniting with some other churches of the city in a union service at the Central Baptist church.

TAFTVILLE

Miss Mildred Kloss of Lorenzo street is spending two weeks with friends in Worcester, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Mather and their daughter Miss Mabel Mather of North A street and William Shea of Occum Road have been recent visitors at Diamond Hill near Woonsocket, R. I.

The carnival being given under the auspices of the Taftville Athletic Association on the Providence street baseball grounds, drew a large crowd Tuesday evening. The ferris wheel and merry-go-round were great attractions for the youngsters of the village, and the booths all did a good business.

Etienne Racine of South B street has resigned his position with the Ponemah company.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Newsham are moving from Terrace avenue to a house on Norwich avenue.

DESERTED WIFE FILES SUIT FOR DIVORCE

On the grounds that her husband, James A. Stewart, now of parts unknown, deserted her on Sept. 1, 1921, Marie Kleninger Stewart, of New London, has brought suit for divorce from him in the superior court. They were married Aug. 21, 1915. She asks to have her name changed to Marie Kleninger.

The suit was filed Tuesday with the clerk of the court and is returnable in October.

A man's past is the best prophet of his future.

PRODUCTS OF FIELD AND FARM AT NORTH STONINGTON GRANGE FAIR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NORTH STONINGTON, Sept. 23.—The 15th annual fair of North Stonington Grange, Inc., opened today at the local fairgrounds with an attendance of several hundred. The fair officials put in a busy morning and afternoon receiving and taking care of the placing of the numerous exhibits. The exhibits at this year's fair, with the exception of the cattle show, eclipses all other years. In some departments the exhibits are so numerous that there is hardly room enough to accomodate them. This is true as regards the poultry show which is unusually large. Two buildings are completely filled with poultry, water fowl, dogs, puppies, rabbits and cats and kittens and it was found necessary to place over 125 pens of poultry and geese on the grounds between the two buildings.

Asked whether U. S. Senator Hiram Bingham will be here tomorrow to deliver an address in the afternoon, Secretary John B. Perry said this afternoon that up to that time he had received no notification from Senator Bingham cancelling his engagement to speak here and that as far as he knows Senator Bingham will be on hand for the fair. Senator Bingham was in Washington today, as he is a member of the Shenandoah catastrophe board of inquiry and it is not definitely known whether he will be able to be here for the fair.

Tomorrow, the middle day of the fair, is expected to bring forth a large attendance. The middle day of the Grange fair is always the best day as far as the attendance goes. As a matter of fact any one interested in the usual fair exhibits is well repaid by a visit to the grounds any one of the three days.

Tomorrow afternoon there will be a band concert and the band will also provide a concert Thursday afternoon, the closing day. That the people of North Stonington believe in and support their annual fair is very apparent from the numerous entries and high quality of the splendid exhibits on display.

Exhibition Hall Filled.

As usual the main exhibition hall is filled with interesting exhibits. Just inside the main entrance is an interesting exhibit of radios, target pistols and general sporting goods, shown by O. H. Sandford, of Mystic. Mr. Sandford is also showing Crosley radios and radio supplies. Inside the hall itself, and just to the left of the main entrance, G. W. Sanders, of Westerly, is showing Radiolas, radio supplies and batteries.

The first floor of the exhibition building is devoted to exhibits of sweet grass baskets, plain and colored, fruit, flowers and canned vegetables and fruits. The fruit exhibit is as good, if not better than any in previous years. Grapes, pears, apples, late raspberries, etc., are shown in wide variety. In the flower show are many varieties of fall flowers, wild and cultivated, and also a number of beautiful potted plants. Among the dahlia exhibitors is Mrs. R. W. Gallup, of Sunnyside, Norwich. Mrs. Gallup is showing some half hundred of her choice and outstanding dahlias. Her exhibit occupies an entire table.

The two large center tables are as usual devoted to home-cooked cakes pies and doughnuts and also several hundred jars of canned vegetables, fruits and jellies. On the second floor is the fancy work show. Here are shown a number of beautiful examples of needle work, rag mats, table covers, handsome scarfs, quilts and center pieces.

Large Antique Show.

There are some 400 entries in the antique show. It is surprising how many real and valuable antiques can be found in the homes in North Stonington and surrounding villages. There are old time clocks, doll cradles, ancient chairs, an unique doll bed, an old foot stool, bed quilts and spreads used in the long ago and pictures. Many of the antiques shown date back to colonial days.

On this floor is also shown a model of the lifeboat "Petrel," built probably in 1821 by Christopher Gale, of Whitby, Yorkshire. There is also a large model of a sailing yacht, complete in every detail. Pictures, one in a beautiful hand-carved frame, and a mounted fox, add to the attractiveness of the exhibits on the second floor.

The large vegetable building is also overcrowded. Here are shown cherry tomatoes, strawberry tomatoes, large cucumbers, egg plants, huge pumpkins and squashes, an Italian pumpkin, nearly four feet long, corn on the stalk and in fact all varieties of vegetables grown on local farms. The long center table is loaded down with vegetables of all description and an extra table has been provided to care for the overflow. This building is well worth a visit.

Poultry Show Largest Ever.

The poultry show is the largest ever. It has been indeed difficult to find accommodations for the many hundreds of birds entered. Both poultry houses are full to overflowing and over 125 pens had to be placed on the grounds between the two buildings. There are over 1,000 birds on exhibition. Mrs. Howe, of Rome, N. Y., has 500 birds entered and Gerish and Gerish, of New Haven, have 100 birds entered. These are the two largest exhibitors and they are showing a wide variety of hens, roosters, bantams and water fowl. Another large out-of-town exhibitor is Leon Fowler, of New Haven, showing 50 birds. There is also a large exhibit from Massachusetts.

The midway this year is more attractive than ever. Teddy Blake is the chef at the dining hall and the dining hall assistants are Mrs. Ellsworth Gray, Mrs. Emil Gladfelder and Mrs. John Geer. Today Teddy served a delicious oyster stew and tomorrow he will have one of his famous clam chowders on the menu.

The grange's soft drink stand is being operated by William Richmond, who is serving his Pleasant Hill Dairy ice cream and Otto Nielson, and Eli King who are dispensing soft drinks from King's Bottling Works, Westerly.

The hot dog and coffee stand is in charge of Miss Lila Thompson. Mrs. Mabel White, and Miss Sarah Thompson and the hot dogs and coffee are prepared by Mrs. Lizzie Simmons and Mrs. Ada Doblin who hold forth in the kitchen.

There are blanket booths, doll and kitchenware booths, a shooting gallery, etc., along the Midway. Pattison of Norwich as usual has a candy booth near the main exhibition hall where Norwich made candies are on sale.

The Van Kerr Sales Company have a space on the midway where they are demonstrating the Van Kerr transformers, an attachment for automobiles and Flynn Sons, of Mystic are showing the new 1926 improved model of the Ford touring car and also several styles of Ford motor trucks along with a Fordson tractor. Perrin of Ashaway has a space on the midway where heaters, etc., are shown and explained to the patrons of the fair.

The officers and directors of the grange and the fair officials are as follows:

President, Ellsworth Gray; vice president, C. A. Davis; secretary, John B. Perry, treasurer, Clifford B. Thompson; directors, Ellsworth Gray, Clarence A. Davis, Clifford B. Thompson, J. D. Avery, I. R. Main, J. Bard Hill and John B. Perry; superintendent of grounds and rentals, Ellsworth C. Gray; superintendent of cattle exhibits, Irving R. Main; superintendent of horses and ponies, Charles Hillard; superintendent of sheep and swine, Walter Thorpe; poultry superintendent, Frank W. White; superintendent of pet exhibit, Frank W. White; butter, bread, cake, canned goods, Mrs. Irving Eccleston; vegetables, fruit, grain, Elmer E. Coon; flowers, Alice F. Gray; domestic arts and fine arts, Edna Cook; school exhibit, Clarence A. Davis; antiques, Hattie Chapman.

Thursday will be children's day at the fair when all children under 12 years will be admitted to the grounds free.

JUDGE MALTBIE DESSENTS FROM SCHLEIFER OPINION

A dissenting opinion by Associate Justice William A. Maltbie of the supreme court filed in superior court takes issue with the other members of the court which in its decision ordered a new trial for Ernest Schleifer, railroad union organizer at the time of the strike of the shopmen on the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad who had been convicted of inciting to violence in the strike and had been given a three to five year prison sentence.

A case against Schleifer is on the docket of the superior court for this county where he is charged with sabotage.

Judge Maltbie in his opinion declared that "Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence is not designed to do justice to each individual accused and arraigned before the court, but the end sought has been the establishment of orderly procedure by the formulation of rules, rules which will do justice in the majority of cases, but which must be applied even though injustice may now and then result."

Judge Maltbie also takes issue with the majority opinion on the points of law which the court said warranted a new trial for the accused. He said in part: "A 'fair trial' to the accused does not require that every possible protection shall be thrown about him but over against his right must be set the right of society to protect itself against crime and social disorder."

Judge Maltbie says that the waste of time, effort and money which the new trial entails warrants a careful weighing of the claims made to determine whether the finding of the high court majority was sound in fact and sufficient in law.

RECEIVER NAMED FOR NEW LONDON GREENHOUSES

George A. Gorton, of New London, has been appointed temporary receiver of the New London Greenhouses and Nurseries, Inc., upon the application of Amelia K. Gagnon, of New London, holder of 90 shares of the capital stock of the company. She alleges in her suit, which is returnable in the superior court in October, that the defendant company is solvent, but its assets are in danger of waste through attachment and litigation.

The appointment of the receiver is made for one month and he is directed to conduct the business during that time. A hearing on the confirmation of the receiver and for the appointment of two appraisers is to be held at 10 a. m., Oct. 3, in the superior court at New London, according to the order made by Judge Allyn L. Brown who appointed the receiver on Monday.

The defendant corporation has an authorized capital stock of $50,000, divided into 500 shares of common stock, par value $100, of which 222 shares have been issued.

The receiver has filed a bond for $5,000 with John C. Geary as surety.

MOOSUP GIRL BRIDESMAID AT KING-FOX WEDDING

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Helen Dorcas King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wesley King, of Springfield, Mass., formerly instructor at Williams Memorial institute, New Haven, and George Marshall Fox, also of Springfield, Saturday, October 10, at Faith Congregational church in Springfield. Miss Irene Nightingale of Moosup, who is an instructor of history at the institute, is to be a bridesmaid.

Following the ceremony there will be a reception at Faith church parish house.

Miss King is a graduate of Wellesley and has been an instructor of German at the New London high school for two years. She resigned last June.

NOTABLE SPEAKERS FOR MISSIONARY MEETING HERE

At the coming meeting of the Home Missionary Union of Connecticut for the eastern district to be held in Park Congregational church, on Thursday, October 8th, Dr. George W. Hinman of San Francisco, secretary of the American Missionary association for the Pacific Coast, will give an address on "Pacific Coast Missions as a Factor in International Friendship."

There will also be speakers from the southern and southwestern states and Porto Rico.

A large number of Congregational women from eastern Connecticut are planning to attend this meeting, which promises to be one of unusual interest.

UNCASVILLE GRANDSON IS BENEFICIARY UNDER WILL

The will of Charles Northam Lee of New York and Farmington, Conn., who died at Springlake, N. J., August 30, on file for probate in New York, directs his fortune, in realty and personalty, after all debts are paid, to be divided as follows:

Annie L. Lee, widow, of No. 471 Park avenue, New York, $100,000 outright and a life interest, or until she remarries, in the residue.

Upon her death or remarriage the principal is to be divided among Dorothy Griggs Murray of Garden City, L. I., Maitland Lee Griggs of Ardsley-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., Lee Johnson of Uncasville, Conn., Carol Lee Bertuccelle of Canterbury, England, grandchildren, and Mary Lindsay Murray and Carol Lee Murray, both of Garden City, L. I., great-grandchildren.

Carolyn Cowles Griggs of No. 55 East Seventy-second street, New York and Grace Lee Johnson of Canterbury, England, daughters of the testator, receive each $10,000 and the grandchildren and great-grandchildren each $5,000.

As yet no date has been set for the proving of the document, which names the widow and the Hartford-Connecticut Trust company as the executors of the estate, estimated at over $1,000,000 in realty and personalty.

Just how large an estate he left will not be known until the property is appraised for inheritance taxation.

RALLY SOCIAL PLANNED FOR CENTRAL BAPTIST

A great rally social for the members of the Central Baptist church and Sunday school is planned for Friday of this week. "The Bostonians" who proved such a hit at the Mohegan Park Sunday school picnic in June 1924 will furnish entertainment. This trio consists of Janet Hersey, called the "Sunshine Girl," Grace Deeran, violinist, and Retta Wilson, pianist.

As a part of the evening's program the new junior department rooms in the parish house will be open for inspection.

Rally day for both the church and Sunday school occurs on Sunday. Special features in connection with the Sunday program will be announced on Friday evening.

In the evening Sunday there will be a union mass meeting at which Mrs. F. Wayland Ayer and Mrs. Elizabeth M. Finn will be the speakers. Both Mrs. Ayer and Mrs. Finn are on the faculty for the training institute which begins Monday evening under the auspices of the Norwich Council of religious education, the Connecticut Baptist convention and the American Baptist publication society.

Beginning on Sunday all the services will be on standard time.

APPOINTMENT IS GIVEN TO MISS IRMA HUTZLER

As successor to Miss Marjorie J. Crosby of Hartford, resigned, Miss Irma Hutzler of this city has been appointed district supervisor of the Norwich district of the state bureau of child welfare. The appointment has been made by Commissioner Charles E. Dow. Miss Hutzler is a graduate of the Norwich Free Academy and of Connecticut college, class of 1919, and for some time has been field agent for the bureau. Miss Crosby, who has been with the bureau for about three years is to enter the medical department of the University of New York, to study in order to qualify as a psychiatrist.

TO CONTINUE TEMPORARILY AS ACTING PASTOR

Rev. P. S. Collins, formerly of the Bozrah Baptist church presented his resignation to the East Lyme Baptist church on Sept. 6th. At a business meeting one week later the church voted to ask the pastor to withdraw his resignation and remain with an advance in salary. Mr. Collins could not see his way clear to accept this proposal, but has arranged to continue as acting pastor for a limited time.

Owing to throat trouble, Mr. Collins will not accept a pastorate at present.

Were Schoolmates of Dr. Bucklyn

Norwich friends of Dr. John K. Bucklyn, of Mystic, learned of his recent death with sorrow. Among those who attended Mystic Valley Institute which was conducted by Dr. Bucklyn's father Professor John K. Bucklyn were—Ralph W. Gallup of Stonington Road, Frank Brewster, of Cliff St., Norwich, and Dr. Charles H. Lamb of Norwich Town. They were in the school when J. K. Bucklyn Jr., was a student there.

DAHLIAS AT STORRS' NOW AT THEIR BEST

(Special to the Bulletin)

STORRS, Conn, Sept. 22.—Flower lovers and dahlia enthusiasts in particular, will find a visit to the trial gardens of the American Dahlia society at the Connecticut Agricultural college well worth their while. Roland H. Patch, assistant professor of horticulture of Storrs, who is in charge of the trial gardens at Storrs, has stated that the dahlias are at their best now, and that visitors to the college have the opportunity of seeing a bed of dahlias that has features unequalled by any other dahlia garden in the country.

At present there are 127 different kinds of dahlias in bloom at Storrs, all of them new varieties that have been sent from all parts of the country. The idea behind the trial gardens has been explained by Mr. Patch is to keep the list of varieties down, which is accomplished by having new seedlings tested at Storrs to determine if they possess real merit.

Dahlia growers who develop new varieties raised from seed and grown for two years, may send them to the trial garden on the payment of a small fee. The college grows the plants in a natural way, all receiving exactly the same cultural methods and treatment. On each supporting stake is placed the name and address of the grower who produced the plant, and notes are taken by the college men throughout the growing season. These include a color description, height of plant, health of plant, length of stem, diameter of bloom, depth of bloom, and other points of value.

A committee of the American Dahlia society scores the dahlias once they have reached maturity, using the society score card. Varieties scored ing eighty-five points, either as exhibition, commercial varieties, or both, receive the society's certificate of merit, which enables the buying public to discriminate between good and poor dahlias in purchasing bulbs. At the end of the season the tubers are dug and returned to their owners. Reports of this work are published by the American Dahlia society in January, and it serves as a clearing house of dahlia information for the new varieties on the market.

Dahlias already have been scored by the following expert flower judges: George W. Fraser, of Willimantic; William B. Sweeney, also of Willimantic; A. W. Davidson and William J. Rathgeber, both of New Haven; C. Louis Alling of West Haven; J. L. Robertson, Forestville, and Lester B. Linsley, New Haven.

The best Connecticut dahlias are "September Morn," entered by William B. Simon of New Canaan; seedling No. 25, "Seal of Connecticut," entered by C. Louis Alling of West Haven.

States from which dahlias have been received for trial this year are: Connecticut, West Virginia, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, California, Ohio, New York, Massachusetts and Tennessee.

THEFTS OF FRUIT ON WAUWECUS HILL

Fruit thieves are active in the orchards about the Wauwecus Hill section of the town. Mrs. William Casey of Wauwecus Hill has reported to the police that thefts have been committed on her property. She blames her neighbors for the thefts claiming that several of them have visited her property and carted away fruit. She claims she caught one of the neighbors trying to cart away a sack of apples. Mrs. Casey has also notified the state police of the thefts.

WIFE SEEKS DIVORCE ON DESERTION GROUNDS

Lillian Hyde Chamberlain, of New London, has brought suit in the superior court for divorce from Philip J. Chamberlain whom she married Oct. 18, 1926. She alleges that he deserted her Sept. 5, 1922, and that he is now of parts unknown. She asks for change of name to Lillian Hyde. The suit is returnable in court in October.

NORWICH TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Haun and sons Walter and John Haun and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pieretti and son Melvin, of Town street, motored to Springfield Sunday and attended the Eastern States Exposition on the Fair grounds.

Walter Haun and Melvin Pieretti members of Troop No. 20, Boy Scouts of Norwich Town, were especially interested in the Scouts' exhibition. While there they met Harry Jordan, scouts Maine guide, who made inquiries about Scout Executive Frederick A. Benton of Norwich, also Victor Davis, the latter scout master of Taftville Troop, Boy Scouts, No. 3.

During the summer, Mr. Jordan paid visits to various scout camps, including Norwich Council, Boy Scouts at Beach Pond and it was at the last mentioned place that, for the past two summers the Norwich Town boys have been associated with Mr. Jordan, having first met him in 1924.

An invitation was extended the boys to again visit the exposition at Springfield, the latter part of this week, and render assistance in scout work.

In the absence of Clyde M. Beebe who was confined to the house because of illness, the religious service at Scotland Road hall, Sunday afternoon, under the auspices of Scotland Road Christian Endeavor society, was conducted by Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, pastor of the First Congregational church. "Moses as Leader and Organizer" was the theme of Rev. Mr. Bailey's address.

In his sermon at the Sunday morning worship at the First Congregational church, Rev. Mr Bailey preached on "The Education of Our Youth," with special reference to the new church at Storrs.

There was a delegation of fifteen or more from the Christian Endeavor society of Jewett City Congregational church in attendance at the Sunday evening service of the Norwich Town Congregational Young People's C. E. society. The meeting was in charge of Miss Elizabeth Avery. The topic was "Getting Strength from God". Scripture references were found in II Corinthians and Philippians.

An interesting part of the meeting was the debate on the question—Resolved: That Spiritual Strength is of More Value in Producing Happiness on Earth, Than Physical Strength. Ralph H. Marsh ably upheld the affirmative and Irving E. Manning the negative side.

The Congregational mid-week service for conference and prayer, Thursday evening, will have for its theme, the Duty of Church Attendance. Ps. 122. (Church Rally Day). Last Thursday evening the topic assigned was into Our Highways and Byways. Matthew 22:1-14.

The Norwich Town Men's League is making preparations for a mock trial, or the Abduction of Daisy White, to be held in the chapel. The participants held a rehearsal at the parsonage on Elm avenue, Tuesday evening.

The trustees of the First Congregational church, met in conference on Monday evening at the home of Lucius Fenton on Elm avenue. Besides Mr. Fenton, the other trustees are Herbert L. Yerrington, chairman, Frederick Ross and Dwight W. Avery, clerk. Frank S. Avery, treasurer, with the minister, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, ex-officio.

At the First Methodist Episcopal church, the pastor, Rev. James E. Aldrich preached Sunday morning from the first verse of the 103rd Psalm. Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, Bless His Holy name.

Adelbert Rudd, was leader of the Young People's Christian Endeavor service in the evening, when the topic assigned was "Getting Strength From God." II Cor. 12:6-10, Phil. 4:11-13.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Ward of Springfield, Mass., were guests over the week end at the home of Mrs. William H. Tague, of McClellan avenue. Mrs. Tague returned with Mr. and Mrs. Ward, to be their guest for a week, and while in Springfield, will attend the Eastern States Exposition.

POETRY

I FEEL GOOD IN THE FALLTIME.

I feel good in the falltime,
For nature looks so grand;
The goldenrod is noddin'
An' I can understand
It's meant for friendly greetin'—
While leaves of red an' gold
For an old-time country fellow
A message seems to hold.

Across the fields of stubble
The whis'lin' of the quail
Appears somehow to cheer me
An' trouble to assail.
There's music in the whisper
Of winds through dead cornstalks
An' a rabbit seems to challenge
A race when on my walks.

I feel good in the falltime—
Though highbrow poets say
It's a melancholy season,
It always makes me gay.
With visions of a shindig
And an old-time fiddler's tune
An' happy young folks' laughter—
Beneath a harvest moon.
—F. L. A. in the Florida Times-Union.

A YEOMAN.

This man that at the wheatstack side
Sits drinking of the twilight air,
This man's my friend, in him's supplied
My refuge from the traps of care.

His life now past meridian mark
One can but say is blossoming yet,
His summer day smiles back the dark,
His sun seems nearer rise than set.

In lusty youth, when surging blood
With foam and din between meet,
Leanderlike he rode the flood
And strongly came to manhood's coast.

Since, with a sturdy steady tread
He sowed and stored himself good grain,
And glowing yet he bows his head
With plow and scythe across the plain.

And like the North Star established true
He cheers and guides my aiming eye,
To see him at his door anew
Is like a sign shown in the sky.

With all his calm he's eager still,
New dreams in his old vision thrive,
He seizes chance on dale and hill
And all his life has been alive.
—Edmund Mundea.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Sheba: I just love music.

Sheik: So do I—maybe we're related.—University of Illinois Siren.

He (during quarrel): I believe that your sole reason for marrying me was my money.

She (sweetly): Well, dear, what else had you?—Boston Transcript.

Auto Demonstrator (who has been trying for three hours to sell the car). Now I will throw in the clutch.

Uncle Eben: I'll take her then. I knew if I held off long enough you'd give me something to boot, b'gosh!—Exchange.

Tourist: I suppose this rain will do the crops a lot of good?

Farmer: Ye're right, sir. An hour of it will do more good in five minutes than a month of it would do in a week at any other time!—Boys' Life.

Wife: I hear that Mrs. De Kolta is going to Paris for her gowns.

Hub: Judging from her appearance the last time I saw her, she must have left her clothes somewhere.—Boston Transcript.

You took all shot, Ned. Didn't you sleep well?

No! my roommate and I suffer from alternate insomnia!

Alternate insomnia? What's that?

Why, whichever one of us gets to sleep first keeps the other awake.—Brown Jug.

Irish Traffic Officer (to speeder): Have you a permit for driving an auto?

Speeder: Sure! I've got it here in my pocket.

Officer: That's all right! If ye've got it, I don't need to look at it. If ye didn't have one, I'd have to see it.—University of Iowa Frivol.

Mrs. At Falls: I do wish, Al, that you would not go to town again wearing those old socks that are not mates.

Al: Why not, mother? They're terrible comfortable.

Mrs. Al: Yes, but just suppose you should be killed in an auto accident and taken to the hospital, and the doctors and nurses and everybody would see your socks weren't mates! Think of how mortified I would be!—Exchange.

KALEIDOSCOPE

Evolution in dress from time of ancient Egypt to 1925 was recently shown in a style show of the home economics department of Forest Park High School, Baltimore. Costumes were copied from famous paintings and historical books in order that the 25 period costumes exhibited might be accurate.

Seventy-six per cent. of all men students and 38 per cent. of all women students at the University of Nebraska are wholly or partially self-supporting. Exclusive of the College of Law, the average expenditure per, students for the 9 months is shown by a recent survey to be $714.66 for the men, and $720.85 for the women.

A French, German, or Spanish luncheon is served each week in the model apartment of the domestic science building of the Pasadena (Calif.) Junior College, under the leadership of the teachers, for pupils studying those languages. The idea is carried out in the menu and table decorations, and as far as possible the language of the country is spoken.

A special course for junior high school instructors and administrators was a feature of the 1925 summer session of the University of Rochester, New York state furnished the major part of the students for the six-weeks intensive course, and 16 states were represented in the enrollment of 40%. In connection with this course a "laboratory" junior high school was maintained in which 550 children registered.

More than 18,000 readers have enrolled in one or more of the 20 reading courses offered by the department of the interior, bureau of education. In many states groups of parents, usually members of parent-teacher associations, have organized circles for reading and study. Many circles use courses on the pre-school child prepared by specialists in child care and training and furnished by the bureau.

Rural sociology, rural life and education, the rural school and community—in all, 124 courses in rural education—are offered in 77 universities and colleges in the United States. These courses are planned for administrators and supervisors of rural schools as well as for teachers. Rural Scnoo. Leaflet No. 37 of the department of the interior, bureau of education, lists the institutions and describes the courses.

Enrollment in universities and colleges of England, Scotland and Wales of full-time students is 56.9 per cent greater than before the war. The gain has been made in spite of an increase in fees and personal expense and in the face of financial distress among the classes from which two of the university students are drawn. The demand in Great Britain for university education continues to grow in volume and intensity.

ADVICE OF THE SHENANDOAH COMMANDER DISREGARDED

Fact Disclosed in Confidential Records Submitted to the Naval Court of Inquiry by Captain Steele, Commandmant of the Lakehurst Naval Air Station—Commander Lansdowne's Recommendation That the Western Flight be Deferred Until the Second Week in September Was Overruled by the Bureau of Operations—Lansdowne Had Suggested Landing Facilities at Several Places.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 23. (AP) —Disapproving a recommendation of the now dead commanding officer, Lieutenant Commander Zachary Lansdowne, that the western flight of the dirship Shenandoah be deferred until the second week in September, the navy department ordered that the craft leave Lakehurst on Sept. 2 to visit state fairs at Columbus, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Milwaukee and Detroit.

This is disclosed by confidential records of the department read today before the naval court of inquiry sitting here by Captain George W. Steele, Jr., commandant of the Lakehurst naval air station.

In his letter objecting to the earlier date for beginning the fatal flight, Commander Lansdowne made no mention of probable unfavorable weather conditions; predicating his recommendation solely on the ground of the limited time for his preparations for receiving, refueling and regassing the Shenandoah at Scott Field, Illinois, and Detroit.

It was developed, however, by Captain Paul Foley, judge advocate, that the department letter failing to approve the recommendation was written only after it had definite information that the receiving mast for the ship at Detroit had been completed and tested. At the time Commander Lansdowne made his recommendation the mast was incomplete.

Questioned by the court, Captain Steele said he had observed on the weather chart forecast just before the Shenandoah sailed no disturbance which in his judgment the airship could not pass or avoid. There was no inquiry as to whether the storm in which the Shenandoah was wrecked with the loss of 14 of her crew was charted.

Under long cross examination, Captain Steele said there had been frequent inspections of all the materials in the Shenandoah and that there had come to his knowledge no information as to her condition which might have led him to disapprove of her departure for the west.

Paying his tribute to the dead commander, Captain Steele said Mr. Lansdowne was "a very capable and careful handler of airships" and expressed the belief that he had handled situations with the Shenandoah "in no way different from the very best Zeppelin practice."

As a preliminary to the examination of Captain Steele the court developed for the record that Commander Lansdowne was charged with complete responsibility for the ship at all times. The main purpose of this line of examination is to fix where blame for the loss of the ship if any there be, is to lie.

The sheaf of confidential documents which Captain Steele laid before the court disclosed an almost ever recurring difference of opinion between the bureau of operations and Commander Lansdowne regarding the western flight in which the great ship came to her end.

As early as last June Commander Lansdowne outlined in a letter the difficulties attending a western flight and suggesting landing facilities at several places. This letter was forwarded to Admiral E. W. Eberle, chief of operations, who replied:

"It is not the policy of the department to erect mooring masts at various points selected for refueling on a cruise of this nature. If the limitations and apprehensions outlined in this letter are sound, it would appear that our airships are of little military or commercial value, and that the great cost of their upkeep and repair would not be warranted. However, the chief of naval operations is not ready to concur in these opinions and believes that these ships can be operated safely with the exercise of care and judgment within the discretion of the commanding officer and within reasonable limit of time."

The first proposal was that the flight be made in July, but the department deferred to the opinion of Commander Lansdowne that the voyage should be postponed until September when the period of violent thunderstorms over the middle west would be ended.

The idea of the Shenandoah visiting the state fairs was advanced and it was then that Commander Lansdowne was directed to make a new itinerary for the voyage westward so as to include these fairs during the first and second weeks in September.

Under date of Aug. 4 Commander Lansdowne wrote that it would be impracticable to cover all points holding fairs during the fair week of each and the second week in September is recommended on account of the limited time for preparations (for receiving the Shenandoah) at Scott Field and Detroit."

This recommendation was disapproved in a letter from the chief of naval operations on Aug. 12.

Commander Lansdowne previously had recommended that the Shenandoah make a trial flight to Detroit to test the mooring mast erected there by Henry Ford because the mast differed in design from the standard navy mast. After the department wrote that the necessity for such a flight was not apparent, Commander Lansdowne did not insist that the Shenandoah make a test trip.

There appeared to have been some subsequent disagreement between the department and Commander Lansdowne about details of the trip.

On Aug. 26 Admiral Eberle sent this telegram to Lansdowne:

"Shenandoah carry out itinerary as previously directed, arriving at Des Moines by 4 p. m., Sept. 4, if possible. Make flight from Detroit over following Michigan cities, Flint, Bay City, Saginaw, Owosso, and Lansing conditions permit."

After receiving these documents and concluding the examination of Captain Steele the court went into closed session to digest the testimony thus questioning of the witnesses, including more than a score of survivors, who have appeared during the three days of the hearing.

Tomorrow the court will examine parts of the wreckage of the Shenandoah returned here from Ohio before samples of testing as to its exact conditions. It may be that these tests can throw some light on what caused the big craft to break up in the line squall which buffeted her about like a feather.

TESTIMONY BEFORE THE PRESIDENT'S AIR BOARD

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23. (AP)—The president's air board completed today the first phase of its inquiry into aviation by hearing from Postmaster General New and Secretary Hoover, and then it recessed until Monday.

Adding to the mass of information already supplied by the war and navy departments, the two cabinet members avoided the controversial issues involved and discussed only commercial aviation and development of the air mail service.

The recess was to enable the board members to attend to private affairs and also to re-examine the testimony already introduced. Upon reconvening the board will hear from air pilots, among them Colonel William Mitchell, former assistant chief of the army air service and whose attacks on the government's military aviation policies largely were responsible for inception of the inquiry. He is expected to appear on Tuesday.

Commercial aviation was presented today as an industry of proven merit and the story of its progress, told jointly by Mr New and Mr. Hoover, was in contrast to previous testimony disclosing differences of opinion among army and navy heads.

Mr. New prefaced his testimony with the statement that postal air mail had no connection with the military air dispute, but when questioned as to his views on unification of the air services, he joined Acting Secretary of War Davis and Secretary Wilbur in opposing the proposal.

Secretary Hoover was not questioned at all by the board and confined his statement to commercial air activities. He advocated creation of a bureau of civil neronautics, however, and he believed that a self-supporting air service for commercial transportation is now a possibility within the United States for which the federal government should immediately provide.

He urged also an expansion of the air mail service, which Mr. New previously had asserted has demonstrated that commercial aviation is "an entirely feasible thing."

MADISON RESIDENTS SEEK POLITICAL INJUNCTIONS

HARTFORD, Sept. 23—Temporary and permanent injunctions restraining State Secretay Francis A. Pallotti and Deputy Secretary Elmer H. Lounsbury from using the names of the "independent republicans" on the official republican ballot for Madison at the town elections have been asked of the superior court of New Haven county by the "Marsden" supporters.

Papers were served on Deputy Lounsbury today. Secretary Pallotti being out of the state, notifying him to appear on October 2 and were filed with Attorney General Frank Healy. The plaintiffs are Arthur W. Marsden, candidate for town clerk; Clarkson H. Meigs, candidate for selectmen; Fred W. Field and William W. Miner, candidates, respectively for treasurer and registrar.

The injunction request is the result of a controversy at the republican caucus when a group claiming "unfair methods," left the caucus and nominated a town ticket, in addition to that named by those remaining for the balloting. The factions were headed by Arthur W. Marsden and Clifton A. Theis, selectman and both tickets have been filed with the state secretary for entry on the official town ballot under the heading of "republican."

The papers served today state that "the secretary of state, acting through the deputy, threatens to place the ticket, composed of persons in Madison some of whom have been designated 'independent republicans,' on the official ballot as the candidates of the republican party. The plaintiffs pray for permanent injunction restraining the secretary from placing this ticket on the ballot and a temporary injunction to the same effect."

PREDICTS NO SUMMERS IN THE YEARS 1926-1927

WESLLESLEY, Mass., Sept. 23. (AP)—Prediction that "the year without a summer" of 1816 would be repeated in 1926-1927 and would gravely menace the world's grain crops was made today by Herbert Hanvrin Browne, ocean meteorologist of Washington, D. C., in an address at the twelfth annual business conference at Babson park. Mr. Browne said that his prophecy, made by him for the past three years and heretofore greeted with derision, was now supported by eight leading scientists of Canada and Europe.

The position of these scientists, the speaker explained, is based upon a study of the lunar cycle in conjunction with sunspot periods. The changes in solar radiation and the moon's tidal influence, he said, bring masses of cold deep-sea water on the continental shelves of the oceans. Long period cycles in the mass of cold and warm areas of ocean water are created, and these affect the overlying winds and determine abnormal weather on land, resulting in violent floods, extreme droughts, and frosts and freezing temperatures in the continental grain-growing areas during the crop season.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

Were Married in Paris

PARIS, Sept. 23—The marriage of James B. Wharton, son of Dr. Henry R. Wharton, of Berwyn, Pennsylvania, to Miss Elisabeth Houghton, daughter of Clement S. Houghton, of Boston, was celebrated today at the city hall eighth ward in Paris. Mr. Wharton is head of the European bureau of the North American Newspaper Alliance.

Assembly Hall for L. of N.

GENEVA, Sept. 23—The financial commission of the league of nations assembly has decided to allot 11,700,000 francs, gold, to construct an assembly hall and secretariat on the shore of Lake Leman. This will adjoin the new international labor bureau building. The present home of the secretariat will be sold.

FRENCH DEBT COMMISSION ARRIVE IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—(AP) —Joseph Caillaux, the French minister of finance, and his ten colleagues arrived in the capital today ready to open negotiations for a funding settlement of their nation's four billion dollar debt to the United States.

In the chill, damp atmosphere of an early autumn afternoon, the Frenchmen stepped from their private car in which they traveled from New York, and immediately set about preliminaries to the formal negotiations into which they wil launch at 10 a. m. tomorrow at their first meeting with the American debt commission.

As the first move M. Caillaux hurried to the embassy and then made formal calls to exchange greetings with Secretary Kellogg at the State department and Secretary Mellon at the treasury, but later the chairman of the American commission and guide of the American policy in the negotiations. The French chairman was accompanied by Emile Daeschner, the French ambassador, who had gone to New York to meet his countrymen, when they landed from the liner Paris.

Other members of the delegation were taken direct to the hotel which will be their headquarters. The visitors apparently expect the negotiations to be brief. They have made arrangements to sai for home October 3, and M. Caillaux declared he saw nothing now to cause a change in the calculations. All the delegates were confident of an early settlement that would be satisfactory to both countries.

MANY INFRACTIONS OF MOTOR VEHICLE LAWS

BRIDGEPORT, Sept. 23.—(A. P.)—Arrested five times for violation of the motor vehicle laws, several times for operating automobiles while, it was alleged, he was under the influence of liquor, Frank McEnaney, a garage owner, 1766 Stratford avenue, Bridgeport, has been dealt with leniently because of his distinguished war record.

When he appeared for the sixth time as an offender in the criminal court of common pleas this afternoon, it was remarked that he had traded to the limit on his war record. He was sentenced to jail for ninety days. The last of six charges preferred against him was that of driving an automobile while his license was suspended.

McEnaney was a captain in the United States army. He was decorated for conspicuous bravery while under enemy fire, and underwent the terrific physical and mental strain of attending fighting in the five major engagements in which the American troops participated against the Germans.

CONVICTION OF BROKER REDMOND IS UPHELD

BOSTON, Sept. 23—The United States circuit court of appeals today upheld the conviction of George F. Redmond, head of the defunct brokerage firm of George F. Redmond and Company, Inc., who was sentenced last year to serve 10 years in the federal prison at Atlanta. Judge George H. Bingham dissented from the decision.

Redmond was indicted on a charge of using the mails in a scheme to defraud after his firm, which sold stocks on the partial payment plan, was closed by federal injunction in March 1924. In July of last year, he was convicted. Shortly before he was placed on trial Redmond was sent to jail for contempt of court for failing to deliver to the receivers assets of the bankrupt concern. He remained in confinement eight months. James S. Lamont, president of the company, also spent several months in jail on a contempt commitment. Lamont pleaded guilty to the charge of fraudulent use of the mails and served a short term in Plymouth jail.

Redmond has been at liberty for several months on $25,000 bail.

MOTORIST BEATEN BY MEN WHOM HE HAD PICKED UP

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 23. (AP)—Forced at the point of a gun to drive two men whom he had picked up in his automobile at Franklin and State streets, to Montowese, Jack Hourwitz, of New Haven, was brutally beaten, robbed of a small sum of money and then left in a ditch beside his car.

Hourwitz when asked for a ride by the two men whom he described as being about 28 years of age, thought he knew them and acceded to their request.

As he drove along State street, one of the men pulled a revolver and commanded him to drive in the direction of Montowese.

At Montowese he was forced to drive his machine into a ditch and was then struck on the head, otherwise beaten and left unconscious.

Some time later, two Yale students found Hourwitz and brought him to New Haven police headquarters in their car.

Hourwitz, believed to have sustained body injuries, refused to go to a hospital, and after being questioned by police, left with a relative. He said he lost $4.

SIX GUILTY OF CONSPIRACY TO VIOLATE THE MANN ACT

BOSTON, Sept. 23. (AP)—Six of eight defendants who had been on trial in federal district court for several days on charges of conspiracy to violate the Mann act were found guilty by a jury tonight. They were Mrs. May Dion, Sturbridge; Florence Wade, Ruth Gordon and Charles Fagan, all of Providence, and Joseph Bellanger and Joseph Betran, both of Southbridge. Leo Dion, of Sturbridge, and Clarence Dion, of South Brookfield, were acquitted. The government introduced evidence tending to prove that Mrs. Dion transported or caused to be transported a woman named Jennie Beckwith from Providence to a house in Brinfield which she owned. Bellanger and Betran were alleged to have been in her employ.

Royalty at Marriage of Prince and Princess

Mafalda, Daughter of King and Queen of Italy, Weds Philip of German House of Hesse—Culmination of Romance.

RACCONGI, Italy, Sept. 23.—(AP) —A royal romance of love at first sight culminated today when Princess Mafalda, 22-year-old daughter of the king and queen of Italy, was married to Prince Philip, 29-year-old son of the German house of Hesse, nephew of the former kaiser of Germany and second cousin of King George V of England. The young couple left for Germany tonight on their honeymoon.

The wedding was remarkable for the representation of the ever dwindling community of European royalty, that it brought together to this ancient Savoyard castle of Racconigi. Members of nine royal houses attended, from Italy, Germany, Denmark, Greece, Roumania, Jugoslavia, Belgium, Austria and Montenegro; while the crowns of England and Spain sent representatives.

It was unusual also in that it joined children of one of the chief Catholic families of Europe and of a German Protestant house renowned for its early espousal of the reform cause of Martin Luther. A special dispensation from the Pope was necessary for the solemnization of the marriage by Catholic rites. The union was further marked by its transcending the bitterness of the World War.

Nobles from practically all the nations of Europe were there, numbering about 200.

The marriage ceremonies began in the morning with a solemn mass in honor of St. Maurice and St. Lazarus, patron saints of the official Savoy order. During the mass, which was attended by most of the guests, the choir of Turain cathedral sang the music of Palestrina and other Italian master of the middle ages.

The solemnly dignified atmosphere of the mass was maintained as the royal guests filed into the central hall of the castle, forming into a bridal cortege in strict conformity with court precedence. King Victor Emanuel, attired in the uniform of a grand marshal of Italy, headed the procession, with Princess Mafalda on his arm. The bride was gowned in white satin, with a white veil of precious lace and a bridal train four yards long, borne by two pages. She wore a magnificent necklace, the gift of her brother, Crown Prince Humbert, in her hand she carried a bouquet of orange blossoms.

The bridesmaids were her two younger sisters.

The Prince of Hesse was dressed in his uniform of a lieutenant of Prussian dragoons.

In the billiard room the king and the two queens stood on one side of a table covered with red velvet in the center of the room, while the bride and bridegroom and Premier Mussolini and former Premier Tittoni took arm chairs on the opposite side of the table.

Signor Tittoni, acting as an official of "civil status", read the Italian marriage laws, and Mafalda and Philip gave their promises to liveup to them. Then Premier Mussolini in his capacity as crown notary, performed the civil ceremony, after which the marriage contract was signed by King Victor Emanuel and Queen Helena, using a gold pen. The ceremony was officially witnessed by Crown Prince Humbert and Crown Prince Carol of Rumania.

The procession then proceeded through a courtyard lined with flowers and wreaths to the chapel.

Mafalda and Philip knelt before the altar, the king and two queens occupying stools at the left, and the two witnesses, Count Civi di Bergolo, husband of the eldest royal princess, Yolanda, and Prince Christopher of Greece, at the right. The ceremony was the Roman Catholic marriage service, except for the omission of the mass on account of the bridegroom's protestantism.

After the religious ceremony the king followed by the guests returned to the great hall of the castle, where the king and queen held a reception, abandoning formality and accepting congratulations as parents of the bride. The morning ceremonies were concluded with a luncheon of more than 200 covers.

The king caused the castle grounds to be thrown open temporarily, allowing a procession of hundreds of motor cars to enter and pass in review before the monarch. The crowds cheered, threw flowers and waved flags and shouted "vivas" for all members of the royal family, including Prince Philip.

Modernity reasserted itself during the evening, when the crash of trap-drums and the wails of saxophones of an expert jazz band dismissed all flavor of mediaveality. The evening festivities included a theatrical performance and concert, ballet dancing, another banquet, and finally several hours of modern dancing.

REDUCTION IN PRICES BY AMERICAN WOOLEN CO.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP) — Average price reductions of 5 to 10 per cent compared with a year ago, were announced today by the American Woolen company on its lines of women's wear fabrics for next spring, which were opened to the trade today. Many of the offerings were lowered from 10 to 25 cents a yard. Broken pile coatings, because of their strong current vogue, escaped the price cutting.

The general reduction in prices was ascribed to lower wool, labor and overhead costs as well as the necessity of meeting stiff competition from silk goods in the ready-to-wear markets. A radical departure for the company was the introduction of Rayon mixtures in women's coating and suiting fabrics, confirming recognition of a new style dictate.

Another innovation was the increase in novelty lines to rank equally with staples, which heretofore have outnumbered them 4 to 1.

Important Gain by Spanish Shock Troops

Three Objectives Gained—Moroccan Rebels Displayed Fanatical Resistance—Warships and Air Forces Aided Spanish.

MADRID, Sept. 23—Spanish shock troops today stormed the heights of Morro Viejo, Cuervos de Xauen and Malmusal, all located on the bay of Alhucemas. They are now about six kilometres (4 miles) from Ajdir, Abdel-Krim's headquarters.

The Spanish forces with the foreign legion as vanguard wrested Moorish territory to a depth of about two kilometres (a mile and a third) from the rebels, who defended their sacred soil with fanatical zeal against the Spaniards.

"All objectives have been gained," declared Admiral Marquis de Magaz, acting president of the military directorate.

General Jordana, another member of that body said: "The operations are by no means concluded, because after we have captured the mountains we must fortify them and attend to many other matters to insure the safety of our troops."

General Primo de Rivera sent a message from the battleship Alfonso XIII, his headquarters, anchored somewhere near the point of operations, praising the bravery of the Spanish soldiers and the ability of the high command and the officers, particularly Generals Saro and Fernandez Perez who were in actual command of today's advance.

The Spanish casualties are reported as slight.

The following official statement was issued:

"After a hard fight perfectly directed by General Sanjurjo and with the efficient cooperation of warships, aircraft and last, but not least, the great effort of the troops we have won our three objectives, the crests of Morro Viejo and Maimussi and the intermediate position of Cuervos de Xauen, all of which are of the greatest importance. Details will be given out as soon as received.

"Today's operations were of exceptional importance, not only because of our sensible advance, the relief from congestion of our base on Alhucemas Bay which increases our facilities for eventual operations and permits us to widen also the landing places, but also because the enemy had concentrated all his available men to defend this line of resistance, and thus it may be assumed their rout will have a great moral and material effect upon the rebels."

"PEACE" COMMISSION AT THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 23 (AP)—The "peace" commission of the Presbyterian church spent an entire day today in secret session discussing the procedure under which it will work to carry out the general assembly's instructions to "study the spiritual condition of our church and causes making for unrest."

A brief official statement was issued, saying that a committee had been named to study plans of committee organization and procedure.

Members of the commission explained that it was necessary for them to feel their way cautiously in the matter of procedure, because there had never been a similar commission in the entire history of Presbyterians in this country.

After sub-committees have had a chance to work on problems, another general meeting of the commission will be held here on Dec. 1. The general council of the church also meets here on Dec. 4 and it was said there would be a series of conferences between the two organizations. The final report of the peace commission probably will not be made public until next May when the general assembly meets in Baltimore.

Decision to appoint five sub-committees, of three members each, was announced tonight. These committees will study "causes of unrest and possibilities of relief"; "historic backgrounds"; "constitutional procedure"; "conference" and "literature." The personnel of the committees, which will report at a meeting of the commission here on Dec. 1, will be announced later.

It was also announced that the commission would adopt a "presentment for general circulation" before adjournment tomorrow.

BRIDGEPORT OYSTER FLEET HAS RENEWED OPERATIONS

BRIDGEPORT, Sept. 23. (AP)—The Bridgeport oyster fleet is active for the first time since July 20. The fleet of forty sloops, which began operations Monday on the natural beds off Seaside park, will move tomorrow over to the large public beds off Stratford.

The period from July 20 to Sept. 21 is the spawning season and at no time during these two months may oysters be taken from the public beds. Under the provisions of a state law, oysters cannot be dredged from public beds with power other than sail. All the boats of the local fleet are equipped with gasoline engines, but when they arrive at the oyster beds these cannot be used. Wind and sail alone can be used to supply locomotion.

WHITE HOUSE MAID IS TO BECOME A CITIZEN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—Katherine Wynn, a maid to Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, who served in the same capacity with Mrs. Warren G. Harding, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, appeared in supreme court of the District of Columbia today and announced that she wanted to become an American citizen.

She said she came to the United States from Ireland in 1905 and still was a British subject.

HEARING BY THE STATE BOARD OF HAIRDRESSERS OCT. 14

Hartford, Sept. 23—(AP)—The state board of hairdressers and cosmeticians will hold examinations for those desiring licenses as instructors in hairdressing and cosmetics on Oct. 14 at the capitol. The examinations will consist of oral and written tests and practical demonstrations in shampooing, scalp treatment, marcelling, facials, manicuring and other subjects. Applicants have been requested to notify the board of intentions to take the examinations.

TO FREE NEW ENGLAND FROM THE ANTHRACITE MONOPOLY

Steps Taken by John Hays Hammond, Chairman of the New England Governors' Fuel Committee—Has Sent a Letter to Eight Bituminous Coal Operators' and Producers' Associations—Bituminous Industry is in Trouble From Over-Production.

BOSTON, Sept. 23—(A. P.)—Declaring that "the patience of New England has been strained to the breaking point" by the latest suspension of anthracite coal mining operations, John Hays Hammond, chairman of the New England Governors' Fuel committee, tonight took steps to ascertain from the bituminous coal producers of Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia, their ability to furnish New England with its entire supply of domestic fuel this winter, if necessary.

Chairman Hammond sent a letter to eight bituminous coal operators' and producers' associations in the Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia fields in which he asked what amount of low volatile bituminous coal, suitable for domestic use, their various members could supply; the price of such coal, per ton, at the mine; the cost of transportation, per ton, to New England points; the names and addresses of the companies able to furnish such fuel; the names and addresses of their New England representatives, and any other information which the associations might furnish.

After describing New England's attitude toward the anthracite suspension, Chairman Hammond's letter said:

"The governors of these states have banded together to more effectually deal with their domestic fuel problems. Without knowledge as to how long mining will be suspended, and in the absence of federal legislation, it is now necessary that the anthracite consuming states take steps to protect their citizens from being victims of the anthracite monopoly.

The bituminous industry is in trouble from over production, exactly the reverse of conditions in regard to anthracite. Realizing that most of the householders in this country now use bituminous coal for home heating and that your industry is willing and able to supply, if necessary, all the requirements of New England this winter, I am writing to request that you prepare and send this information to those listed below as representing our respective New England governors."

The associations were asked to specify besides the amount, the analysis and sizes of coal available. The letter was sent to the following:

Central Pennsylvania Coal Producers' Association, Altoona, Pa.; Somerset County Coal Operators' Association, Somerset, Pa.; Broad Top Coal Operators' Association, Philadelphia; Coal Operators' Association of George's Creek, George's Creek, Md.; Pocahontas Coal Operators' Association, Bluefield, W. Va.; Tug River Coal Operators' Association, Welch, W. Va.; Winding Gulf Coal Operators' Association, Beckley, W. Va.; New River Coal Operators' Association, Mount Hope, W. Va.

The New England Governors' representatives, who were chosen after the formation of the New England Governors' Fuel Company last month, are as follows:

Maine, J. C. Boyd; New Hampshire, John W. Storrs; Vermont, John C. Sherburne; Massachusetts, John Hays Hammond, and Eugene C. Hultman; Rhdoe Island, Ernest L. Sprague; Connecticut, Edward W. Goss.

DIFFICULTIES OF ALIBI IN BRIDGEPORT ARSON CASE

BRIDGEPORT, Sept. 23.—(A. P.)—Whether Moe Casper, on trial with his business partner, Harris Fienberg, on a charge of setting fire to their store at 1342 Main street, with intent of defrauding insurance companies, left Bridgeport on the 9.44 o'clock train on the night of November 22 last, about two hours and a quarter before the Casper-Fienberg fire was discovered, as it has been said he did, was a matter the state was unable to present before a jury in criminal superior court this afternoon.

Elaborate preparations made for the purpose failed, the death of a New Haven railroad employe having much to do with that particular phase of the state's case.

Casper had told Detective Sergeant William Foster that, aware of nothing wrong, he locked his store the night of the fire and went to has home in New York city, using a Bridgeport-New York commutation book.

Possessed of Casper's book, Sergeant Foster, seeking to verify the alibi, went to the New Haven company's offices in New Haven. An official brought for his examination the envelope of the conductor on the 9.44 o'clock train out of Bridgeport on the night of November 22. The sergeant made an examination of the commutation tickets.

The official in charge of the tickets said he would put them aside for access during any subsequent court trial. He died, in the state hospital for the insane, last March, and the envelope of tickets was lost.

Henry B. Culver, ticket collecter on the 9.44 o'clock train, testifying as to the method of returning cancelled tickets to the New Haven company office, declared he would not be able to identify any person who had traveled on his train on November 22.

Judge George E. Hinman would not permit the admission of Sergeant Foster's evidence concerning what he discovered on his visit to the New Haven offices. If Casper's commutation ticket, traceable by the numbers on his book, was in the envelope of the November 22, 9.44 o'clock train conductor, or not there, was not to go to the jury.

IN COURT ON CHARGE OF ISSUING BANK CHECKS

BRIDGEPORT, Sept. 23. (AP)—The case of Richard Bacheler, 30, of Bethany, who is alleged to have made a tour of the eastern part of the country on bogus checks, was continued today in city court, until a charge can be made against him. Bacheler rented a car from the Auto Renting company, here last April, and had not returned it when he was taken into custody in Bethany last Tuesday morning. It was not known whether he could be charged with theft of the car, as he had not tried to sell it.

Bacheler is known to have passed checks in amounts varying from $3 to $42 on the Merchants bank of Bridgeport in about 65 cities about the east. It is not expected he will be extradited by any state except possibly Massachusetts where he is wanted in Pittsfield.

DOG BIT CONSTABLE BENT ON MAKING LIQUOR ARREST

STAMFORD, Sept. 23. (AP)—When Constable Andrew Schiechtweig and his son, Louis, a member of the local police force, called at the home of Michael Secor, of High Ridge, tonight to arrest him on the charge of operating an automobile under the influence, of liquor, Secor's dog attacked them in defense of his master. Dr. Frank E. McMahon treated Louis for a dog bite. It was said that Secor was involved in an accident and that he was intoxicated.

APPOINTED BRITISH MINISTER TO MEXICO

London, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Esmond Ovey, counsellor of the British embassy at Rome, today was appointed minister to Mexico.

The resumption of formal diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Mexico was announced August 22. Previous to that the two countries had been without diplomatic relations for more than ten years.

SUIT OVER GEN. WOOD'S PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN

CHICAGO, Sept. 23—(A. P.)—The first of sixty depositions made by prominent politicians and business men throughout the country was reached late today in the trial of Colonel William Cooper Procter's suit to recover from Colonel A. A. Sprague one half of a note for $100,000, which represented a small part of the great amount loaned by Colonel Proctor in furtherance of Major General Leonard Wood's presidential campaign in 1920.

Entering the depositions was opposed strenuously by Colonel Procter's counsel, and the first one was begun with a warning from Federal Judge Slick that his ruling would be developed by the information in the document. At adjournment he instructed the attorneys to try to get together on a stipulation as to just what portions be read into the record.

Reading of the first deposition, made by Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, who for five months in 1920 was manager of General Wood's Washington headquarters, met with repeated objetions from Colonel Procter' scounsel, and much of it was eliminated.

It stated that Senator Moses was informed by Colonel Procter that he need not have anxiety about finances for the campaign, and that founds would be ample.

Senator Moses said he never heard of a Leonard Wood national campaign committee, never heard of a meeting to organize such a committee and that Colonel Proctor individually paid numerous bills without reference to him, and never called upon him for any authorization to make notes.

It also was brought out that Colonel Procter had accounted for notes totaling $450,000, and that he would not be "surprised" if the amount of other notes brought to $700,000 the sum that he had made available in furtherance of General Wood's campaign.

Of all those notes, Colonel Procter admitted under cross examination that the one involved in the present suit was the noly one which bore a signature in addition to his own.

It is his contention that Colonel Sprague indorsed the note as co-guarantor, while Colonel Sprague maintains that the document bore his signature merely because it was identified in that manner as business obtained by him for the bank of which he was a director.

Senator Moses' deposition set out that funds he expended as Washington manager were obtained from Colonel Procter personally.

An unexpected defense motion for a directed verdict was overruled by Judge Slick shortly after the afternoon session opened.

"Colonel Procter was the Leonard Wood national campaign committee," the defense said in its opening statement this afternoon.

"He was the 'kingmaker' and he was willing to pay for the privileges and distinctions that attached thereto.

It was also asserted that Colonel Procter commingled funds of the Leonard Wood League, an organization of 60,000 members, with funds of the campaign committee and the result was that the league expenses were paid out of the campaign fund.

Senator Moses in his deposition said he knew little about the activities of Wood's national campaign committee and that he first learned he was on it when he read his name in a list in the newspapers. Colonel Procter he characterized as "boss of the whole work."

Colonel Procter was made chairman the deposition continued at a meeting here in December, 1919, the appointment being made by General Wood himself.

Procter assured Moses that the campaign would be amply financed.

PROHIBITION ARRESTS IN NEW YORK OFFICE BUILDINGS

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP) — A new feature in prohibition enforcement was introduced today when a squad of agents suddenly descended upon offices in the Knickerbocker and Longacre buildings, both in the Times Square action. Fifty men were taken to prohibition headquarters for questioning.

Ten agents of the department of justice, ten from Acting Prohibition Dirtror Foster's force and seven New York city police participated in the raids.

WILLIMANTIC

Principal and teachers in the schools of the town delivered addresses before approximately thirty-five hundred children Wednesday on the general subject of "Co-operation in Education to Reduce the Number of Deaths from Accidents." The drive to make the way safe for humanity is on in every municipality, town and hamlet in the country and is under supervision of the American United Community Education for Safety. The campaign will be continued. Chief of Police Allan McArthur and Captain Thomas F. Grady of the police department distributed posters at the ten schools of the town Wednesday. The posters contained statistics of the number of people killed in accidents, principally by automobiles, including figures furnished by Secretary of Commerce Hoover and the estimated casualties for the past two years. Teachers explained the dangers of crossing streets, walking on railroad tracks, or venturing in places where danger lurks, having for a slogan, "Make Willimantic Safe for Humanity."

St. Joseph's Boy Scout Bank of this city will go to the Eastern States Exposition at Springfield, Mass today (Thursday) to participate in the competitive contest for the New England juvenile band championship. It was announced Wednesday by William A. Costello, chairman of the scout committee. The band will travel in auto busses and will be accompanied by a large local delegation. Members of the scout committee who will make the trip are: William A. Costello, chairman; Harry L. Lester, David P. Ahern, George Timmins, Walter A. Costelo, John F. Carr, Rev. Charles M. Kelly, John Reilly and J. E. Cullivan. There are thirty-six members of the band, with Bandmaster Charles N. C. Wheeler as director and Arthur Paradis drum major. The average age of the bandsmen is fifteen.

Interesting experiences which came to the Original Wanderalls, F. E. Williams and Jay Lambert of Newark, N. J., while traveling through thirty-nine states in a Ford automobile were related here by the globe trotters, who spent Tuesday night in this city and resumed their journey Wednesday morning. The trip is made for education and health purposes and was started from Cincinnati, Ohio, eighteen months ago. The car in which they originaly started was destroyed by fire in Kentucky four months ago. In the same state they were detained for being bootleggers, but were released later. The Wanderalls are now headed South and plan to arrive in the Middle West next spring. They had planned to make the trip around the world in five years, but believe that it will have to be extended due to various obstacles. At the start of the trot there were four men, but two became discouraged and "jumped camp."

Coach Thomas A. Callghan of Windham high school football squad made a number of shifts in the position of players Wednesday, for the array which will face Chapman Tech in New London Saturday afternoon. Sawicki, two year veteran, was transferred from the center position for which he has been groomed, to left tackel to team up with Tomasen, another veteran. John Buck will hold the center. With this sorting of affairs the local mentor expressed himself as highly pleased with the outlook for an improvement over the initial game's exhibition when Windham and Stonington were tied 0 to 0.

Manager Edward Dziemba has received a reply from the Norwich Free academy business pilot that the academy cannot accept the date of October 31, but will play October 10. The local manager coud not accept this substitute date however, as on October 9 Windham is playing Westerly in Westerly.

From the manager of the Bulkeley eleven comes a suggestion to play the two elevens on Thanksgiving day. Windham had planned to close its season with a game in Bristol High on November 14, on local grounds and has not yet decided on the Thanksgiving offer.

Funeral services for Mrs. Lillian L. Anthony were held at two o'clock Wednesday afternoon, conducted at the Windham Center Congregational church by Rev. James G. Graham. Burial was in Windham Center cemetery. The bearers were Frank and Albert Anthony, Donald Kramer, and George Whitford. Arrangements were in charge of Avery and VanZandt.

The application of George J. Gary, to operate a jitney route from Putnam to Willimantic via Pomfret, Chaplin and North Windham will be among those to be heard at a hearing before the public utilities commssion in Putnam September 30.

Clarence A. Palmer, carrier at the Willimantic postoffice has returned to his duties after a splendid vacation during which he traveled to New York city and Atlantic City where he was an interested witness of the bathing beauties' pageant, which he states was wonderful. He took a trip up the Hudson River and later toured Western Massachusetts.

No change was reported Wednesday in the condition of Michael Longo, who was critically injured in an automobile accident in the town of Brooklyn Monday morning.

Miss Meda Adams entertained at a dinner party Tuesday evening in honor of Miss Catherine Donohue, whose marriage with Henry Lavigne of this city, will take place at an early date. The affair evolved into a miscellaneous shower, during which the bride-elect received many gifts.

Mrs. Alvin Nelson of Bolivia street entertained several friends at her home Tuesday evening at a housewarming party.

Autumn officially began at 8:44 o'clock Wednesday morning and was ushered by a cold snap and a heavy frost, which destroyed many flower gardens in this section, including the beautiful dahlias at the home of William B. Sweeney.

GIRL GAINED 7 POUNDS NINE YEARS AN INVALID

That's just what McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets did for the Babcock Girl—and is doing as much for tens of thousands of thin, underweight, weak and discouraged people all over America.

These sugar coated, pleasant to take tablets should be given to children instead of the vile stomach upsetting oil itself—they surely do help the frail, delicate little ones and 60 tablets cost but 60 cents at Lee & Osgood Co. or any real druggist anywhere in America.

Read this letter if you have a child that needs to gain health and strength.

"My little girl was stricken with infantile paralysis when she was 5 months old and was an invalid for 9 years—when I saw an ad in the paper that McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets would build up wasted tissues I bought a box and she gained very slowly at first and after taking eight boxes, she gained seven pounds. Thanks to McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets, after trying almost everything else on the market. She is on the road to recovery and goes to school every day." Mrs. L. Babcock, Appleton, Wis.

Imitations of McCoy's may be offered but be sure and ask for McCoy's, the original and genuine and if after thirty days' treatment you are not delighted with results—why, get your money back.

TRUST COMPANY DEPOSITS NORMAL DURING WEDNESDAY

(Special to the Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 23—Conditions at the Willimantic Trust company banking house were rapidly settling back to normalcy Wednesday, as the flame of malicious rumors attacking the solvency of the institution flickered and died out. Statements by the bank commissioner and the board of directors made public established that the bank was perfectly solvent and able at this, or any other time, to pay 100 cents on the dollar. The assurance of the absolute safety of deposits at the bank had a telling effect, in quelling the flurry of excitement which caused somewhat of a run on the bank Tuesday. Wednesday the withdrawals had dropped to a comparatively low figure. Deposits received during the day were at a normal figure and business in the commercial department continued uninterrupted.

The office of the banking house was flooded Wednesday with offers from banks in New York, Hartford, Boston, this city and several other localities to advance deposits to the local bank. It was not found necessary, however, to accept the assistance thus offered in good will and confidence. Two Hartford banks, however, sent unsolicited deposits totalling $110,000 to the institution, but with the abating of the false rumors the amounts will be returned intact, it was stated by Treasurer H. W. Huber.

The directors of the bank are considering action against the party creating and parties responsible for circulation of the false statements about the company, it became known Wednesday afternoon. The penalty against the person originating or circulating such falsehoods is severe according to the law, which fixes a sentence of not more than $500 or not more than one year imprisonment or both. It is necessary that the heads of the local bank furnish the names of such violators to the Bank Commissioner. This is expected to be done Thursday in which case the directors will use their own discretion as to the character of the prosecution demanded against the violators.

The bank examiners, on a recent visit here, made the statement that the Willimantic Trust Company compared most favorably with any institution of its kind and size in the state, as regards both its financial health and efficiency of management.

BOBBED HAIR BANDIT WAS CATHERINE CONETY

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 23—The identity of a bobbed-hair bandit captured in New York City after an unsuccessful attempt to rob the jewelry store of Henry Rosenberg, 1862 Amsterdam avenue, was established Wednesday. She is Mrs. Kitty Landrigan, formerly Miss Catherine M. Conety of this city. The young woman was one of a large family who came from Southington to Willimantic when all the children were small. The father, Michael Conety, died shortly after and the mother died here a few years ago. The family gave up the home and drifted apart. One of the boys is still a resident of this city, while a sister, Bessie is a resident of Hartford and a brother is in the U. S. Navy. Miss Conety removed from this city to Hartford about four years ago and May 4, 1921, married John J. Landrigan, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Henry F. Case. At present Landrigan is employed as a clerk in a brokerage office on Wall street. He formerly resided at 26 Kenneth St., Hartford. Mrs. Landrigan was formerly employed as a waitress in Hartford and became widely known there after winning numerous prizes at public dances. She stated to the police, that she resided at 3120 Broadway. Also held in custody in connection with the attempted burglary is William Berry, 27, of 1554 First avenue, who denies being implicated in the burglary, but police believe he was shot when Patrolman Adolph Finken of the Wadsworth avenue station shot at the fleeing machine in which three men and the Landrigan woman were attempting to escape. Berry was picked up on the sidewalk and taken to St. Luke's Hospital by a chauffeur. He was shot in the head and his condition is considered serious.

The Landrigan woman and one man entered the Rosenberg store and asked to be shown wedding rings. Rosenberg, who was robbed two years ago, became suspicious and he locked the main entrance to the store. Then, two men came to the door and at the request of the woman who said that one of the men was her husband, Rosenberg opened the door and the men approached him with drawn revolvers, acting quickly, he turned the muzzle of the gun nearest him and grabbing one of the burglars held him as a shield while he cried for help. Having been thwarted, the robbers took to flight, the man being held by Rosenberg, also escaping. The men got into a waiting automobile but the woman remained on the running board and was thrown off as the car rounded a corner. She was arrested by Officer Finken after he had shot five times at the machine. One shot shattered the glass in the rear of the tonneau and it is believed also wounded Berry. Detective William Ornstein took up the chase in a police automobile, but the men abandoned the machine and escaped on foot. Mrs. Landrigan said that she was acting as a lookout for the holdup men so that she would get money with which to buy pretty clothes. The machine in which the party rode was found to have been stolen from a garage.

ESSEX COACH

Why Consider a Lesser Car?—It Has Beauty—Performance —Super-Six Smoothness—Economy and Endurance

This is the greatest Essex value in history. It is the finest Essex ever built. The price is the lowest at which Essex ever sold. DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

At 17 Wanniselt avenue, Riverside, R. I. Monday of this week Mr. and Mrs. Seth O. Rodman observed their golden wedding anniversary. Both are in excellent health. Mrs. Rodman is a native of Brooklyn, Conn., a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Brown. Her marriage with Mr. Rodman, a native of South Kingston, R. I., was at Howard's Valley, west of here in the town of Hampton, September 21, 1875. Rev. William Nichols was the officiating clergyman. Among those who were at Riverside Monday to honor Mr. and Mrs. Rodman were their three sons and a married daughter. They included Albert Rodman, Charles Rodman and James Rodman, all of East Providence, and Mrs. George O. Strong, of Willimantic.

More publication of the semi-annual weather report of the Cloud Digger, with its prediction of a tremendously cold winter sent the mercury tumbling down to 24 degrees in Danielson, Wednesday morning. Of course, there is no positive way of proving this, but there is ground for suspicion that the assumption is correct. The long distance weather report says nothing about much cold before November, but one never can tell what will happen when one starts predicting dire things.

Wednesday morning's demonstration by the Weather Man was not only a frost but also a freeze. Some thermometers about town showed readings of 25 degrees at 6 a. m. The cold snap blighted flower gardens and did other damage to tender plants. It visited costly injury upon some unharvested corn crops—and it sent shivers along the spine of humanity. Ice formed on water left outside 1 nsmall vessels. Verily, it was a stiff introduction to an impending cold weather period. But there is more balmy and likeable weather just ahead.

Danielson was evacuated Wednesday by a goodly proportion of its population. Young and old trekked to the Brooklyn fair. All the schools of the town afforded pupils an opportunity to go to the fair. Banks closed here at noon and business houses allowed employes a half day to see what the show had to offer. The exodus began in the early forenoon and continued for hours. Danielson people enjoyed the Brooklyn fair and the opportunities it afforded to see many people who are well worth seeing. It was typical fair holiday.

George H. Kimbal, of the Wood's Hill farm, in the town of Brooklyn and about four miles from Danielson said Wednesday that he would permit use of one of his large fields for an areoplane landing. Mr. Kimbal will talk the matter over with Warden Walter Anderson, who has the negotiations in charge. At the Kimbal farm is a wonderful level field that would allow of runways 2,000 feet in length, if required. The location is four miles from Danielson, reached through the town of Brooklyn, and is just across the river from Goodyear. On occasions in the past it has been used as an emergency landing by flyers forced down for one reason or another.

A car operated by Carrie Bennett and a light truck owned by Amie Godreau of Goodyear were in collision at Center and Main street Wednesday. The pleasure car was coming out of Center street when the collision occurred. Neither car was damaged to any extent.

Hearing of bus line petitions at Putnam Wednesday next before the Public Utilities commission suggests a number of possible and interesting things to people who are watching the trend of things pertaining to transportation in this section of eastern Connecticut. It is understood that the commission will consider various petitions for lines over route six this section of the state. It is possible that this hearing may have some bearing, direct or indirect, on the future of the trolley line service in this section of eastern Connecticut. Surely things cannot go on as they are indefinitely, not if making money for service provided is any consideration—and it very likely is.

Well established routes are operating and have been operating for some time east and west out of Danielson, from Providence through to Hartford. In fact, in the nearly 50 miles between Providence and Willimantic these bus routes serve territory where there is no trolley line.

The north and south route through Danielson—the Worcester-New London route—is a different proposition. A bus line parallels the trolley line all through Connecticut, or approximately does, from the state line to New London. Incidentally, neither the trolley nor the bus line are carrying passengers at a profit if an unofficial checkup is anywhere near accurate or a count of pasengers means anything. This cannot go on forever, though service must be maintained through the territory referred to—and without doubt will be. But by whom? This is the question. Possibly the hearing at Putnam Wednesday will have some bearing on the matter. It is not considered likely that the Connecticut company will abandon this field entirely as to bus line operation even if it should discontinue trolley service, something, again, that it has not said it intends to do. Then there is the New Haven road, now operating bus lines and not likely to overlook the local field at least insofar as an effort to get a charter through this section is concerned. Verily, much may come of the Putnam hearing. It at least promises something that will be of interest.

Many a youngster did on Wednesday what many a man who rode by them in a car on his way over did when he was a boy—walked to the Brooklyn fair. And remembering other days, when a man stopped his machine to give the youngsters a lift. It was a great pleasure, too.

Another few days will find the road workers on the Elmville, road, about ready to begin the laying of at least some sections of th econcrete roadway that will be a reality before real winter weather sets in.

Mr. and Mrs. Clare N. Turner and children have moved from Broad street to South Manchester. Mr. Turner formerly was connected with the Goodyear Mills, Inc., of this town and in their plant at Los Angeles.

Numbers of Killingly people are numbered among the exhibitors at the county fai rin Brooklyn.

Building projects underway or contemplated indicate that men in the building trades will be busy right up to real winter weather, as they have been since late last winter.

John A. Gregory of Waterbury was a visitor with friends in Danielson on Wednesday.

J. Carl Witter acted as starter of the races at the Brooklyn fair Wednesday.

DEACON ALBERT A. C. GREENE REACHES 96TH BIRTHDAY

(Special to the Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Sept. 23—If it were possible it would be a wonderful thing today to have Deacon Ablert C. Greene of 197 North Main street receive the personal congratulation of every individual in Danielson. Today is Deacon Greene's 96th birthday. He will observe it in a quiet way, receiving his friends at his home, among these friends men who, like himself, are veterans of the Civil war.

It is a long look backward to the day of Deacon Greene's nativity—but a brief glance ahead to his prospective rounding out of a full century of life. To him has been given in years what is given to precious few mortals. Deacon Greene, however, is not rich merely in years. His has been a fruitful life. Coming over the long trail he has lived an exemplary Christian life, as his membership of more than 75 years in the church at Westminister attests; he has given to the nation a family of splendid children: he has served his country under arms in time of stress and he has ever been known as a man whom others have been honored in calling their friend.

Deacon Greene sits astride the fight of time with serene complacency. Many may his remaining years be. All of Danielson will congratulate him and wish him well today. So, too, will his friends everywhere.

BLACKBURN, FROM NORWICH, TAKEN TO BRIDGEPORT

(Special to the Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Sept. 23—Warren Blackburn was deported from Danielson Wednesday morning—at least his going amounted to about that. With Blackburn went the fears of a Peeping Tom that many women and children, listening to many versions of a strange tale, having been harboring, since the first of the week. Blackburn was neither a Peeping Tom nor a particularly dangerous character. His troubles, according to his own admission, were due to over-indulgence. In some of the T. N. T. that passes as liquor in this day and age.

Blackburn first came to public attention Monday night, when he arrived here at a late hour from Norwich. Reaching here in a public service car, hired in Norwich, he started something when he leaped out of the machine as it halted at the Main street crossing to let a Bar Harbor express go by and made off. A chase resulted in his capture. The driver of the car and a companion had developed, on the way up from Norwich, a theory that Blackburn was queer, this because of his strange talk. When at Water and Main streets he directed them to drive him out to his place of abode on Maple street they speeded up the car to take him up through the business section, he says, he getting the idea they were making off with him. That's why, he says, he leaped out of the car at the railroad crossing.

All of this led to Officer John Gebert taking Blackburn before Chief John McFarland. The officers heard his story and then turned him over to a relative. By Tuesday night Blackburn had a room at a hotel here. However, he went rambling over into Maple street and other streets in that section and by his strange actions in hunting the home of his relative gave some the impression that he was a Peeping Tom The result was a hullabaloo and a chase of the man by pedestrians and motorists until he was eventully captured and locked up at the police station for the night. Wednesday morning a relative of his agreed to get him out of Danielson and to Bridgeport, where he has been living. This arrangement was agreed to as a good riddance for the town—and away Blackburn went—harmless, but with a wonderful capacity for doing things that frighten timid people.

PUTNAM

Preparations are steadily going forward for the dedicatory exercises of the Memorial bridge on Armistice Day, when Governor Trumbull and his staff, Senator Bingham and other distinguished men will be present. There was a meeting of the committee of arrangements Tuesday night, attended by nearly every member, and at which the same spirit of enthusiasm prevailed that has marked former meetings.

Miss Byrne of the invitation committee reported that the military and the semi-military organizations of nearby towns would be invited as well as different officials of the state, as published in the newspapers, and that formal invitations would follow the verbal ones.

For the Music committee, Ralph C. Jenkins said that for what songs might be on the program arrangements would be made for the proper direction of them by the singers of the city.

Graydon C. Sharpe stated that he thought that the Elks' Lodge would provide its own band for the parade.

J. J. McCulloch for the Odd Fellows said that they would turn out in greater numbers than first stated, 150, and that they had already engaged a band.

With the one military band that will be here, this, it is thought, would be all the bands that would be needed.

It was deemed inadvisable because of the probable distance that the procession would travel to invite the school children to take part.

Byron D. Bugbee, chairman of the finance committee, reported that an appropriation not to exceed $2,500 had been voted at a town meeting to meet the cost of the celebration. In his motion the various committees were directed to report to the finance and program committees what sums they would probably need and get their authorization before making expenditures.

Francis E. Metcalf reported that the parade committee had prepared two tentative lines of march, according to whether the bridge could be crossed or not. Each line provides for the starting of the parade at Union Square and to pass through Providence street and Grove street sections.

Members of the W. R. C., of the Rebekahs and of the Eastern Star said that their societies would be willing to prepare box lunches to the number of 400 or 500, the boxes and their contents to be furnished by the committee.

Armand Montville reported that Cargill Council K. of C., would take part in the parade and would keep open house that day for all visitors.

Mr. Vaughn said that the Elks had planned to do the same thing.

Those present at the meeting were Miss Byrne, Mrs. Barber, Mrs. William Hall, Mrs. Harry Prentice and Messrs. T. H. deCoudres, F. E. Metcalf, A. S. Macdonald, F. F. Russell, Graydon Sharpe, C. A. Boyce, R. C. Jenkins, J. J. McCulloch, B. D. Bugbee, C. E. Richards, Armand Lizotte, Dr. E. F. Perry, James F. Rafferty, Armond Montville, Louis E. Law, G. L. Padgett, W. D. King, O. E. Wulf, A. E. Smith and George W. Baker.

The next meeting will be Tuesday, October 6.

Mr. Vaughn stated that the Highway department had found that it could not widen the pilasters of the bridge to permit the four memorial bronze plates being attached to them, without interfering with the sidewalks. It was recommended that the wall in the center of the bridge be made a little higher with an arched top, and that a memorial plate be set in the wall on either side of both honor rolls. This idea will probably be carried out.

Many members of Elizabeth Porter Putnam Chapter D. A. R., and their friends left this (Thursday) morning on their annual pilgrimage. This year it is to be to Shrewsbury, Mass., just out of Worcester and there are many historical places to be visited.

Rev. George J. Donahue, pastor of Holy Trinity church at Pomfret was a member of the reception committee which greeted Rev. Father Felix J. O'Neill of St. Edward's church at Stafford Springs on his 25th anniversary as pastor at Stafford Springs, and presented him a purse of $1,200. Fr. Donahue was formerly an assistant pastor at St. Edward's church.

David Lown, son of Mrs. Effie Lown of Grove street has gone South to spend the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond R. Evans of Southbridge, formerly of Putnam have been visiting friends and relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Eban Holden have returned from two weeks' vacation which they spen tat Prospect Harbor Maine.

Joseph Shepard and family are planning to move to Florida where Mr Shepard is secretary to a college professor.

A number of Putnam musicians went to Webster, Tuesday evening and gave a concert that was broadcasted by the station there. It was a varied program and practically all local radios were tuned in to that station. After the conclusion of the entertainment there were many messages of congratulation and appreciation sent into Webster, including those from a number of Putnam radio fans. Those who took part were: Miss Esther Rouse, Miss Grace Fisher, violins; Mrs. Pearl Wheeton, contralto; Mrs. Katharine Lown, piano; Miss Alice Stevens, soprano; Wallace Smith, bass; Adolphe Bernier, saxophone; Joseph Metty, cornet; Audolph Metty, piano. The program was arranged by Wallace Smith.

This (Thursday) afternoon is the last half-holiday of the season in which the local stores will be closed. The stores have been closed Thursday afternoons during the summer and beginning with October 1 the half holiday ceases.

On the lawn of George W. Baker's home on Fremont street is a pear tree heavily laden with fruit. One branch of the tree has a cluster of blossoms and several fine specimens of almost ripened fruit.

Dr. S. B. Overlock of Pomfret, Dr. R. C. Paine of Thompson and Dr. W. A. Tanner of Danielson were in New Haven Tuesday attending a meeting of the State Medical Association

Mr. and Mrs. Karl T. Kent and little son, Wayne, of Meriden have been the guests of Mr. Kent's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Kent.

Newton Frederick Cokell, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Cokell of Framingham, Mass., and Miss Louise Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Turner of North Reading, Mass., were married at the North Reading Congregational church, Monday afternoon in the presence of a large number of friend. Mr. Cokell is grandson of Mr. and Mrs. George Cokell of Putnam and is well known here. He is associated with his father in the Framingham studio.

Col. Haines of the First Corps Headquarters in Boston was a visitor at this week's drill of the Headquarters Company of Putnam. Staff Sergeant Dingdon of Hartford was also at the drill.

The new shower baths at the armory have been installed and are now ready for use. This convenience is greatly appreciated by the company.

Sergeant Davison, manager of the basketball team, held a meeting for the candidates of the team last night and thinks he has good material for it. Sergeant Shirreffs is to be the coach. Plans were also made for the ball Armistice night, when Governor Trumbull and his staff and a number of military officers will be present.

Miss Katrina T. Thayer is the guest of Miss Laura Purcell at Bangor, Maine, this week.

William F. Rafferty, a member of Putnam Lodge of Elks, is urging that order to engage a Kiltie band for the celebration on Armistice Day and has offered a very desirable prize for the music committee if they comply with his wish. He is being aided and abetted by Postmaster Macdonald.

DIES ON FOURTH BIRTHDAY FROM UNEXPLAINED CAUSE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Sept. 23—Nancy Moss, four year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Moss of Fremont street, died very suddenly just after the noon hour today. The child had not been ill, had been playing with other children of her age during the morning and had eaten her noon-day lunch as usual. A few minutes later she became violently ill and Mrs. Moss' father, Dr. J. J. Russell, one of the leading physicians of the county was sent for. Dr. Forson, of Worcester, Mass., a specialist in children's diseases, was calling on Dr. Russell at the time and accompanied him to the Moss home. Their combined knowledge and efforts were unavailing and the child died an hour later.

Another feature that added to the tragedy of the death is that the child was born at noon on September 23rd, 1921, four years ago almost to the hour. Preparations had been made for a birthday party to have been held this evening. Her death was a shock to all the people in the neighborhood among whom she was a general favorite.

Mr. Moss is the selling agent for a number of New England textile mills. He won a first lieutenancy while serving overseas during the late war and was also given the Croix de Guerre for bravery in action.

GALES FERRY

The Girls' class held a business meeting with their director, Mrs. Walter T. Clark at her home Friday afternoon. Miss Marjorie Gates was elected president; Miss Myrtice Colman, vice president; Miss Rose Norcross, secretary; Miss Helen DeRusha, treasurer. It was voted to pay $3 toward the street lighting system of the village. The girls decided to form a demonstration team this year. The lessons in cooking will be resumed October 2.

At the meeting of the selectmen Frederick W. Burton, Samuel L. Lester and Leslie P. Gray and Town Clerk William I. Allyn, with Registrars Billings T. Avery and G. A. Montgomery, held at the Country club house Saturday afternoon, for the purpose of making voters, but two appeared to be admitted to the electors oath.

Mr. and Mrs. Noyes P. Gallup and party of Cleveland, Ohio, who were motoring through the New England states, were callers in Gales Ferry, Sunday afternoon. Mr. Gallup was a native of Ledyard and his early life was spent here.

Robert Miller, radio operator on the S. S. Beaconlight, arrived Saturday from Boston to visit the home of his aunt, Mrs. Andrew P. Miller, for a short time. Mr. Miller was accompanied by his grandmother, Mrs. Maria Svenson, who returned to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Miller, after spending several weeks with Boston relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Avery of New York were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Risdon.

Mrs. John A. Ferguson and Mrs. Ella Draper of Norwich, motored here to call on Mrs. J. Otis Winchester at her summer home Monday afternoon

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Lewis, Jr. (Katherine Risdon), sailed on the Aquitania September 19 from Cherbourg after spending the summer touring Italy, Austria, Switzerland, France, Ireland, Scotland and England. They will join Mrs. Lewis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Risdon, at their summer home here after their arrival in New York.

Mrs. Charles H. Winchester left the cottage of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. Otis Winchester, Monday afternoon, to spend several days with Mrs. Belle Carpenter at Fort Point.

Mrs. Clarence Moxley of Bridgeport is the guest of Mrs. Moxley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Minor Moxley, before leaving to join her husband at Miami, Florida, for the winter.

Frank A. Davis and his sisters, the Misses Emma and Margaret Davis, with Walter Hill of Norwich, were callers at Miss Davis' cottage Saturday afternoon

Improvements are being added to the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Risdon. Mr. Risdon who has been spending a short time here left for New York Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Fanny A. Molthrop, who has been the guest for several days of Mrs. Frank L. Lathrop in Norwich, returned Monday.

POTSDAM, Sept. 23—(A. P.)—Friedrich Ebert, son of the late president of Germany, has become editor of the Social Democratic Volksblatt, a radical organ. He formerly was editor of the Social Democratic parliamentary news service of Berlin.

Many Lepers in Korea

There are 4300 lepers in Korea listed in the official records and several times this number not listed, says C. Shimoka, chief of administrative affairs, who recently warned the provincial police chiefs that measures must be taken to prevent the spread of the disease. Treatment is already being given many of the sufferers and it is planned to organize regular colonies for their benefit.

how much privacy have your telephone calls?

In many homes, the telephone is in the living room, or in the nearby hall. There are people present, members of the family or guests. The telephone rings, is answered, and the general conversation is interrupted in favor of one half of a telephone dialogue.

Is that the situation in your household?

An extension telephone will prevent this. Where the telephone is in the living room, an extension in a bedroom, for example, will enable you to make or answer a call without disturbing the family circle. It will also prove convenient when the telephone rings late at night; and in an emergency, a telephone at your bedside will save the minutes when they count.

An extension telephone can be located wherever you want it. Its cost is less than 2 cents a day (after a moderate connection charge), and in convenience alone it is worth many times that amount.

Call our local Business Office today and tell them that you don't want to do without so inexpensive a convenience any longer.

A Bargain In Quality

Fine One-Profit Studebaker Coach

—at a new low price

$1325 Delivered for Cash in Norwich

Or, under Studebaker's fair and liberal Budget Payment Plan, this Coach may be purchased out of monthly income with an initial payment of only $445.00 Down

THIS Standard Six Coach has always been a wonderful value—a leader of the Studebaker line. Yet on August 1st, its previous low price was reduced one hundred dollars.

Today you can buy the same fine car without a single change in equipment or construction—at this new low price which only further emphasizes the Studebaker policy of offering you a "bargain in quality."

Here is a truly fine coach—built throughout from quality materials and careful workmanship. Fine northern white ash and hard maple are used in body construction. We pay a premium to obtain the toughest grades of steel. The upholstery is a durable woolen fabric — the windshield and windows are real plate glass. Extra equipment includes a gasoline gauge, clock, stop light, etc.

Here is a Coach with a gasoline gauge on the dash

According to the rating of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce this Standard Six Coach is the most powerful car of its size and weight. Full-size balloon tires and an especially designed steering mechanism add to its riding and driving ease. A completely machined crankshaft gives perfect engine balance and reduces vibration to a minimum.

Yet this Standard Six Coach sells for no more than competing cars—its low price is made possible by the Studebaker policy of one-profit manufacture.

There are only two cars manufactured on this one-profit basis. Studebaker in the fine car field, and the Ford in the low priced field. Only in these two cases does one company in its own plants make all bodies, all engines, all clutches, steering gears, differentials, springs, gear sets, gray iron castings and drop forgings.

This one-profit policy not only eliminates the extra profits of outside parts and body makers — but it also makes possible unit-built construction. All parts for Studebaker cars are designed, engineered and built as a unit. And being built as a unit they function as a unit—which results in years longer life, scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation, greater riding comfort, lower repair costs and much higher resale value.

But the only way to judge this Standard Six Coach is to see it—to actually sit behind the wheel and drive it through the thick of traffic, over the steepest hills and rough country roads. Then, and only then, can you completely appreciate its amazing power, its velvet smoothness and wonderful riding qualities.

THIS IS A STUDEBAKER YEAR

Firestone

Double the Mileage at Half the Cost

Only a few years ago a 32 x 4 cord tire listed over $50.00. Today, you can buy the highest quality 32 x 4 tire—a Firestone Gum-Dipped Cord—for about $26.00.

Last spring crude rubber cost tire makers around 40 cents a pound. Today, it is over 90 cents a pound.

It was not so long ago that 7,500 miles represented the average life of a cord tire, while today, 15,000 miles—and more—is only the usual performance for a Firestone Gum-Dipped Cord.

Due to large, concentrated production, specialized machinery and simplified factory methods, together with economical distribution, Firestone is able to keep tire prices low—no matter where the price of crude rubber goes.

And, because of special Firestone processes, chief among which is Gum-Dipping, motorists are today getting thousands of extra miles by using Gum-Dipped Cords.

Gum-Dipping is an exclusive method used by Firestone. It is an extra process, carried out in special Gum-Dipping plants, after which the cords are put through the usual calendering machines. Gum-Dipping insulates and impregnates every fiber of every cord with rubber, and practically eliminates internal friction and heat, and builds strength and endurance into the tire.

In the day-in and day-out service of taxicabs, buses and trucks—on the cars of hundreds of thousands of motorists everywhere—Gum-Dipped Cords are giving unheard-of mileage, dependability and satisfaction.

Get ready for the coming months of slippery pavements and bad roads. Assure yourself of greater safety, comfort and economy by equipping now with Firestone Full-Size Gum-Dipped Balloons.

NEW ENGLAND PROBLEMS

On several occasions representatives of New England states have gotten together for the purpose of discussing common problems. The idea is an excellent one, but there is less certainty that it always accomplishes all that is expected. Nevertheless since nothing is gained without trying there is virtue in endeavoring.

Next month, power, agriculture and marketing problems will be discussed at a conference to be held in Worcester. It is needless to say that these are subjects which lie close to the hearts of the people of New England. Each of the six states are striving in their own way to deal with these matters but they realize that there is need for uniformity, that they cannot live entirely to themselves and that by joining hands the desired results may be much more easily and quickly gained.

In the matter of natural resources New England is still rich. It seeks cheap power, it is bothered by difficulty in getting fuel and yet it has failed to bring under development the many water privileges which are waiting to be harnessed. Part of New England still refuses to permit hydro electric current generated within its limits to be sent into other states. Although the New England states are able to take care of the demands for foodstuffs to a much greater extent than it does, great sums are spent in purchasing them elsewhere and in paying freight charges on such purchases. New England production has not been developed to the point it should be in many directions. Connecticut can raise more supplies than it does and so can the others.

In the matter of agricultural production no small difficulty is to be encountered because of the marketing conditions. Inability to get the goods raised, or that could be raised, to those who want them is a condition which ought not to exist.

It is a case where those affected should not sit down and accept the conditions as without remedy. The situation calls for improvement and through such a conference as has been planned and possibly continuous good strides should be made in the right direction. New England cannot give too early attention to New England problems.

FIGHTING GOVERNMENT WASTE

Efforts to bring about a reorganization of the departments of the federal government are by no means new. The need of such action has been recognized from time to time both in the interest of efficiency and economy. Government waste is large enough without tolerating it in any such manner.

Government reorganization has taken place at different times and it has been persistently urged for the past several years, but progress is altogether too slow. It is a matter which rests with congress and congress has a personal interest in the matter on which it is somewhat difficult to get a commission to agree, or in case of proposed legislation to get early action. It is easily recalled what happened to the plan that was put forth when President Taft named an efficiency and economy commission only to have support for it denied by the democratic representatives, and even though a reorganization was advocated by President Harding and a plan brought forth it has not as yet received the action of congress. It was the senate in this instance which stood in the way.

What will be done with this matter by the coming congress it is impossible to say. As long ago as Senator Aldrich was in congress it was claimed that a government saving of $300,000,000 could be effected. The estimate by Senator Curtis and Secretary Hoover is only slightly under that figure at the present time.

Senator Edge of New Jersey is desirous that the president be given authority to reorganize the departments. With a thorough understanding of his policies it can be believed that such would be an excellent move. A Coolidge reorganization would be a good thing and thorough. It is not to be supposed that congress will confer any such authority, but if it isn't ready to do that it should deal with the problem itself and act in a manner which would disclose to the country that it is sincerely giving this matter the attention which it deserves.

DEALING WITH MURDERERS

Out in Chicago where there have been so many murders, attention is directed to the fact that two gunmen have been convicted of murder in connection with the raid and robbery which they conducted in a hotel and sentenced to be hanged. In spite of the fact that Chicago has so many killings there is no little difficulty experienced in getting the penalty of capital punishment applied.

Juries are disposed to extend leniency. They are inclined to say life imprisonment instead of death when the crime calls for the latter, but it has even gotten to the point where jurors recognize the weakness of their own conduct if we are to judge by the explanation offered that those who were holding out for life imprisonment were won over to capital punishment because of the fear that the former verdict would not "stick."

There wasn't any question but what the accused were guilty as charged. The jury was of one mind on that point and had the advocates of life imprisonment felt that such a verdict would have meant what was indicated the action of the jury might have been different, but experience has been different, and, as the Chicago News points out, "The escape of convicts, the danger of political interference with justice, the improper use of the pardoning power—all these convinced the jury that a life sentence does not necessarily prove to be anything of the sort. It may mean no more than a few years' confinement with all sorts of illegitimate privileges and opportunities for escape."

It is of course easily recalled how the fact that a prisoner may be able to sing, play a violin, write or display skill in one or many directions has served as good and sufficient grounds for obtaining his pardon. It seems to be sufficient to have his crime forgotten. The many ways in which the ends of justice can be defeated seem to have made their impression upon one jury, but it is unfortunate that it will require more than one jury to stop up all such avenues.

AMBASSADOR TO JAPAN

The selection of Charles McVeagh as ambassador to Japan is acceptable to the Japanese government and it should be to the people of this country.

Since President Coolidge has been called upon to fill places in the diplomatic corps he has impressed the country by the character of the men he has chosen. It is a case of naming men who are fitted for the work to be done rather than the payment of political debts. He is concerned with the proper discharge of the duty that rests upon him as chief executive.

It is to be realized that the post at Tokio is an important one. The role of ambassador there is not to be filled in a haphazard manner, but in the choice of Mr. McVeagh, not only a lawyer of high standing but a man qualified to carefully represent the country has been selected. The appointee has not been picked because of his work in other countries as an envoy but it does happen that he comes from a family which has furnished men who have filled public office with high credit to themselves and the country. Though not a member of the diplomatic corps of this country at this time it can be said that he comes from a family of diplomats with his father and grandfather rendering similar service for their country. Of them it is said that they were not politicians and in serving as ambassadors did not act as politicians, but gave to the post the best that was in them. There are good reasons for believing that the president made his selection with the idea of getting such service and that he has picked the man to give it.

THE WISCONSIN CONTEST

The political situation which has developed in Wisconsin simply indicates the complications which prevail there. Previous to the primary it was evident that while there was much opposition to LaFollette it was not united. This was disclosed by the several candidates among the republicans running as his opponents. Even though he received a majority over the field the division was enough to have made it impossible for any of the opposition candidates to win.

Inability to get the opposition to unite upon a candidate at the primary continued after the big LaFollette vote. It was apparent that Leroy Wilcox was the logical one to whom anti-LaFollette support should have been given as an independent candidate on election day, but it was impossible to get it. None of those running in the primary could get the endorsement of all the others. The result is that Dithmar, a former lieutenant governor and a former LaFollette man has been agreed upon for the independent candidate for United States senator.

It is a most unusual situation when a candidate who is carrying the real republican banner and who is prepared to uphold republican principles if elected should be obliged to enter the election contest as an independent but such is made necessary because of the manner in which young LaFollette running as a republican but promising to combat republican policies misrepresents and befuddles the situation.

LaFollettism has become so thoroughly impregnated in Wisconsin that it will be difficult to eradicate it. Only by united opposition can it be accomplished if at all. It is a hard, uphill and unpromising struggle which the Dithmar leadership has undertaken. If he succeeds it will be all the more to his credit.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Every frost brings us nearer to Indian summer.

Except for those which are sheltered, the days of the porch swing are drawing to a close.

Because LaFollette has gone does Senator Borah consider it necessary to assume the role?

Once again it is possible to tell what season it is by the canning and pickling aromas that come from the kitchen.

Perhaps that story about Berkshire crows stealing golf balls might be swallowed if they didn't always pick out the dollar ones.

That absent minded Australian professor who arrived in London a year ahead of the convention he desired to attend has the satisfaction of knowing he wasn't tardy.

Has that Russian inventor who claims to have constructed an accumulator that will furnish sufficient energy to drive a car ten days succeeded in harnessing vodka?

Is that disposition which prevailed at the last session of congress to prevent the recommended cut in taxes from being made going to be employed in the next to force a bigger cut that the conditions will warrant?

FROM LUCILLE'S DIARY

A week ago the Canby Fullers, Ursula Moore, Dexter Haines, George Requier and I decided to run up to Hope lake for over Sunday. I suggested that Pine Lodge Inn would be a delightful place to stay.

"Can we get accomodations there on short notice?" asked Louise Fuller.

"Certainly," I relied. "I know the proprietor. I'll telephone that we are coming."

It was most disconcerting, after a rather hot and tiresome long drive to be informed at Pine Lodge that there was not a vacant room.

"But, Lucile, I thought you telephoned for reservations," said Dexter.

"I did try to, but the line was busy, so I sent a postal card. Didn't you get it?" I turned to the proprietor.

"Yes," he replied, "in this evening's mail. Maybe you can get in at the village hotel."

"That doesn't sound good to me," remarked Canby crossly, and everybody glared at me.

I merely smiled and said in my quick resourceful way that I had a charming solution for our difficulty."

"We can sleep at Hickory Dock." I looked around at our party triumphantly. "That's a darling place."

"But the Mainwarings aren't there," said the hotel proprietor. "They went to the city yesterday, and only the gardener is on the place."

"That's all right. Mary Mainwaring is an intimate friend of mine, and I feel perfectly at home in her house," I explained and with Louise and Canby Fuller looking very dubious, we all piled into our seven-passenger car and drove the quarter-mile to Hickory Dock. The doors were all locked and the gardener not in sight, but I discovered an open window, through which I climbed as none of the others would take the responsibility of entering in that way, and we were soon all comfortably settled in that really darling summer home. We ate the remnants of our lunch in the porch dining room, and it was so much fun that we decided to have some of our meals there. I offered to rise early and go with George Requier to the village for supplies.

"What you doin' in that house?" gruffly inquired a middle-aged man who met us at the door just as we were stepping out at 6:30 the next morning. "What right have you to be trespassin' here?"

"We aren't trespassing," I replied in my sweetest tone. "The Mainwarings are dear friends of mine, and I know they would be happy to have my friends and me use their house for a short stay. Aren't you Mr. Briggs, the gardener? I've heard Miss Mary speak of you often."

"I'm Bill Briggs, all right, but I ain't sure 'bout you yit."

"I can assure you, Bill, that this young lady does know your people well," said George. "Won't you have a smoke?" He handed our frowning inquisitor a cigar wrapped in a five bill.

"Well, I ain't saying you don't look decent and honest enough. I hope you be," he remarked in a slightly more friendly tone, and during our short visit he grudgingly got us ice, pumped water and filled the kerosene cooking stove, accepting with a protesting grunt the several more "honoriums" as Dexter called his frequent tips.

We had a perfectly ripping time, and we could hardly bear to leave on Monday morning. Louise and Ursula almost insisted that we wash all the dishes and sweep but I had instructed Briggs to get a woman from the village to put the place in order. It would have been a sad anticlimax for us to do all that grubby work.

Yesterday I had an indignant letter from Mary Mainwaring. She said that she, her parents and some guests arrived at Hickory Dock on last Thursday and found the place in frightful disorder and Briggs very ill after what she called a moonshine spree. She said they never gave "the poor fellow" money, but looked out for all his needs both winter and summer, and she said her father was furious about the tips which afforded him opportunity for this defection.

She made no allusion to the graceful note I left on her desk thanking her for the use of the cottage, but went on to say that she devoutly hoped that the next time I visited her she would be at home as her father and mother were greatly vexed by our depredations.

I cannot understand such a letter. It seems to me extremely ill bred.—Chicago News.

From Small Beginnings

Philip Scheidermann, the Typesetter, Proclaimer of the German Republic

The proclamation of a German republic was something that no one thought likely to occur in the years preceding the World war. In those days the glitter and pomp of military rule and the immense power of the German monarchy were such that it seemed the days of a German republic must be very far off. Some four years after the beginning of the World war, Philip Scheidemann, a man who had been a typesetter, stood before the imposing front of the Reichstag edifice and made the startling announcement that the republic of Germany had come into existence. The kaiser, who for so long had posed as a hero, had ignominously fled, and here, from the very seat of German power, a printer announced a republic!

When the boy who was to be the last German Kaiser was only 8 years old there was born in a very humble home another boy of whom the Hohenzollerns took no notice—Philip Scheidemann. In the years when the future kaiser was being trained to court and military life, the humbler boy was being trained to hard work. He was sent to school until he had learned the rudiments of education, and then was put to the earning of money. In the shop of a printer he learned the craft of setting type and managing printing presses. On the streets he saw the constant passing of soldiers and, like all other men in the German Empire of that day, he had to take a personal interest in the life of the soldier.

What he saw and what he experienced did not make him satisfied with the Germany of his time. Instead of continuing to set type, he began to write for papers, and finally at 30 to edit papers that urged, as far as was possible, the bringing about of a new order.

Thus it came about very naturally that the beginning of the World war found Philip Scheidemann one of the leading thinkers and leaders in Germany. He had been sent to the Reichstag to represent his fellow workmen, and he had developed into a powerful leader whom the kaiser could not help noticing. During the war the kaiser's great leaders frequently called upon the once obscure printer for his views. At first with a sense of loyalty to his country, Philip Scheidemann supported the government of the empire. Even a the last he felt it dangerous to abandon the imperial type of government. What he wished was greater privilege for the people, combined with system and order.

It was largely due to the firm hand of Philip Scheidemann that Germany immediately following the radical change in government, did not fall into the orderless unheaval of Russian Bolshevism.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

KAUAI, HAVEN FOR THE PN-9, NO. 1

"Kauai, northernmost island of the Hawaiian group, on which the crew of the long lost seaplane PN-9 No. 1 landed, has been the landing place of many other Americans because of its beauty and charm," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society. "This has well been called 'the Garden Isle,' for except on the northwestern side where high cliffs meet the sea, the whole island seems a gentle cone of luxuriant vegetation. Thousands upon thousands of acres are planted to sugar-cane and pineapples, and there are banana plantations and coconut groves as well. In many little irrigated valleys, too, one comes upon the characteristic rice paddy fields of the Japanese farmers.

"Numerous wealthy land holders on Kauai own great areas, some of the bigger ranches having their own railways, sugar mills, and canning plants. There are in addition, however, a considerable number of small farmers and gardeners. The entire population of the island is about 30,000.

"Kauai is roughly circular, about 25 miles in greatest length and 22 miles in width. In the center rises Mt. Waialeale, 'the wettest spot in the world.' On the summit of this peak more than 50 feet of water falls annually. The slopes of the huge mountain mass are gashed by many ravines, most of them covered with rank vegetation. Waimea Canyon, on the southwest, however, is a small scale Grand Canyon, 3,000 feet deep, in which rocks of wonderful color are exposed. This great gash, the barking sands of the southwest coast, the spouting rocks in which the sea gushes skyward, and the great cliffs and caves of the northeast coast, are some of the island's many special features of interest.

"Lihue, to which the rescued flyers were taken, is near the sea on the side of the island closest to Oahu, the island on which Honolulu lies. The plane was anchored in Nawiliwili Bay, the port of Lihue. This anchorage is protected by a breakwater built by the government."

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Chester I. Long, who has been chosen to succeed Charles E. Hughes as president of the American Bar association, is a distinguished Kansas lawyer who has been a representative in congress and a member of the United States senate. His home is in Wichita. He is a native of Pennsylvania, from which state his parents migrated to Missouri when he was five years old. He went to Kansas in early manhood, studied law and began practice in Wichita after being admitted to the bar. He was four times elected to congress, and was a member-elect of the house when the legislature decided to send him to the senate. In his contest for senator he defeated the celebrated "Sockless Jerry" Simpson. While Mr. Long was in the senate he was a consistent supporter of President Roosevelt.

Peter Asks Ol' Mistah Buzzard

By Thornton W. Burgess

The tongue that is not put to use
For being has no real excuse.
—Peter Rabbit.

Curiosity seldom is polite. As a rule it is impolite. It leads folks to do things that they wouldn't otherwise dream of doing. Now, among the people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows, little and big, it is a law that where their home it is very impolite indeed.

But Peter Rabbit's curiosity had become too great to allow a mere matter of impoliteness to stand in the way of trying to find out what he wanted to know. So he sat himself down at the foot of the tall, dead tree on which Ol' Mistah Buzzard delighted to sit and take his sun bath. "Ol' Mistah Buzzard," said he, "that it really is Buzzard a nest?"

Ol' Mistah Buzzard looked down at Peter. "Brer Rabbit," said he, "What business is that of yours?"

Peter had the grace to look a little bit ashamed. "I don't suppose, Mistah Buzzard," sai dhe, "that it really is any business of mine. The truth is, I know you have a nest. What I really want to know is, where that nest is. I haven't seen it anywhere."

Ol' Mistah Buzzard's eyes twinkled. "Ah reckon yo' haven't, Brer Rabbit," said he. "Ah don't mind telling yo' as an ol' friend that Mrs. Buzzard is a sittin' on two eggs this very minute. No, suh, Ah don't mind telling you that. But Ah reckon if yo' want to know where she is yo' will have to find her for yo'self."

"Will you tell me if I guess right?" asked Peter.

Ol' Mistah Buzzard thought this over a moment or two and then his eyes began to twinkle again. "Ah tell yo' what Ah'll do, Brer Rabbit," said he. "Ah'll give you just one guess. If your guess is right, Ah'll tell yo so."

Peter jumped up and down excitedly. "All right, Mistah Buzzard," said he, "that's fair enough. You see I almost know I know where that nest is. That is I almost know I know where to look for it. My guess is that it is over on the Big Mountain."

The twinkle in Ol' Mistah Buzzard's eyes twinkled more than ever. "Wrong, Brer Rabbit," said he. "Yo' done guess wrong. Ah reckon Ol' Mrs. Buzzard never done visit the Big Mountain. She done look down on it from way up in the blue, blue sky, but that's as near it as she ever has been."

You should have seen Peter's face fall. He was more puzzled than ever and of course this meant that he was more curious than ever. He knew that Ol' Mistah Buzzard was telling him the truth. He knew that when Ol' Mistah Buzzard said that she was not on the Big Mountain and never had been there, it was exactly so. This being so, why of course that nest must be somewhere there in the Green Forest. All that he had gained from Ol' Mistah Buzzard was the knowledge that he had guessed rightly in thinking that Ol' Mrs. Buzzard was sitting on eggs and that those eggs were not over on the Big Mountain. That was something, but oh dear, how his curiosity had grown! He thought he knew all about the Green Forest. If anyone had told him that a person as big as Mrs. Buzzard could hide her nest so that he couldn't find it, he would have said that that was impossible. But it has been done. He knew where the nest of Blacky the Crow was. He knew where the nest of Redtail the Hawk was. He knew where the nest of Hooty the Owl was. He knew where the nest of Plunger the Osprey was. It certainly seemed that Mrs. Buzzard must have a nest as big as any of those nests yet he hadn't been able to find it.

"I will find it," said Peter. "Yes, sir, I will find it if I never do another thing."

OWNERSHIP OF STREET CAR SYSTEM WORRIES SEATTLE

SEATTLE, Sept. 23—(A. P.)—While Seattle is paying $833,333.33 a year and interest to purchase its street car system, taken over in 1919 from Stone & Webster of Boston for $15,000,000, more and more cattleites are riding to their work in their own automobiles, and the administration is alarmed at the decrease in business.

At the suggestion of David W. Henderson, manager of the system advertising has been resorted to in an effort to urge the people to use the cars of the city lines. The motormen and conductors offered to help in the campaign if their request for increased pay were granted, but as this would amount to $750,000 annually the offer was rejected by the city council.

William Pitt Trimble, city planning commissioner, has suggested that Seattle must start to build a new transit system. More speed, he argued, would make things pay. He urged immediate expenditure of $4,000,000.

In the meantime the city has offered $1,200,000 for the single private line remaining in the city. This was in response to demand from residents along that line, but its stockholders have objected that the price is too low.

PAIN MAKES CHINESE OPIUM VICTIMS SAYS, MISSIONARY

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 23—(A. P.)—Chinese smoke opium because they know no other way to banish pains or fatigue, said R. A. MacLeod, who recently returned from seven years as a missionary of the Disciples of Christ in Tibet, and who will make one of the principal addresses at the international convention of the church here, October 6-11.

The Chinese are of great self-control but, "like the rest of the human race, they are subject to the pains and ills of life," Mr. MacLeod declared.

In Yunnan province, which is as large as California and with twice the number of inhabitants, the missionary pointed out, there is only one dentist and two doctors. If a man has a tooth ache he knows no other means of relief except to smoke opium.

Transportation facilities in the province are such that goods have to be carried by the people from one town to another, sometimes a man will carry a burden of 100 pounds 25 miles a day for 15 days, said Mr. MacLeod, and at the end of each day's journey finds relief from his exhaustion smoking the opium pipe.

"So it is," the missionary explained "that from pain which cannot be relieved by any other known means, and from fatigue and exhaustion, the Chinese have become victims of the opium habit."

SOVIET RUSSIA CHARGES FEE TO LISTENING IN ON RADIO

MOSCOW, Sept. 23—(A. P.)—Broadcasting in Soviet Russia is still in its infancy, it began only a year ago, after the Council of Commissars decreed permitting private individuals to own small amateur receiving sets.

There are four broadcasting stations in Moscow and one each in Leningrad, Kharkov and Kieff. The biggest Moscow broadcasting station, "Komintern" works upon a wave length of 1,438 meters. It broadcasts daily concerts and newspaper information in the form of a radio-gazette, which is believed to be the only radio-newspaper in the world.

The other Moscow stations are of a smaller capacity. Political education seems to be the chief object of their broadcasting programs. Anti-religious propaganda is also finding its way through the broadcasting stations, which have special programs adapted for children and adults.

Three radio weeklies are published in Moscow, with a total circulation of more than 150,000.

Preliminary registration for the possession of receiving sets has now been abolished and the sale of radio receiving sets has been made free. A fee of $1.50 must, however, be paid to the authorities for listening in. The manufacture of radio sets has been monopolized by the state, and the import of appliances from abroad is forbidden.

JUVENILE AIRCRAFT MODELS WILL COMPETE FOR HONORS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—(A. P.)—Young America, with a bent for aircraft, is now engaged in building and operating toy models to be flown in conjunction with the more spectacular national air races to be held at Mitchel Field, N. Y., October 8, 9 and 10. Officials of the National Aeronautic Association here, which is sponsoring the contest, believe that this interest evinced by juveniles in flying augurs well for the future of aviation in the United States.

The Mulvihill Model Trophy will be awarded the winner of this contest, with eight prizes, ranging from $200 to $10 open to competition. Hand-launched, model airplanes, driven by rubber strand motors will figure in the duration race. The maximum number of contestants is 60.

No restrictions are placed on the design of the model, except that it shall have a wing span of 40 inches maximum. The only motive power allowable is that derived from the use of rubber bands.

The aeronautical terms used by the juvenile fliers, officials of the National Aeronautic Association said, would do credit to automotive engineers. The young contestants often use Japanese paper, with the white of an egg for glue, to make the wing as light as possible. Egg beaters are brought into play to turn the rubber bands, which furnish the motive power, for a while.

The winner at Dayton, O., last year was Robert V. Jaros, of Chicago, and several other Chicago boys won places in the unique contest.

Tomb of Noted Japanese Found

TOKYO, Sept. 23—The tomb of Sharaku, one of the most famous caricaturists in old Japan, whose humorous pictures of the actors of his day are treasured by lovers of art, especially in Europe, is reported to have been discovered in the Hongyoji Temple, Tokushima, by Dr. Ryuzo Torii, the noted anthropologist, who is now staying there investigating ancient relics. The whereabouts of this tomb has heretofore been one of the interesting problems for artists, and for Sharaku experts in particular.

American Buys Dutch Windmill

THE HAGUE, Sept. 23—(A. P.)—The windmill at Blarieum, one of the best known old mills in Holland, is reported to have been bought by a New York lawyer. It will be removed to the purchaser's estate at Rhinebeck on the Hudson.

Stories That Recall Others

Rubbing it In

Mrs. K. noted for her good dinners was entertaining a minister and other guests who had been invited to meet him. He was asked to say grace. He began, to the amusement of his hostess and the amazement of the other guests: "Oh, Lord, give us strength for the task now before us," etc.

A friend asked the hostess whether he had ever eaten there before.

Far Ahead of Mother

A boy of eleven, of a prominent family, had been chastised in school for smoking. The school authorities reported the incident to his parents for their attention. The mother was astonished to think her son at such a tender age would smoke and when he arrived home she called him for a serious lecture on the subject. It was a mother to son plea that she made for better conduct and less association with companions who had evil influences.

"You know, Charles," she said in a reprimanding tone, "that every time you associated with those bad boys you get into some kind of trouble."

"Why, mother," said the lad of eleven years, "I haven't smoked with those alley boys for two years.

How mother finally adjusted the situation was not told.

BROUGHT RELIEF AFTER 2 YEARS SUFFERING

"The makers of Tanlac will always have my warmest thanks, for I don't consider it any exaggeration to say I owe my life and present good health to Tanlac," is the striking statement of Andrew Groeschner, Sreman.

"Words simply can't express the misery I endured for 2 years from indigestion. At times gas pains would catch me around the heart and almost cut off my breath. These awful pains would last two and three hours. My nerves were all unstrung. I slept poorly and got in such a bad way that my days seemed to be shortening rapidly.

"I tried everything, but disappointment was my only reward until I began taking Tanlac. I have been taking Tanlac off and on for a year now and feel so different that there's no room for comparison. I eat good and feel that Tanlac has given me a new lease on life."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute.

SMALLEST POTATO CROP FORECASTS HIGH PRICES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Conn., Sept. 23.—That potato prices this winter are likely to be high as a result of the short crop, which according to government forecasts is the smallest, with one exception, in twenty-four years, was the statement here of Fred V. Waugh, extension economist of the Connecticut Agricultural college. Mr. Waugh's accurate predictions on potato prices in the past have attracted much attention, and his remarks are of interest to potato growers of this and other states.

The Connecticut crop has this year been good, which puts the potato growers of this state in particularly strong position if Mr. Waugh's predictions materialize. The increased potato plantings on tobacco land in the Connecticut valley are to a certain extent responsible for the larger crop in this state this year.

Mr. Waugh's statement follows: "The September forecasts made by the U. S. department of agriculture indicate a probable production of almost exactly three bushels per person in the United States. Since 1901 there has been only one year with a lower per capita production, and that was 1916 when we had a production of 2.5 bushels per person. In 1911 we had another year of low production, there being about 3.1 bushels per person of potatoes grown in this country. Probably many farmers in the state remember the remarkably high prices of potatoes in 1911 and 1916.

"The average per capita production in recent years has been about 3.7 bushels. The report for this year indicates that we will be short over one-half a bushel for each person in the country. A reduction of the supply to this extent is bound to have its effect on prices. At the present time prices are depressed which is due to increased shipments from late producing states such as Maine and Minnesota, which were encouraged to dig early by the high prices at the beginning of the season. These low prices should be only temporary, however, and as soon as the digging season is over we should see an increase in prices."

BEQUESTS TO NIECES LIVING IN OLD LYME

The will of Anna Trunx McBride, who died on May 30, last, and was an aunt of Elizabeth Truax Wood and Nancy Stone Truax of Old Lyme, Conn., on file for probate in New York, directs her estate of "over $10,000" in personality, after all debts are paid, to be divided as follows:

The resident to Abraham Bassford, grandson, of No. 33 Beekman street, in trust, until he becomes 30 years old; the tw nieces at Old Lyme equally, the wardrobe and diamond cross, Lida Arosemen, friend, of No. 640 Madison avenue, a ruby and chain bar pin and gold lorgnon, valued at about $500.

Mrs. McBride was a sister of the late Judge Charles Truax and a member of the New York city chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Just exactly how much "over $10,000" she left will not be known until, under the direction of Surrogate O'Brien, the estate is appraised for inheritance taxation.

FUNERALS

Alfred L. Morrill.

At 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon the funeral of Alfred L. Morrill, of 36 School street, was held from the parlors of Undertaker C. A. He lived at Crystal Lake for the past eight years.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Eliza Talbott Wheeler; two sons, Charles and Elmer Wheeler of Plainfield, N. J., and four grandchildren.

The funeral was held at his home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. E. A. Legg, pastor of Crystal Lake Methodist church conducted the service. Burial was in Plainfield, N. J.

NORWICH STORE WINDOWS MAKE FINE SHOWING OF GOOD GOODS

Norwich stores signalized their fall opening days, which are the three remaining days this week, by making most attractive window displays Wednesday evening, which convincingly demonstrated the variety, beauty, quantity and quality of the goods to be obtained in the stores of this city, the convenient shopping center for the Eastern Connecticut territory.

Autumn foliage, flowers, special lighting arrangements and special window fixtures contributed to the effectiveness of the window displays and set off the quality merchandise which the merchants placed in their windows.

At 7:30 Swahn's band inaugurated the fall opening, marching through the streets, and coming to a halt in Franklin square, where by special permission of Mayor Waters to the merchants, the band was allowed to be stationed for several concert selections. With the band on its march was the truck of the Norwich Electrical Co., carrying the signs to announce the fall opening days.

The store windows were in gala attire for the view of those who were out to view the window displays and on all sides were heard expressions of admiration for the taste and skill exhibited by the Norwich merchants in arranging their windows for this special event.

The judges, Mrs. Ozias Dodge, Arthur L. Peale and Edwin V. Ross, spent hours in a tour of inspection along the business streets to determine what stores were entitled to the prizes which had been offered, consisting of blue ribbons for first, red ribbons for second and white for honorable mention in the different classes.

The windows were marked on a basis of 100 points, of which 50 was given for attractiveness, 25 for salesmanship and 25 for originality. The report of the judges was completed after 10 o'clock, when it was found that one store, the Mohican Co., had won the distinction of securing a perfect marking, 100 points. This gave them first prize among the provision stores.

The following were the awards in the various classes:

Honorable Mention

Honorable mention was given to Quinn & Desmond, gents furnishings, Gutthelf & Co., millinery and fancy goods, Princess Shoppe, ladies wear.

Among the window displays of special note are the following:

Masses of green and purple grapes enclosed in square and diamond shaped frames form a base for the decoration of the Mohican Co., store window. Baskets of peaches add variety, red peppers and egg plant give a touch of color and a row of cauliflower is arranged along the bottom, while stand ranged along the bottom, while stands bananas finish off the display. A similar arrangement is also made just inside the door of the store to harmonize with the window display.

Autumn leaves and baskets of asters, with a stuffed pheasant make an attractive setting for the display of beautiful women's dresses, coats and hats at D. M. Lamite's.

Schwartz Bros Inc. have two large well lighted windows, in one of which is a lovely bedroom in gray and pink, the furniture in gray and the fittings of the room, electric lamps, hangings and bed covers in pink. The other window contains a beautiful dining set, the chairs upholstered in a blue tone, with rug and curtaining to harmonize.

At Savard's both windows are softly shaded by a red glow from ceiling lamps. Here men's suits, overcoats and scarfs, canes, gloves and the latest in fall hats are shown to advantage. Millinery, new fall coats, fur and fur trimmed, and the latest in women's and misses suits are shown.

Palms and potted plants are used extensively in the window decorations are The Boston Store. One window is devoted to the showing of the tiny girls dresses, bonnets and coats. Three large dolls are used as models to display white, pink and blue dresses and coats against a pink background. This window is a very attractive one. Another window at the Boston Store is devoted to the showing of the new fall hats, scarfs and coats for women and girls. The Boston Store's men's and boys' shop has two windows devoted to clothing for the man and boy. On the Shetucket street side the Boston store has one window devoted to beautiful night gowns and lingerie. Palms and potted plants are used to advantage in this window.

Dresses and coats, fur trimmed, and also women's and misses' hats are shown by the National Clothing Co. Their windows are attractively decorated in fall foliage and flowers.

At the White Star Clothing Co., one window is devoted to the showing of men's clothing and in the other there are on display beautiful fur coats and gowns. A huge basket of flowers is used in the window decorations.

A complete dining room set, even to a large standing clock, china closet with dishes, is shown in one of the windows of the Plaut-Cadden store. Their center window is devoted principally to musical instruments while appearing their other large show window is a fine display of jewelry, Victrolas, clocks, watches and silverware.

Lee & Osgood have a unique display in one of their windows. This is a representation of a corn field against a white and green background. At the left of the "corn" field is a large sign with the words, Get the Corn Out Before Heavy Frosts. In the center of the window is an old silo showing a corn coming through a hole and with a sign "Fall Opening". The window arrangement is a clever bit of advertising for Slaughter Corn, a corn remedy. In their other window Lee & Osgood have a pleasing exhibit of Pyralin. Purple and white streamers are used in the decorative scheme.

One of the most attractive window displays is that shown by the Porteous and Mitchell Co. In each window there are large panel backgrounds of Italian gardens, mountain and lake scenery, these being the work of Joseph P. Farrell, who painted all the panels. Large baskets of flowers and potted ferns are used in the floral decorations. One window is devoted exclusively to millinery, another to dress goods, black, yellow, purple, etc., draped artistically in their main window is shown coats, gowns, etc., in a varied display. Panels also adorn the men's store window exhibit.

Men's and boys suits and hats are shown to advantage at Brennan's store on Shetucket street, potted plants being used extensively in the decorations. The latest in gowns, fur coats and women's and misses' dresses are also on display.

At Quinn and Desmond's men's store is seen an attractive exhibit of The Evolution of a Hat. Here are shown the start and finish of the modern felt hat. Splendid furs, fleeces of furs and skins are also on display.

Ladies fur coats, and men's hats and suits, all fall models, are attractively displayed by James C. Macsherson at his store on Main street.

The O'Neil Electric company have both their show windows banked in fall foliage. In one window they are showing one of the latest washing machines and in the other there is a varied display of electric percolators, heaters, toasters, lamps and lamp shades.

LOWTHORPE MEADOWS TO HOLD INDIAN VILLAGE

The Indian village fair to be held in Lowthorpe Meadows has aroused much enthusiasm on the part of the townspeople. Each person connected with the movement has worked zealously to make the fair a success. The general aspect will be that of an Indian reservation. A large company of girls will be dressed in Indian costumes, and the members of Boy Scout Troop No. 20, of Norwich Town, in uniforms, will have an important part on the programme.

Lemuel M. Fielding, (Chief Occum) will be a prominent guest and will have on hand plenty of hoe cakes and other novelties. Princess Tah Yah Moose, direct descendant of Chief Brant, chief of the Mohawks, will also be present. The Indian tepees will be decorated with bright orange, to represent the setting sun; and navy blue to represent clear sky, these indicating the natural colors of the Mohawk Tribe.

Dancing on the lawn will be a special feature and there also will be fancy dances interpreted by Mrs. William N. Andrews' pupils. An orchestra of four pieces will be in attendance. Francis Gilman is chairman of the lighting and decorating committee, while the several other committees include: Cafeteria, Walter G. Hitchon, Jr., Edwin H. Sevin, Frank Crowell, Benjamin H. Palmer; fancy work, Mrs. Edwin H. Sevin, Miss Elizabeth Sevin; cake and candy, Mrs. Walter G. Hitchon, Jr., Mrs. Frank Crowell; ice cream and soda, Robert Avery; grab bag, Miss Marion L. Bailey, Miss Louise F. Bailey and Mrs. Albert Van Wagenen, Jr.

Those who will impersonate Indian girls will include, Misses Dorothy Heath, Lucile Browning, Eleanor Moore, Louise Sterry, Ruth Hyde, Mary Sullivan, Maria Marchand, Rose Durr, Bernice Hopkins and Bessie La Pierre.

The scouts are: Irving Manning, John Dodge, Walter Haun, Reginald Avery, Luther Whaley, Harold Smith, John Adams, Crosley Peck, Melvin Pieretti and William Brosofske, Jr.

Archery (bow and arrow shooting) will be in charge of Irving Manning, assisted by Luther Whaley; bowling, in charge of John Dodge, assisted by Walter Haun; doll ten pin game, in charge of Reginald Avery, assisted by William Brosofske and Harold Smith; scout handiwork table in charge of Melvin Pieretti assisted by Crosby Peck.

The young women will assist at the various tables and with the grab-bag. The proceeds will be used for the improvement of Lowthorpe Meadows for the welfare and comfort of children in future years; also a portion is to be used for the scout camp of Troop No. 20, Boy Scouts, of Norwich Town. Attorney George Houston Gilman is president of the Lowthorpe Association, which stands back of the project.

WEDDING

Banas-Maryeski.

A pretty wedding took place at St. Joseph's church Monday morning when Rev. Peter Sroka united in marriage Michael J. Banas, of 149 Sachem street, and Miss Mary Bertha Maryeski, daughter of Mrs. Bertha Maryeski, of New London. The bride wore white satin trimmed with Spanish lace and wore a tulle veil. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor was the groom's sister who wore white silk crepe and carried pink roses. There were three bridesmaids who wore white silk crepe dresses and carried pink roses. The best man was a cousin of the bride from New York and there were three ushers.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the groom's home for about 125 guests, who included friends and relatives from New York, Bridgeport, Boston, New Bedford, New London and Willimantic.

Later in the day the couple left for their honeymoon trip to Boston and other places. Upon their return they will reside on Sachem street. The groom is employed in this city as a butcher and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Banas, of this city.

The bride received a large number of useful gifts, including a large sum of money.

Theatres Assisted Lunch Room

Much assistance toward the success of the lunch room conducted at the county fair by the Connecticut Council of Catholic Women was given by the local theatres, the Bliss and Palace as well as the Taftville, Baltic, Jewett City, Willimantic and New London theatres which flashed on their screen the slogan "Eat for Charity." This advertised the council's work and helped materially to swell the receipts at the fair, assistance which was greatly appreciated by the council members.

Many a man has been convicted of forgery because he took Solomon's advice and chose a good name for himself.

JUDGE BROWN SUGGESTS CITY PAY THE COSTS

Judge Allyn L. Brown in the superior court at New London Wednesday suggested that the city of New London assume the actual costs of the mandamus proceedings brought against the city council by Samuel Shapiro and Louis Kenyon, who alleged at the time that the council ignored their application to erect a structure for business purposes in Jay street. After Attorney Morris Lubchansky, counsel for the plaintiffs and Director of Law Charles B. Whittlesey had argued on the matter, the court informed Attorney Whittlesey that he believed it to be fair that the city pay the actual costs, inasmuch as the city council apparently delayed action on the petition in hopes that the new zoning ordinance would be put into effect in the meantime.

Judge Brown stated that he merely offered the suggestion in view of the fact that his former suggestion as to the settling of the case had been followed by the plaintiffs and by the attorney for the city.

Attorney Lubchansky in asking that the city bear the actual costs, claimed that the petitioners were forced to take action in he matter in order to receive permission to go ahead with their plans and that he believed that they should not bear the actual costs, such as serving the subpoenas and entry fee, totaling $33.34.

He outlined the case stating that on Aug. 22 Messrs. Shapiro and Kenyon filed application with Building Inspector Benjamin R. Linicus and that the application was made out in accordance with instructions from him. Attorney Lubchansky asserted that the building inspector approved the petition and that on Aug. 24 the council met and approved other applications but did not approve this one. On Aug. 27 a special meeting of the council was called, said Attorney Lubchansky, for the express purpose of considering the matter. He stated that the petitioners were represented at the meeting and it was decided to take it up at the next council meeting on Aug. 31.

Attorney Lubchansky said that at this meeting the council ignored the application entirely and on the first Monday of this month the council again ignored the application. Attorney Lubchansky said that the law was clear on this point of actual cost. He said that the city council had upon its records no objections to the application but that the council acted arbitrarily in the matter, thereby forcing the applicants to take legal action in the matter. They did all they could and that was all there was left to do, said the attorney.

The attorney said that in his opinion taxpayers of the city of New London should not be compelled to go to court on such a matter unless they are reimbursed and that he believed the costs should be granted to the plaintiff.

Director of Law Whittlesey said that he differed with Attorney Lubchansky with regard to the payment of the actual costs by the city. He said that he also did not agree that the council should necessarily approve of an application just because it had been previously approved by the building inspector. The approval of the council is the "second check," said the director of law. He referred to the typewritten signatures and that the court had ordered something done which had not already been done when the application was called for. He said that he was decidedly against the city assuming the costs.

"Don't you think it's fair in view of what the council has done that the city take care of the taxable cost?" asked Judge Brown.

Attorney Whittlesey said that the city had not been served but that several persons had been served with papers, meaning the members of the city council. Attorney Lubchansky arose and explained that the law required that the subpoenas be served upon the councillors when such suit was being brought.

It was at this point that the court again stated that it seemed only fair to him that city assume the actual costs in view of the fact the council had apparently delayed the application being granted in hopes of the zoning ordinance becoming effective.

Attorney Whittlesey touched upon the fact that Mr. Kenyon had been presented in the local police court following an automobile being found parked for a long time in front of his garage on Franklin street and that the case was appealed to the court of common pleas with Kenyon denying ownership of the car.

"Well, what did you do with it?" it was dropped, wasn't it?" said Attorney Lubchansky.

"Yes," answered Attorney Whittlesey.

Attorney Whittlesey said that the garage in Franklin street had caused much annoyance to residents nearby and that the garage had been declared a nuisance by many.

Judge Brown again offered his suggestion that in all fairness the city should pay the actual costs and Attorney Whittlesey said that he would be obliged to confer with the city manager before he went any further and that the only reason he would approve of such an agreement would be because of the fact that the suggestion which Judge Brown made, regarding the case before, was adhered to. Judge Brown said that it was the only reason that he offered the suggestion at this time.

The case was continued until one week from Friday.

PORTRAITS PRESENTED TO COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY

At the annual meeting of the New London county historical society held in New London Tuesday at the Shaw mansion, the unveiling and presentation of a portrait of the late Frederic Bill of Groton, and the exhibiting, for the first time, of enlargements of photographs of Senora Carolina Ospina of the Republic of Colombia took place.

The following officers were elected: President—Ernest E. Rogers; vice presidents—George S. Palmer, New London; Christopher L. Avery, Groton; Daniel L. Phillips, Jewett City; secretary—Miss Elizabeth Gorton; treasurer—The Winthrop Trust Co.; advisory committee—Prof. Colin S. Buell, Miss Jane R. Perkins, P. LeRoy Harwood, Frank W. Chappell, Laurence W. Miner, Mrs. B. L. Armstrong, William H. Reeves, Benjamin T. Marshall, the Rev. Edward M. Chapman, Judge Arthur P. Anderson, Noank; Miss Alexandrine N. Trumbull, Norwich; Richard B. Wall, Mrs Elisha E. Rogers, Norwich; Mrs. George Maynard Minor, Carey Congdon, S. P. Willard, Colchester; William I. Spicer, Noank; Mrs. Frederic S. Newcomb.

The presentation of the Bill portrait was made by Judge Christopher L. Avery of Groton. It was given by Mrs. Bill at the request of the society and was painted by Bayard H. Tyler of Yonkers, N. Y.

The enlarged photographs of Senora Ospina and Senorita Ospina were from photographs loaned to the society by Mrs. Ospina during a visit with her daughter, to New London, on Sept. 23, 1923. The exhibition of the photographs was the occasion of an address by Senor Martinez of New York, director of the government information bureau of the Republic of Colombia, who in behalf of President Ospina, extended his gratitude to the society for the honor conferred upon the Republic of Colombia in exhibiting the pictures of the first lady of the land and her daughter, at its home. Accompanying Senor Martinez was Senor Guillermo Gutierres, of the consular service of Colombia, sent to New London by the consul general, who also made a brief address.

In connection with the short business meeting reports were read by Miss Elizabeth V. Gorton, secretary of the society and by Edward S. Huntley in behalf of the Winthrop Trust company, treasurer of the society. Brief reports were made by Prof. John Edwin Wells of Connecticut college in behalf of the publishing committee, Mrs. Edward Prentis in behalf of the membership committee, Miss Ruth Newcomb in behalf of the whaling committee, Miss Elsie C. Fengar in behalf of the souvenir committee and Mrs. Herbert L. Crandall in behalf of the Old Town Mill committee. President Rogers who was elected for his 21st year as president of the society, presided at the meeting.

Sailing from London, Sept. 5th, on the Minnekahda, they reached New York on the 14th, going to Bellport, L. I., for a week's visit with their brother, John L. Bliss. They arrived in Norwich this week. Miss Alice W. Cogswell accompanied the Misses Bliss for the first three months of their tour.

Poincare on War Guilt

"Those who have been closely connected with great events and who remember them in their minutest details feel that the truth must be obvious to any fair-minded person. But when they see the imagination of some and the dishonesty of others distorting facts out of all semblance to reality, they feel inclined to withdraw into themselves, to give up counting upon any man to refute such calumnies and to wait for time in its wisdom to reestablish the balance. This is a mistake. For falsehood is thus given an opportunity to outdistance truth and legend is allowed to take the place of history.

"It is unfortunately true that in friendly countries, and especially in the United States, the combined propaganda of Germany and the Soviets has sown confusion in the minds even of well-meaning men of high standing. They have actually forgotten that it was Germany who in 1914 made the decisive and irreparable decision by declaring war on Russia and on France, that it was Germany who violated Belgian neutrality, invaded France and devastated ten departments in the north and northeast, and that it was Germany who exhibited such barbarity on land and sea that the United States of America felt called upon to enter the lists

PECKINPAUGH VOTED MOST VALUABLE PLAYER IN THE AMERICAN LEAGUE

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Roger Peckinpaugh of the Washington club tonight was selected as the most valuable player in the American league for the 1925 season by a small margin over Al Simmons, youthful star who has been shining in the outfield for the Athletics.

Peckinpaugh, just finishing his fifteenth year as a major league shortstop, was given 45 points out of a possible 64, and Simmons received 41 points in the voting for the honor which was awarded a committee composed of one veteran baseball writer in each city of the American league.

By the method used to determine the award, each member of the committee picked the player whose work he thought had been of most value to his team this season and then ranked those eight players on ballots which give first place a value of eight points, second place, seven points, etc. by the rules governing the contest, active playing managers and previous winners of the trophy are not eligible to the prize.

The previous winners of the trophy were George Sisler, now manager of the St. Louis Browns for the season of 1922, with a total of 58 points; Babe Ruth of the Yankees for the season of 1923 with the highest possible total of 64 points; and Walter Johnson pitching ace of the Washington Senators for 1924 with 53 points.

The most valuable player on each team this season as established by the votes of the committee are: Washington, Peckinpaugh; Philadelphia, Simmons; Cleveland, Sewell; Detroit, Heilmann; St. Louis, Rice; Chicago, Sheely; Boston, Flagstead; New York, Combs, and Meusel (tied).

Twenty-nine players figured in the voting as follows:

Roger Peckinpaugh, ss	Washington 45
Al Simmons, cf	Philadelphia 41
Joe Sewell, ss	Cleveland 21
Harry Heilmann, rf	Detroit 20
Harry Rice, cf	St. Louis 18

PIRATES CAN LOSE ALL OF THEIR REMAINING GAMES

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—(A. P.)—Pittsburg went under the wire strong today and clinched the National League pennant the first the Pirates have won in 16 years. With only one game necessary to win the title, the Pirates made it doubly certain by defeating Philadelphia, while the Cardinals downed the Giants in both games of a double header. The standing tonight:

Pittsburgh	93	54	.633
New York	85	62	.598

Washington will have a chance tomorrow to clinch the American League pennant, by winning a double header from Cleveland if St. Louis defeats the Athletics.

However, the clinching of the pennant may be delayed if the Athletics continue to win and in that case the world's champions will have to win three of their remaining eleven games while the Athletics win their remaining eight games. The final standing then would be:

Washington	96	58	.623
Philadelphia	95	59	.617

The Senators are now 7 1-2 games in front, the Athletics having clipped a full game from the lead by taking a double header from the Browns while Washington was idle.

The standing tonight:

Washington	93	59	.656
Philadelphia	87	59	.596

HOLY CROSS FAVORITE IN CATHOLIC FOOTBALL CLASSIC

BOSTON, Sept. 23.—(AP)—New England's two Catholic college football elevens will meet at Boston late in November with Holy Cross a tremendous favorite, from present indications. In fact the purple of Worcester is expected to fly high throughout a schedule that includes games with Harvard, Vermont, Bucknell, Fordham, and Rutgers, besides the annual battle with its greatest rival, Cavanaugh's Boston college Eagles.

Holy Cross has powerful backfield, two mighty men in borken fields, a couple of extraordinary plungers, and a kicker who will stand with the best in New England, in the line alone there is question, for graduation took Captain Hilbary Mahaney, at right end, and the two tackles, O'Connor and Caton. House and Norton are probable selections for the tackle posts against Manhattan at Worcester on Saturday. They have shown power in practice.

Butler, a veteran, has been moved over to the right wing, replacing Mahaney, and McCoy, a 194 pound Boston lad appears to be Coach O'Donnell's favorite for the other extremity, although there are a half dozen candidates for the position.

A half score capable candidates are keeping the backfield situation somewhat in the air, but Glennon and McMahon appear to be certain at the halves, with Wise, Lowery, Ryan, Kittredge, Crowley, Comcowich and Wallis in line for plenty of activity during the season. Wallis and Ryan have been slightly hurt in practice. Glennon and Crowley are seasoned booters.

Boston college also lost one of its tackles, Koslowski, by graduation, but more than anything will miss the backfield star of past seasons, "Chuck" Darling. Darling did the kicking and threw most of the passes for the Eagles. Ward and Bill Cronin have departed from the backfield and Doyle is no longer at center.

Cavanaugh gathered his candidates on September 1 and for two weeks they have been going through daily scrimmageing at the Newton field. In that time some exceptional talent has appeared. Hardy and Wilcewiski appear to be well on the road to the tackle positions with two strong and adept guards, Captain Donaghue and McManus, available. Larkin, lacking somewhat in experience, seems the logical successor to Doyle in the center of the line at this time, while O'Connell and Beach, veterans, will be stationed on the wings.

A backfield that has seen considerable service but which requires first string experience, will comprise McKenney at full back, Murphy, Jack Cronin or Dower at the halves and McNamara or Crean calling signals.

The Boston college schedule would appear at first glance to be anything but hard. However, the last three games will be sufficient to test the best that Cavanaugh, old Dartmouth coach, can produce, in West Virginia, No. 7, West Virginia Wesleyan, November 14, and Holy Cross November 26.

YALE TEAM SCORES THREE TIMES ON SCRUBS

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 23. (AP)—The Yale varsity football team held to a no score practice game yesterday afternoon, took a big brace today and scored three touchdowns against the same scrub team that held them yesterday. With two exceptions the varsity lineup was the same as yesterday. Flaherty, freshman guard last year, took Wortham's guard position today, because of slight injuries to the latter in yesterday's practice. Richards was in Captain Joss' place at tackle which has usually been filled by Webster.

The rest of the varsity was Potts and Bradley, ends; Butterworth, tackle; Root, guard; Sturhahn, center; Bunnell, quarterback, and Kline, Allen and Cottle, backs. Late in the scrimmage Stew Scott took Potts' place at end, while Falling went in for Cottle.

Kline made two of the three touchdowns and Cottle the other. All were made through the line, Cottle added a point after one touchdown, but there was no goal after either of the other two.

During the scrimmage of the second varsity and the second scrubs, which followed the first string game, Fishwick, playing quarter, made a touchdown against the scrubs. Noble, back, kicked a goal. The other back field men were Caldwell and Barclay.

BOXERS FOR LOCAL SHOW ARRIVE TODAY

Today the leather-pushers, who show their wares on the Duwell A. C. card at Duwell field on Friday evening, will come to town and look over the scene of their coming conflicts. Shiek Leonard will come in from Wallingford with his manager Andy Parker and Milan Welch, while Tracy Ferguson will arrive tonight or early Friday morning. Young Flaherty of Lowell who has been in town off and on for the past week will be here today as will Young Rollinson of Shelton, state flyweight champion. Izzy Kaplan with his brother Noah and possibly Kid Kaplan, world's featherweight champion are due here Friday morning at the latest.

Promoter Jackie Wilson put in a busy day Wednesday at the field and everything is in readiness to accomodate the large crowd that is expected to attend the state championship bouts. Promoter Wilson said Wednesday evening that the advance sale of tickets had far exceeded the total sale for any previous show ever held in Norwich. There is a large number of reservations made for the Waterbury, Bridgeport and New Haven fans who have telephoned for seats for the coming state championship bouts. The local sale of tickets is the largest ever which shows that local people are appreciative of the sterling worth of the boxers at Duck's Sport Shop. Every boxer reports that he is well within the weight limits and in the best of condition.

This weighing-in business will mean little to the principals in the main bout, Johnny "Sheik" Leonard and Tracy Ferguson, as these boys are always in condition and ready to step into the ring at a minutes notice. Happy Rollinson who meets young Coulon of Taftville in the semi-final for the flyweight title, has been fighting with regularity and has no fears that the scales will not balance right for him.

Flaherty and Izzy Kaplan, the other two finalists, will make the weight with out any trouble.

WINS MOST HEATS BUT IS NOT THE WINNER

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 23. (AP)—Although Miss Ellen W. stood best in the summaries after the third heat of the Southern Hotel $1,500 stakes for 2:10 pacers, Star Ruth was declared the winner because he had won more of the purse than Miss Ellen W.

The race was divided into three heats, the purse for the first heat being $400 with $500 for the second and $900 for the last. Miss Ellen W. won the first heat and finished second in the next two. Star Ruth was out of the money in the first, finished third in the second and first in the last. All other races on the card were won in straight heats. Theodore Guy won the conclusion of the King stake, defeating both Peter Green and Phil O'Neil, which beat him earlier in the week.

The Horse Review Futurity pacing event brought only three starters in which the favored Becky Beall was last in each heat. Hollyrood Abigail, winning, though slightly lame.

The closest finishes of the afternoon came in the 2:17 trot. Margo was a straight heat winner, winning each heat from Kentucky Todd by a nose.

HOME RUNS FEATURE ATHLETICS' DOUBLE VICTORY

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23—The Philadelphia Athletics took both ends of a double header from St. Louis here today by scores of 6-3 and 7-2. Home runs played a prominent part in the double triumph. Hale's homer off Gaston with two on bases clinched the first game and successive home runs by Welch and Holt in the fifth inning put the second game in the victory column. Score:

TIGERS BAT FIERCELY AGAINST RED SOX

BOSTON, Sept. 23. (AP)—Detroit hit Fuhr and Adams savagely and defeated the Red Sox 15 to 1. Howard Ehmke started the game for Boston but retired in the fourth inning after one of his fast high ones struck Fred Haney, Detroit third baseman, on the head. Haney was carried from the field and later removed to the Peter Bent Brigham hospital. Early reports indicated that he was suffering from a slight concussion. Heilmann led the Detroit attack with three singles and a home run. The score:

GIANTS DOUBLE LOSS CLINCHES FLAG FOR PIRATES

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 23—The remaining 1925 National league pennant hope of the New York Giants faded out today when they lost a double header to the St. Louis Cardinals 8 to 0 and 5 to 2. The first defeat automatically clinched the flag for Pittsburgh.

Allan Sothoron was at his best in the first game. He held New York to seven hits. Greenfield and Bentley were found for fifteen safeties. Hornsby, Bottomley and Bell each made three hits.

The Cardinals won the second game in the fifth inning when they staged a batting rally which brought in six runs. The night cap was called after the sixth to allow the Giants to make a train. Score:

PRO GOLF TOURNEY REACHES THIRD ROUND

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—(A. P.)—Although much mediocre golf was displayed in second round matches of the professional golf championships at Olympia fields today, Tom Kerrigan of New York, set a record of 32 for the first nine of No. 3 course, and with a total of 69 on that links, defeated Dan Williams of New York. Williams shot a 71, which was second best score of the day.

The defending champion, Walter Hagen, obtained the easiest victory as his opponent, Mike Brady of New York, took 46 on the out nine of No. 4 course in the morning and 41 on the first half of No. 3, allowing Hagen to win, 7 and 6. Both players shot par on the second nine of No. 4, but aside from that neither played consistent championship golf. Hagen putted poorly at times, and Brady found many traps and other difficulties.

Hagen, as a result of his victory today, will clash tomorrow in the third round with Leo Diegel of New York, who had to score par over No. 3 course in the afternoon to win from BobbyCruickshank of Oklahoma City, 2 and 1. Cruickshank got a lead of one up on the first nine of No. 4 and kept it through the next half. Although he shot one above par on the out nine of No. 3, Diegel was perfect and came one up himself, through the next half. Although he shot one above par, on the hole with only one to go.

The closest match was between John Farrell of New York and Ray Derr of Cincinnati, Farrell grabbing the match on the 37th hole by bragging a birdie 4.

The hard won victory entitled Farrell to play tomorrow with Harry Cooper of Dallas, who won today from Jack Burke of Houston, 2 and 1.

Tommy Armour of New York and Morte Dutra of Aberdeen, Wash., had comparatively easy matches. Each winning six and five. The only two Chicago contenders, Bill Mehlhorn, formerly west open champion, and Al Espinosa, played evenly all day until Espinosa finally got tangled with a clump of trees on the 36th hole and lost one down.

Mehlhorn tomorrow will face Kerrigan, who showed himself capable of marvelous golf in his 69 round this afternoon.

CHAPMAN TECH ANNOUNCES 1925 FOOTBALL SCHEDULE

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Conn., Sept. 23—This season Chapman Tech will have a schedule that is much the same as of former years. Practically the only radical change in the schedule is the addition of LaSalle Academy of Providence. This game is to be played on LaSalle's home field. The remainder of the schedule looks like easy victories with the exception of the Norwich Free Academy. Reports say that the city up the river has a team that is expected to bring home the bacon. However that remains to be seen.

The opening game of the season will be Friday afternoon when Windham High school will journey to New London. Last week Windham and Stonington battled to a scoreless tie. As both teams are on Chapman's schedule it will be interesting to see what the outcome of these games will be.

The following is Chapman Tech's football schedule for this season: Sept. 26—Windham High at New London; Oct. 3, Pl

WESTERLY

Westerly petit jurors who reported at West Kingston Wednesday morning and qualified for duty will not have to report again for this September term of Superior court for Washington county until next Monday morning at 10 o'clock (Old Time). When the petit jurors were called, Robert M. Carr, undertaker of Westerly, under summons, did not go to the jury box with the other jurors, having been excused by Associate Justice Antonio A. Capotosto, who is presiding at this session, as he is exempt by law. Among the Westerly jurymen Henry J. Goulet, did not respond when his name was called and it was found that he had moved out of town.

William R. Chapman, timekeeper, who told the judge that he was also an overseer at the Cottrell Press Works, asked that he be excused, as there was no one to take his place. The judge remarking that this was a broad statement, asked him if he never went on a vacation and was told that he did. He was excused from further duty at this sitting of the court with the understanding that he report for [illegible] next term. Other jurymen [illegible] were Frank L. Crandall, [illegible] manager at the Wickford [illegible] who said that system [illegible] that expense were at [illegible] least two weeks. He [illegible] excused. Isaac A. Allen, painting contractor at Narragansett, Clifton P. Partelow, a mason at Thomas Pierce's place at Wickford were excused. Geo. W. Holgate of North Kingston is to report two weeks from Monday, and William H. Leslie a carpenter was excused also. The judge made it plain that the jurymen were not to expect to be excused permanently, but were to report at a following term of court.

At the Tuesday session of court but one divorce case was heard, that of Antoinette Cote Brunnelle vs. Donat Brunnelle. A decree was granted on grounds of neglect to provide.

A reception to the choir of the First Baptist church is to be given by E. Howard Clark tonight (Thursday) at his cottage at Pleasant View beach.

Real estate transfers on record at the office of the Westerly town clerk are as follows:

Sept. 18. George C. St. John of Wallingford, Conn., from Leonard C. Sanford et ux of New Haven, Conn., a tract of land with all buildings and improvements with boats and other personal property in boathouse, of about 5 and 7-10 acres, bounded westerly partly by Quonochontaug pond, southerly and east partly by Quonochontaug pond.

George E. Broughton to James J. Hagan, and wife of Providence a certain lot of land at Pleasant View Beach on the north side of Atlantic avenue and on the east side of a 30 foot passway.

Sept. 21. Shelter Harbor corporation to Rime. Esperanza Ganigue, of New York, lots No. 17 and 18 in section No. 21, Musicolony.

Sept. 21. Samuel H. Davis to Blasco Paladino of Bradford, R. I., lots No. 19 and 21 on Clark avenue, Pleasant View.

Louise B. Hasse et ux of Brooklyn, N. Y., to Henry B. Joy of Detroit, a lot of land at Napatree Point, Watch Hill, extending from Little Narragansett Bay to the Atlantic Ocean, with a right of way to the United States government property and between the properties of, Charles Beanfield and Susan Smith.

Friday night the members of the Junior World Wide Guild of the First Baptist church, Mrs. Howard Barnes in charge, will serve a supper to the mothers of the members, in the vestry of the church on Broad street.

The digger for the excavation of sewer trenches was started Wednesday morning on High street to work from the function of Dixon street toward Grove avenue, the work of the steam shovel having been completed on the stretch of High street from Narragansett avenue to Oak street. The end of Dixon street from High street to West street was closed to traffic, as the sewer trench on High street was open and the street impassable at the High street end.

Miss Marion M. Kelsey, after being the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac G. Smith and other Westerly relatives, returned Tuesday afternoon to Boston, to resume her duties in Brookline, Mass.

Mrs. H. Geary and sons Herbert and Albert Geary, left Westerly Tuesday by automobile for Beverly and Gloucester, Mass., to attend the funeral of Mrs. Geary's uncle.

Narragansett Commandery, No. 27, Knights Templar, Em. Sir Arthur E. Thompson, commander, held a special conclave in the asylum on High street, Wednesday evening. The temple degree was worked on a class of candidates. Light refreshments were served at the close of the conclave. Wednesday evening completed the commandery work for the year, as the 56th annual conclave will be held Wednesday evening, Oct. 7th.

The tenth and last evening band concert of the season in Wilcox park by the Westerly band, Charles O. Gavitt, director, will be given this (Thursday) evening, Sunday afternoon, possibly, Oct. 4th, a concert will be given. Thursday night's program of Italian music and popular airs follows:

Popular Air, Sonya, Berlin
March, Stars and Stripes Forever, Sousa
Finale, The Star Spangled Banner, Key

Work was begun the first of the week on one of the new cement drives in the freight yard of the Westerly station of the New Haven railroad, which Station Agnt Earl S. Bayles has made untiring effort to improve. The concrete work is being done by the New Haven Construction company, which built the Westerly station. The cost of the cement driveway between two of the long freight sidings extending from one end of the yard to the other will approximate $10,000. The work of ploughing was begun on Wednesday. Next year it is planned to build another drive in the yard.

FLYNN-LANPHEAR WEDDING EVENT OF SOCIAL INTEREST

(Special to the Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 23—Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock at the church of the Immaculate Conception, on High street, Miss Nancy Mary Lanphear became the bride of Maurice Walter Flynn, Jr. The marriage was solemnized and the nuptial high mass was sung by Rev. Fr. J. F. Vincent, S. M., pastor of the church.

The bride, gowned in white chiffon and carrying a bouquet of roses and sweet peas was given in marriage by her uncle, Capt. Horace F. Missiaen. The maid of honor, Miss May M. Ring of Norwich, Conn., who wore a frock of jade brocaded chiffon and carried roses and sweet peas.

Charles A. Mullaney of Pawcatuck was best man. The ushers were James W. McCormick and Edward J. Butler.

During the ceremony Martin Spellman sang the solo, "Sacred Heart" and Thomas V. Clancy sang "Ave Maria." "O Salutaris" was sung by Martin Spellman and Edward J. Butler. Mrs. Frank G. Ahearn, organist, played the wedding music.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Earl S. Robinson, 15 Lester avenue, Pawcatuck. The bride's going away costume was of gray. Many beautiful wedding gifts were received.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Lanphear, who died a number of years ago, following which she has made her home with her uncle in Westerly. She has recently returned to Westerly from a visit with her sisters in Beaufort, N. C. Mr. Flynn is the son of former Senator and Mrs. Maurice W. Flynn of Westerly. Graduating from Westerly High school in the class of 1914, he entered law school and was admitted to the bar and is now a practicing lawyer in Westerly and connected with the office of Tillinghast & Lynch, in Providence. He is the clerk of the third judicial district court.

Among out of town guests at the wedding were Mayor and Mrs. T. M. Thomas, Jr., of Beaufort, N. C., the latter a sister of the bride, and Mrs. Claude Felton, another sister of the bride, also of Beaufort, N. C.

OLD MYSTIC

The social circle met in the Methodist district parish house Monday evening. A pleasant surprise had been planned for Worthy Master and Mrs. J. W. Pollard, who had been married forty-three years that day. In the corner of the room flowers had been arranged and a lavender and white parasol was suspended from the ceiling with two chairs under it. When they arrived a line was formed and they marched to the chairs and were seated with all the circle standing about. J. D. Austin in a complimentary speech presented them a large cake that was on a stand, also an envelope containing money in behalf of the members. Mrs. C. J. Congdon had composed a poem which she read, causing much merriment and at the close all repeated "So say we every one of Old Mystic Social Circle, one seven one." Sandwiches, cake and lemonade were served. Thirty-nine were present. The program which the Circle gave at Ledyard Grange Tuesday night was rehearsed.

Rev. Frances Mitchell preached in the Baptist church Sunday morning and evening. A notice was given for a prayer meeting in the conference room Thursday evening, Rev. Mr. Mitchell leading.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Desley, Warren Patten and sister, Miss Anna Patten, made a three days' automobile trip going over the Mohawk trail to Albany, down the Hudson over Storm King highway and Bear Mountain bridge.

Village residents were sorry to hear of the death of Dr. Alexander M. Purdy Monday afternoon. He came here in 1884 and opened an office in the Lewis house. He was married in a year and went keeping house in Mrs. Louiza Crumbs' house. After three years of successful practice a large practice was offered him in the middle west and he sold his household goods to go there, when Mrs. Purdy was taken ill with typhoid fever and was sick for several months. This caused him to change his plans and locate on Pearl street, Mystic, in 1887, where he has practised since with the exception of the time he served as physician at Groton Iron Works during the war. There are families here for whom he had been physician during his entire 41 years of practice.

Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Thompson have returned from a trip to Exeter N. H., where they visited relatives.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Baptist church met at Mrs. Frank Wheeler's Tuesday afternoon.

Relics of Early Japan Found

TOKYO, Aug. 16.—(AP)—Scientists of Keio university are reported to have made important discoveries in a shell mound which they recently excavated in the forest of Koyasu, near Yokohama. Human bones, earthenware, flint arrowheads and ear decorations made of shells lead anthropologists to believe they have found evidence of a primitive tribe which inhabited the land of Mikado thousands of years ago. Further excavations in the district are being planned.

BIG DAY AT THE BROOKLYN FAIR—NEW AND INTERESTING DEPARTMENTS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

BROOKLYN, Conn., Sept. 23.—A good fair and better than for several years past, was the verdict of hundreds attending the 76th annual exhibition of the Windham County Agricultural society—the Brooklyn fair, on Wednesday, the first big day.

It is not that the fair is vastly different from what it has been in recent years—but that the exhibits are better in numbers of instances, better and larger in others and that some new features have been added.

Cattle entries this year are in excess of 150 head. The finest flock of sheep that this generation has seen at the Brooklyn fair is on exhibition. There is a dog show that attracts and holds general attention. Horses entered for the races are in greater number than for years, one class having 17 entries. A splendid year for growing crops has made the vegetable display something to marvel over and there are beautiful displays of flowers and fruit. There is an interesting display of poultry, farm machinery, automobiles of the latest models. The exhibition halls are filled with products of farm and dairy and examples of the handiwork of culinary experts and skilled needleworkers.

Cool, bracing weather favored the fair management and those who planned to attend the fair on Wednesday. As early as 10 o'clock lines of motor cars were streaming through the gates from off state highways radiating to all parts of eastern Connecticut and more distant points, it was after 2 o'clock before the influx of patronage slowed down materially and at that hour it was estimated that there were from 5,000 to 6,000 people on the grounds.

There was something to interest everyone. In the live stock area crowds admired the fine cattle and sheep. Of surpassing interest was the remarkably fine flock of sheep, numbering approximately 60 head, exhibited by the Eastland Sheep Farm of Pomfret Center, Charles V. H. Cushman, owner.

These sheep—Cheviots—more or less new to this section of New England, were splendid specimens of their kind. Sheepmen who looked them over said they constituted as fine a flock as has been seen in this section of New England in years and the best shown at a Windham county fair in a generation.

Wallow and Lauraseki, of Plainfield, exhibited tuberculin tested Jerseys and had some fine animals in their display. Orlo B. Carpenter had a long list of Devon entries and Everill James, of the Echo Valley farm, on the Green Hollow road, showed Ayrshires. These exhibits held attention throughout the day.

In the poultry division, numbers of exhibitors competed for the premiums offered. Among the exhibitors are: Thomas B. Payne, Brooklyn, showing S. C. R. I. Reds; Kenneth Andrews, Buff and White Wyandottes, S. C. R. I. Reds, White and Brown Leghorns, Buff and White Wyandottes, Orpingtons, Partridge Cochin, Golden Polish, Jersey Giants, S. C. Anconas, Buttercups, Hamburgs, China geese and Pekin ducks; Margaret Lapsley, showing a pair of Silkies chicks; Adrian Espinosa, S. C. R. I. Reds; Grace L. Dawley, R. I. Reds, White and Brown Leghorns; Vincent Espinosa, S. C. White Leghorns; F. E. Miller, Barred Plymouth Rocks; J. Stalzer, Barred Rocks; M. C. Whitney, Jersey Giants; William Exley, turkeys; J. H. Nuttall, China geese, Pekin ducks.

The dog show is a new feature this year. It is a good one. Hurriedly arranged by the Windham County Kennel club, it has brought together a showing of dogs that includes some splendidly bred animals, as good in instances as are to be seen at some of the regular bench shows. Several kennels are represented among the exhibitors. There are police dogs galore, Henri I. Baer, of the Palisade Kennels at East Killingly, showing 20, males and females, grown dogs and puppies. The Westridge Kennels, the Rockledge Kennels and the Glen Eden Kennels all have exhibits.

The stately and alert police dogs shared honors with many other breeds. There were many kinds—from the tiny Pommeranians and Pekinese to the gracefully towering and sinuously slender Russian wolfhound, few specimens of which are owned in Connecticut.

English bulldogs, whippet dogs, coon hounds, Portugese poodles, Boston terriers and other breeds, all were contributed to making the show one of the new and very interesting features of the fair. Joseph Birch, East Brooklyn, whose judgment of things pertaining to dogdom is unsurpassed by anyone hereabouts, stated that he was highly pleased with the showing made on such short notice and declared numbers of the dogs shown were of the class to compete in many of the best dog shows held in New England.

While there are many things of interest in the main exhibition building, the displays there are dominated by the excellent exhibits of four of the county's granges—Plainfield, Canterbury, Brooklyn and Senexet, of Woodstock. Thought, much effort and no little time were palpably expended in arranging these grange displays.

Brooklyn grange was awarded first prize for grange exhibits, Senexet grange second, Plainfield third and Canterbury fourth. Vegetables, fruits, preserves, food-stuffs, dairy products, specimens of needlework and various other things pertaining to the farm and to the home were cleverly arranged in these worth-while exhibits.

The prize-winning display of Brooklyn grange vividly displays the evolution of farming from the days when oxen and crude farm implements figured paramountly in farm labor to this present day of tractors, reapers binders and the many other modern devices that have served to lighten the burden of toil in agriculture and to make possible many up-to-date comforts on the farm.

The Windham County Farmers' association, County Agent F. L. Davis in charge, has a booth in the exhibition hall and plenty of literature for those interested in the problems with which the Farmers' association deals. The talks and conferences about that booth have to do largely with farm problems and are productive of great good.

Among the exhibitors in this building are the Danielson and Plainfield Gas and Electric company, showing washing machines and D. Blumenthal, Danielson, demonstrating radio receiving sets and equipment. The Danielson Trust company, the Brooklyn Savings bank of Danielson and the Cargill Trust company of Putnam, all have booths in the exhibition building for the distribution of souvenirs and literature.

This year's midway affords opportunities for diversion in plenty. The gypsy queen who tells your fortune, as you would have it told, is on the job. So are the concession people who let you shoot basketballs at lofty perched baskets, give you a chance to get a blanket or divest yourself of loose change in a score of different ways. You can buy a honey sandwich or a police dog pup, as suits your fancy, and be happy in the doing of it.

The Old Home day spirit that is so typical of the Brooklyn fair was everywhere manifest Wednesday. Greetings were exchanged between hundreds of people who have not seen each other since the Brooklyn fair of a year ago and are unlikely to meet again for another year.

Features of the fair that appealed to no inconsiderable number on Wednesday were the events in which the town steer teams, working oxen, steers and oxen were featured. These events, inside the track, held the attention of many men who have a bent for such things.

Far removed from these activities were the sales talks given in another part of the grounds by salesmen who stood beside shining new motor vehicles of the very latest models, described—and looking the description—as the best ever produced.

Early afternoon found throngs moving on the grandstand and the rails along the main stretch of track. From the vantage points they took up they could enjoy the races, the vaudeville and the band concert provided as features of the day. The large number of entries made the horse racing of special interest this year.

The feature event on the racing card was the Free For All which went four heats before Peter Boreal was returned a winner. The other events were won in straight heats, Little Dictator, the chestnut gelding owned by Hormidas Dion, of Groesvenordale, showing his heels to the field in the three-minute class, and Silver Thread, a black mare owned by Joseph Gender, of Dudley, Mass., romping home ahead of her field in the 2:25 trot or pace. The officials of the races were: J. C. Witter, starting judge; William Nye, of Westerly; L. S. Anthony, of Bradford, R. I.; C. H. Michael, Bluefield; N. A. Witter, Danielson; E. M. Marlor, Brooklyn, and Henry King, Moosup, judges and timers.

Two features of the track program were the gentlemen's and ladies' driving classes, four prizes being awarded in each class. The prizes were awarded as follows: Gentlemen—First, Al King, of Hyde Park, Mass.; second, Wallace Wilcox, of Putnam; third, Frank Hopkins, of Putnam; fourth, Edward Morin, of Brooklyn, Conn. Ladies—First, Miss Mabel Peterson, of Thompson; second, Mrs. Frank Tillinghast, of Central Village; third, Mrs. Oldershaw, of Putnam; fourth Mrs. Wallace Wilcox, of Putnam.

A figure on the fair Wednesday was Joseph B. Stetson of West Brooklyn, for 32 years secretary of the fair association and for a full half century actively and officially engaged in making it a success. Mr. Stetson, still vigorous and alert, had a wonderful day, greeting and being greeted by hundreds who have known him and associated him with the Brooklyn fair for anywhere from fifteen years to well over a generation.

The management of the fair received many words of praise for the smoothness with which the exhibition functioned, the well thought out and convenient arrangements, the courteous attention of officials and entire freedom from any boresome or untoward feature. State officers who were on hand to watch for anything not just as it should be had a most perfect day. There was nothing for them to do, aside from handling traffic outside the grounds.

At Brooklyn Wednesday evening there was a dance that furnished diversion for many young people, rounding out as pleasant a fair day as recent years have brought.

It was indicated late Wednesday afternoon that the checkup of the financial returns of the day would show the fair as successful in that respect as it was in others of importance.

Thursday is the closing day of the fair. Horse races and other special events will make the last day of the fair especially attractive to many who saw the fair Wednesday—and to the others who have yet to see this year's exhibition.

BRITISH TOWN'S BUSINESS SECTION RAISED FIVE FEET

NORTHWICH, Eng., Sept. 23.—Shifting houses bodily several miles and towns some yards along the level, has often been done, but raising a whole town five feet is something new. This is claimed to have been accomplished by the surveyor on this town in just under three years. The entire business portion of Northwich, including ten streets, three banks, the county court and 200 stores and houses have been raised to counteract the effect of subsidence caused by the brine pumping which proceeds continually in the salt mines under the town.

There has been no stoppage of business and only eight buildings, including an ancient inn, have had to be demolished because they could not be safely lifted.

In raising operations, parts of the lower brickwork were removed and small hydraulic jacks inserted. Chemists' stores were lifted so carefully that not one bottle was disturbed. The town bridge was raised five feet at high and French.

INTERNATIONAL GAMES HELD IN GERMANY FOR WORKERS

FRANKFORT, Germany, Aug. 23.—(AP)—The first International Olympic games for working classes took place recently in the new Frankfort stadium and through the five days attracted more than 250,000 spectators. Competing athletes included 2,000 Germans and 1,600 foreigners. The latter represented Finland, Czecho-Slovakia, Austria, France, Belgium, Italy, England, Jugoslavakia, Poland and Portugal.

The preeminent qualification to compete was considered the advocacy of a war again all class distinction. The Social Democratic news service described the games as "the birth of the peace idea in the most modern settings and typifying in classical style the thought of a genuine brotherhood among nations."

In the athletic contests a new world's record for the 400 metres relay race for women was established by the Finnish women's team which covered the distance in 51.8 seconds.

The Frankforter Volksstimme recorded the games in German, English and French.

How Mrs. V. R. Sweet Lost 40 Pounds—

She explains it below to every reader overburdened with excess FAT

Wonderful French formula works wonders even in most stubborn cases of obesity—NO DIETS—DANGEROUS DRUGS OR EXERCISES.

Hundreds of letters of fat people who have reduced with SAN-GRI-NA tell the same story as Mrs. Sweet, of Albion, Idaho.

"I was able to take off several pounds of fat every week without any effort or harmful effect—at the same time I greatly improved my health—I ate all I wanted, did not have to exercise or take dangerous drugs and thanks to SAN-GRI-NA my dream of getting back to my normal weight is at last realized.

If you are a fat woman let me tell you what to do: Get a box of SAN-GRI-NA today, take two small tablets before your meals and safely lose a few pounds of excess fat each week—It took four boxes of SAN-GRI-NA to reduce me of forty pounds—It made me look at least ten years younger and entirely transformed my health and appearance. I gladly sign my name to this letter because I am happy to be able to help every fat man or woman regain a slender, healthy normal figure.—Mrs. V. R. Sweet."

NOTICE—SAN-GRI-NA is a scientific discovery made up from the formula of one of the best French medical authorities on obesity—It is guaranteed absolutely harmless and not to contain dangerous drugs or chemicals—IT HAS REDUCED HUNDREDS OF PEOPLE WHERE EVERYTHING ELSE HAD FAILED—SAN-GRI-NA is not a new, untried or unknown formula—it was used for years in Europe by most reliable obesity specialists with remarkable success. It has now been introduced in America and is sold by the leading druggists at a price within the reach of all.

On sale at any good drug or department store. If your druggist does not carry SAN-GRI-NA in stock he can get it from his wholesaler or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. C.

People who will not get an opportunity to hear Paul Specht and his orchestra at the Armory this coming Saturday evening may hear the popular artists at the Plaut-Cadden store at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Because of the splendid impression made by this orchestra during its previous visit to Norwich it is expected that a large crowd will be on hand to hear them.

New York Show Hats are Startingly New

The Maurice Sample Shop has purchased copies of the models shown at the fall and winter fashion show of the Retail Millinery association of America.

This show was recently held at the Hotel Astor in New York before a tremendous delegation of milliners from all over the country. The models shown are said to have aroused considerable enthusiasm for their extremely novel effects.

It seems there is no limit to the creative ability of American style designers. More and more are American millinery creations becoming recognized as authoritative sources for authentic fashions, and at the private sale where the originals were purchased, it is said that the Fashion Hat Company of New York paid a record price.

Bruck Weiss presents the turquoise shade of green in a turban that has a brim of felt. The brim, however, of this new model comes to a point on the left side and extends across the crown of the hat graduating smaller and smaller as it goes along. The crown of brocaded silver ribbon passes clean through the brim and ends in a series of side loops draped charmingly to the right. Two gorgeous rhinestone pins complete the ensemble.

Tappe presents the new version of the soft crown scoop of velvet. The crown piece is draped with rows and rows of moired ribbon in contrast and for trimming there are the new large feathered flowers of lacquered bronze and green. The flowers are placed on the brim so that when worn they nestle charmingly in the side of the neck.

Arnold gives us the lure of lace set most exquisitely into the brim and crown of a velvet hat of wood brown. This entire ensemble strikes a note of formal elegance that seems to be a development of the fall season. The exquisite way in which the lines of this hat are brought out is very pleasing and so is the intricate fine workmanship that combines these materials so effectively.

Jay Thorpe presents the extreme type of large felt for formal wear, the entire trimming being a fur edged draped silk scarf. The effect evidently being to give just that note of careful carelessness.

Palace Theatre

An excursion into the realms of impressionistic music termed for the present "Songs of the Cities" is being planned by Lieut. Com. John Philip Sousa, the great bandmaster who this season will make his thirty-third annual tour of America. Sousa's tour this season takes him into the principal cities of America and from the street noises and the industrial hums of Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, San Francisco and Omaha will come, if all goes well, a tone poem which for the first time, perhaps, is an experiment in giving musical value to the rhythms of American urban and industrial life.

Sousa, the musician, finds the noises of the various American cities their most pronounced characteristics. New York, he says, is distinguished by the subterranean boom of its subway trains, the clatter of its elevated lines and clank of its surface cars.

Chicago roars with might and main and to Sousa's ear there is more vocal quality in its street noises than in those of any other city. Detroit hums with the noises of industry, and even Philadelphia, where life is more serene than in any other large city in America, there is a distinctive range of street sounds.

Musicians in the past have found inspiration in pastoral quiet, in the sounds of the winds and of the sea, says Sousa. To him it is as reasonable that music, which is a reflection of life, should be found in the sounds of the modern city. The crash and the rumble of the great urban areas he finds as appealing as were the sylvan districts to the musicians of another day.

The extras' bench at the old Esanay Studio in Chicago, from which Agnes Ayres and other leading lights of the film world have risen to the seats of the popular, also marked the start of Virginia Valli's screen career.

She was given her first big opportunity in the principal part in "The Storm," a screen success of about three years ago, based on the stage hit.

Miss Valli is again supporting Thomas Meighan, playing the leading feminine role in "The Man Who Found Himself," a Booth Tarkington story coming to the Palace on Sunday Alfred E. Green directed.

In the eight years that she has appeared on the screen, Miss Valli has worked most of the time at the West Coast, where she has a home in Hollywood. In her leisure hours she breeds dogs for a hobby.

Miss Valli has brown hair and blue eyes, weighs 127 pounds and is 5 ft. 4 inches tall.

Fewer Railroad Accidents

Railroad traveling is now safer than walking. As a result of safety ed among the 2,200 pupils enrolled in public school No. 96, New York city. Nearly all the children, however, were born in this country.

Broadway Theater

Never before has there been such an inducement given in any theater, as you'll get at the Broadway theater starting tomorrow.

The real big night is tomorrow. There is a two for one matinee today with which most of the town is familiar and of which they take advantage. The night show will be prize night. Many valuable and useful prizes are to be given away free to the lucky person and in addition a number of cash awards will also be made.

Not only will you see and get your money's worth from the big Hippodrome show that has been arranged, but the above mentioned prizes also.

The program can be found in another section in this paper.

Mr. H. H. Collins, the new acting manager is looking forward to tremendous crowds and advise every one to come early, and we are certain crowds will be the rule.

COME IN AND SEE ALL THE LOVELY THINGS

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Coming to the Bread

The theme of A Slave of Fashion is based on the eternal cry of the female, Nothing to Wear. What does it suggest to you

Supreme poverty or miserly riches?

It really is the state of every woman's mind, from the cradle to the grave from the slums to millionaires row, from Mother Eve to the present generation.

The feminine plaint, is as a rule, not a serious problem. A woman may have a wardrobe consisting of every imaginable type of costume. Yet she will utter the plaintive cry or think at least that she has nothing to wear.

Katherine, the heroine of A Slave of Fashion which is coming to the Breed theater on Sunday really has very little to wear in the beginning of the story. But she doesn't realize it until she gets into a circle where clothes really matter. Then when she becomes the possessor of a very large wardrobe the old urge brought down to her through generations strikes her and she wails that she has nothing to wear.

This is a Hobart Henley production made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Norma Shearer is starred with Lew Cody featured.

Vivia Ogden, William Haines, Miss Dupont, Mary Carr, James Corrigan, and Estelle Clark are importantly cast in this Samuel Shipman story which was adapted to the screen by Bess Meredyth.

There will be classes in athletic, character and ballroom dancing and the New Wayburn version of the Charleston will be taught.

Palace Theatre

Two tons of coal will be the principal presents to be given away at Merchants Nite at the Palace theatre tonight, there will also be many other valuable presents, such as Indian Blankets, chests of silver, table lamps serving trays, dolls and a ladies overnight traveling bag.

The vaudeville bill will be of the finest being personally picked by Mgr. McEvoy.

Covan and Waller a pair of fast steppers will open the show. The two feature acts will be The Seven Tasmanians one of the fastest ground tumbling acts in the business.

The Bishop-Lynn Revue with two complete changes of scenery to their act.

Frances and Dare, selling peanuts and laughs.

Fielder and Stone, in Dutch. The feature picture will be Larry Semon in The Wizard of Oz which will make un a perfect program.

Remember the Scarecrow? And the Tin-Man? And Little Dorothy? And the Lion? And the Wizard? And the cyclone and all the other thrilling and fun in the land of Oz? Well they are all brought to life in the Chadwick Pictures Corporation screen version of the world's most famous fantastic spectacle L. Frank Baum's "Wizard of Oz" which is scheduled to be shown at the Palace Theatre today.

This famous story has been familiar to the world for the past 20 years. Adults have been fascinated and charmed with its whimsical humor which is worthy of the pen of a Barrie; children have been delighted with it, reading it again and again. Montgomery and Stone, scored the success that gained them fame and fortune in the musical comedy version but the book and play combined could not visualize as effectively the fantastic ideas of the author which will be shown on the screen.

The screen's greatest eccentric comedian, Larry Semon, portrays the role of the "Scarecrow" originated by Fred Stone and it is said that Mr. Semon characterization is one of the most remarkable portrayals ever given in motion pictures. The star however does not carry all the honors of the production, a stellar cast which includes the names of such sterling screen favorities as, Bryant Washburn Charlie Murray, Virginia Pearson Dorothy Dwan, Mary Carr and others assist in making this screen novelty one of the outstanding features of a season noted for big screen hits.

Gorgeous settings, wonderful camera effects never before shown, and remarkable stunts together with rapid fire action make this attraction one worth going a long way to see.

MYSTIC

The Garden club met with Mrs. Geo. S. B. Leonard on the west side of Mystic river Tuesday afternoon. L. B. Allyn, the president, presided. A part of the meeting was devoted to birds and their habits. Mrs. F. W. Batty read an article entitled Birds and Their Baths; a discussion followed. Mrs. Story read a poem on Birds. Miss Violet Story read several of her original poems that were very entertaining. It was decided to have a picnic next Tuesday, with Mrs. Leonard, chairman of arrangements.

The county W. C. T. U. meeting held in New London Tuesday was attended by members of the local union, Mrs. W. H. Lamb, Mrs. A. E. Cutler, Mrs. Gurdon Allyn, Mrs. Mary S. Brown, Mrs. Augusta Parks, Mrs. Edgar Whiting, Misses Emeline and Clara Murphy, Mrs. Abbie Chapman and Mrs. Wallace Phillips. Mrs. Lamb, the president, reported on history of the union, Mrs. Cutler medal contests, Mrs. Phillips publicity and press.

Mrs. Byron Billings is confined to her home by illness.

Bernard Stewart has a broken collar bone, caused by a fall in playing footballe.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Y. Love are on a motor trip during their vacation from the A. & P. store.

Mrs. Elizabeth MacGowan, a former resident here has returned to Portersville, Cal., where she makes her home after a visit here.

Many regret that Miss Hilda Hutton has resigned as visiting nurse. During her term of service, over four years, she had made many friends and has been very efficient. Her sister, Miss Sarah Hutton, has been engaged to take her place and has commenced her duties.

A. C. Lathem camp, Sons of Veterans, No. 19, is going to Danielson Friday evening to attend the meeting of Col. Anderson camp, No. 20. This is the second district meeting to be held.

Work on the central block is progressing steadily. New spiles and crib work have been placed and the while foundation strengthened. The building contains eight stores. The work is being done by a contractor from Noank with a force of men.

Germany Lacks Professors

FRANKFORT, Germany, Aug. —(AP)—A dearth of professors of political economy in Prussia recently was pointed out by Prof. F. Schmidt of Frankfort University. Statistics compiled of last winter's term show that for 10,000 students there were only 59 professorships in political economy in Prussia, while for 5,000 law students there were 107 professional chairs.

No man ever becomes too shiftless to give more advice.

WARNING OF FAKE COLLECTORS PASSED ON TO NEW LONDON POLICE

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 23.—Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue James L. Mason today notified the New London police that two impostors were operating about the state exhorting money from purveyors of soft drinks represented that if the pair of crooks appeared in New London to cause their arrest. The crooks were in Meriden a few days ago where they operated successfully. They gave their names as Fred Norbett and Arcie King, and declared they resided in Amsterdam, N. Y.

James Smith, a middle-aged patient of the Norwich state hospital, who made his escape from that institution yesterday, was taken into custody this forenoon by Sergeant Nelson Smith, when the officer detected the man passing through State street. At the police station it was determined that Smith was the escaped patient and the authorities at the hospital being notified, a guard came to New London and escorted Smith back to the hospital.

Frank Zaboski, of South Main street Simsbury, today communicated with the New London police and requested that if his son, Frank Zaboski, Jr., was found in this city to detain him. The youthful Zaboski is slightly demented as a result of a blood clot on the brain. Last Friday he disappeared mysteriously and since that time no trace of the young man has been found. The father is of the opinion that the youth is roaming about the state.

Mrs. Walter A. Wilkinson, about 60 and a resident of North Stonington, had a close call from serious injury this afternoon when she was struck by an automobile truck on Main street. Fortunately she sustained injuries only of a minor nature. Mrs. Wilkinson had been in New London on a shopping tour and going to the corner of Main and Church street, she awaited the arrival of a Stonington bound trolley car that would take her to her home. As the car was approaching Mrs. Wilkinson stepped to the highway and took up a position between an automobile that was motionless beside the curb and the rails of the trolley company. At the same time a large automobile truck owned by the Auto Car Company, 362 Pearl street, Providence, and operated by Walter Andersón, 12 Balcolm street, Providence, came along just in advance of the trolley car. Before Mrs. Wilkinson could step from the course of the auto truck she was struck by the bumper and knocked to the pavements, being dragged about 15 feet before the truck was brought to a step. Traffic Officer Frank Linehan was near at hand and communicated with the police station, resulting in the police speed car in charge of Patrolman Edward Roirdan being summoned. The officers placed the woman in the car and she was rushed to Lawrence hospital, where an examination revealed that she had received no worse injuries than bruises and scratches. Mrs. Wilkinson refused to accept medical attention and left for home in a short time after she was admitted to the hospital. Anderson reported the accident at the police station, but was allowed to continue to his destination.

Judge Prince, in the police court today, rid the city of a gang of drunks and must have pleased the management of the work that is going on at Fisher's island, for the latter has complained to the New London police of the annoyances suffered by liquor soaked men from this city applying for work there and doing very little when they are employed in an emergency. There is work for willing and competent laborers on the work that is in progress to establish property for a country club which wealthy New Yorkers are seeking to establish on the island, but for the sort of men who loiter and who appear sodden with liquor there is no place and they are not wanted there. The island has constables appointed by the state of New York, but it has no lockup and therefore cannot cope with the drunks. In the gang before the court here today was a familiar face, that of Andrew Fallon, who has been accused many times and often. He represented today, when a bottle with the red label of poison on it was taken from him that the liquor it contained was given to him, and that he took it against his judgment, but did not drink of it. That was a foggy story to tell to a man who was to pass judgment and to whom this was not a new experience. Fallon was fined $6, which penalty took him to the county jail.

Joe and James Conner, also in the gang, told the court that they claimed Taftville as their home. They were found in a stairway in the rear of a store at Main and John streets, where they took shelter when they were denied admission at the front. The pair were in ugly mood when Policeman Edward Daniels was called to take care of them and they tackled him with the result that the three went down in a heap. That made Officer Daniels swing for the pair and he reached them so that he subdued them into submitting to arrest. A fine of $5 was imposed on each. They were without funds so that they are now registered at the jail on Franklin street. They had been connected with the Fisher's island work, but came here under some pretext.

Thomas Campbell was taken into custody on State street. He realized that the weather had turned cold and he relished a place where he could be warm and where he would have a chance to sleep. A fine of $5 with the attending costs of trial was more than he could meet at the clearing house so he, too, went to jail.

Patrick Donovan, with a home, he said, in Fall River, came from Bridgeport to the island. He brought $16 with him and had it when he was arrested. He was fined as were the others, and gave up most of the money he had to square accounts with the court. Donovan promised that when he worked and earned more cash he would come to the rescue of one of the others.

It is estimated that the city of New London expended about $190 to deny to Messrs. Kenyon and Shapiro the right to erect a one-story brick building on their land at 43 Jay street. It is a pretty well established law that any owner of land has the right under the constitution of the United States to make use of his land by building thereon if he does not create a fire hazard that is extraordinary and that he does not interfere with other property owners or residents by creating what is a nuisance and that which interferes with neighbors in the pursuit of happiness and annoys them by maintaining it. The city council appears to have lost sight of this fact and to have assumed that Messrs. Kenyon and Shapiro are to establish there a business that will annoy neighbors, disturb the quiet of the street and establish a business that will disturb sleep and prevent it and destroy the quiet of the neighborhood. That opinion may have been gathered from a statement that Mr Kenyon made to the council when the permit was sought. It is said to be the intention of Messrs. Kenyon and Shapiro to conduct an auto business and to proceed with the sale of accessories at the new place, but that they are to wreck autos there is denied by them.

Mrs. Robert Berry and infant daughter, of 27 Cleveland street; Mrs. John Bloom, and infant daughter, 53 Colt street; Mrs. Eugene Steullett, 96 Green street; Master Perry Franson Saybrook Ferry, and Mrs. Frank Bailey and infant son, 39 Converse place patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

Alfred S. Coan, 75, died this morning at his home, 114 Blinman street, after a brief illness. He is survived by his widow, two sons, Carl and Harvey A. Coan, both of this city, and by a granddaughter, Mrs. William J. Nellan, also of New London. Mr. Coan was a paperhanger and formerly resided in Augusta, Me., moving to New London about 10 years ago.

The funeral of Mrs. Augusta Donzella was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church, a high mass of requiem being celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimmons. Relatives and friends acted as bearers. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Archibald S. MacFarlane has sold a parcel of land on Ann street to Joseph F. and Ethel A. Drury.

Joseph H. Schwartz has sold a cottage and small tract of land corner of Park street and Neptune avenue, Ocean Beach, to Philip Sondik, Henry R. Lipman and Abraham Newman, all of Hartford.

Thomas Samul, administrator of the estate of Frances Samuel, has sold a house and lot on Richards street to Antone and Audokia Norobey.

Josephine Murphy has sold a house and lot on Montauk avenue to Barney Belgrad.

Joseph Hardwick, trustee of the Scott Investment Co., Inc., has sold a parcel of land, corner of East and Chelsea streets, to James Davidson.

Guildo Minucci has sold a house and lot on School street to Lem's Realty Co., Inc.

Mrs. Flora M. Webb, 8 West Mystic avenue, came to New London this afternoon to do some shopping and while in one of the State Street stores lost her pocketbook containing $50. Mrs. Webb reported her loss to the police, but the money was not recovered.

Miss Poplosky, 9 1-2 Harrison St., reported to the police early this evening that her brother, John, aged 5, failed to return home from school and requested the police to institute a search for the boy. An hour later Miss Poplosky informed the authorities that the youth had returned home and that his delay had been caused by his having taken a ride with a companion into the country.

John Logioco, 77 Golden street, complained to the police this evening that he placed his bicycle in front of the Lyceum theatre, Washington street last evening and that while he absented himself from the cycle, "Buddy" McClue of Groton youth stole it.

An automobile owned by William Papkis, 100 Ocean avenue, proprietor of a small store on Garfield avenue, was stolen from in front of Papkis' place of business this evening. Papkis left the car in front of his store and while he waited on customers, the crook entered the machine and drove away. The car is a 1925 Overland Six, touring model.

A. P. S. CAR OPERATOR FINED IN WATERFORD

(Special to the Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 23—William Smith, operator of a public service car, with stand at the union station, was taken into custody in Waterford this afternoon by Constable Leslie Peabody charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, after the machine had been damaged following crashing against a tree. Later in the day Smith was arraigned before Judge Frederick Dimmock in the Waterford town court, where he pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $100 and costs. Leniency was shown Smith because of his health and $50 of the fine was ordered remitted by Judge Dimmock.

Smith had been to the country in company with a companion and was returning to New London about 2.30 o'clock. When the machine was in the vicinity of Quaker Hill and travelling at a fair rate of speed, Smith suddenly lost contro, of the mechanism, with the result that the car left the concrete highway and plunged into the tree. The crash caused the front end of the car, a Cadillac limousine, to be badly damaged. Constable Peabody was notified of the accident and going to the place where the crash occurred Smith was found with his wrecked car. Officer Peabody placed Smith under arrest and his presentation in court followed. Neither Smith nor his companion were injured.

Sergeant John J. Cavenaugh, left New London, Saturday to bring Albert Kellogg, formerly of New London, back to this city from Sag Harbor where he is under arrest charged with passing a fraudulent check for $250 on the New London City National bank. The sergeant wired from Albany yesterday that he would reach New London with Kellogg this afternoon, but he failed to arrive here this evening. It is now expected that the officer and his prisoner will reach here during the night and that Kellogg will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning.

The New Haven police this evening requested the New London authorities to be on the watch for a Chrysler sedan, 1925 model and bearing registration A-7341, which was stolen from the former city late this afternoon.

SAILOR PINCHES FERN'S COAT—RETURNS GARMENT LATER

(Special to the Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 23—With the advent of cold weather, Max Fern, of New London and Norwich in which cities he is proprietor of restaurants, was victimized this evening. A crook entered the Star restaurant here, operated by Fern and stole the proprietor's overcoat.

The theft was committed by one of four sailors, all coast guard service men, who entered the restaurant about 8 o'clock. After the four had partaken of their meal and while one claimed the attention of Fern in the payment of the check, one of the other sailors removed Fern's coat, a new garment from a hanger and disappeared. Fern discovered the theft immediately after the sailors departed from his place and going to the street he found the only one of the sailors who was not in uniform. Fern caused the sailor to accompany him to the police station and when the sailor refused to reveal the names of his companions he was locked up until the police concluded their investigation. Two hours later the sailor, who committed the theft caused the coat to be returned to Fern, upon ascertaining that his companion had been arrested in connection with the theft. The prisoner was then released.

WOMEN SHOPLIFTERS CAUGHT WITH THE GOODS

(Special to the Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 23—For a period of two years at intervals, merchants of New London have been subjected to considerable loss by the operation of female shoplifters with the apprehension of two women this afternoon the police believe that they have detected the pair that have successfully stolen merchandise from the stores on State street, for in the arrest of the women the plunder obtained today by their operations was found in their possession.

The women arrested are Minnie Kerson, colored, of 220 Main street, and Lucille Manning, also colored, of 34 Golden street. The Kerson woman, who has a long police record for various offenses and the Manning woman, started on a "shopping" tour about 2 o'clock and visited the Bisir store, State street, carrying a large bag and handy article for use in shoplifting. The women inspected several dresses, but did not make a purchase.

After the women left the store, a sales girl discovered that one of the dresses inspected by the two women was missing. Going to State street, she told Traffic Officer Clyde Murphy of the theft of the garment and gave him a description of the suspected colored women.

Officer Murphy accompanied by Officer Frank Linehan made a search and found the women inspecting stock in the Hart Hat Shop, State street. The women had the large bag in their possession and placing them under arrest they were taken to the police station where an examination of the bag not only revealed the stolen dress, but a hat they had stolen from the Hart store, together with a quantity of ribbons and face powders, etc., which they had stolen from one of the Kresge stores. The goods found in possession of the women were later identified by the managers of the trio of stores and the Kerson and Manning women were locked up, pending police court session, tomorrow morning.

This evening it was revealed that the two women also visited the store of Nickolai Choynowski, 338 Main St., and stole a pair of shoes. Choynowski visited the police station and identified the shoes as belonging in his stock, also identified a ring that the Manning woman wore as being his property and declared that the woman stole the ring yesterday when she made a visit to the store.

EDITOR CRITICIZES GERMANS WHO COME TO U. S. TO STUDY

BERLIN, Sept. 23—Germans who go to America for the purposes of study, are criticized by Siegfried Hartmann, one of the editors of Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung, in an article in that newspaper. While conceding that the United States has attained much that is laudable, the writer warns his countrymen against apeing American things in general, especially such as are to be considered not meritorious.

"It must not be imagined for a moment," Herr Hartmann writes, "that the United States owe their present economic prosperity to postwar enterprise. Long before the war they had accomplished most things on which many Americans are inclined today to pride themselves. Let us admire the iron energy the American manifests in his industrial life; let us concede the efficiency of his scientific management, but do not let us adopt as our life's objects those of that strange, mixed race overseas. Do not let us sacrifice for the sake of efficiency all our intellectual and cultural ideals, nurtured, cherished and developed for centuries."

WOMAN SCIENTIST STUDIES NEW RACE IN WEST SIBERIA

LENINGRAD, Sept. 23—Madame R. P. Mitusova, a plucky collaborator of the Russian Academy of Sciences, after 12 months' residence with a new race of people discovered in the Arctic wilds of Western Siberia, has collected much interesting information about these strange people, who are organized into five clans and number only about 600. The members of this race call themselves "Nesnen," which means merely men or people. Their nearest neighbors, the Samoyeds, call them "Pyan-Ha-Savo," or forest people.

These strange people are quite unlike the Samoyeds in that they have very dark hair and complexions and their language is wholly different, lacking entirely the "R" sound which is very prominent in the speech of the Samoyeds. Until 1923 no civilized person had been known to have set foot in the territory of this new race, according to B. N. Gorochov. He has just published a report of an expedition sent to Western Siberia by the Russian Academy of Sciences in the latter part of 1923, which found these aborigines on the River Pura.

Sun Hatches Turkey Eggs

Manager Charles Kelso of the Westfield, Mass., Farmers' Milk Exchange, who conducts a farm in Wyben, is responsible for the story that the heat of the sun during the hot spell hatched 17 turkey eggs that were left exposed by a turkey hen on a nest on a hillside, says the Springfield Republican. The hen had laid 18 eggs and had hatched 1 chick. The mother and her chick were penned up. Two days later, however, every one on the farm were astonished to note that the 17 other eggs had hatched, and now the turkey mother is the proud possessor of 18 chicks in her brood.

BIRDS NEST AMID ROAR OF ARTILLERY

Olinn Pike in the London Sphere says that even the carnage of the World war, with bombs bursting in air, was not sufficient to drive birds from their natural haunts along the firing line in France.

"It has been proved," he writes, "that these tiny travelers, which come up from the countries of the south to spend the spring and summer with us, return to the same spots season after season. A pair of whitethroats which refused to desert their well-loved meadow, built their nest in a small bush on the edge of a trench. It was hardly the spot one would have thought the birds would choose, for some of the largest enemy shells were daily falling near. When these exploded they made a noise like thunder—a splitting shriek followed by a roar, and a great cloud of black and yellow smoke rose toward the sky. Yet through all this din the small warbler sat upon her eggs, quite unconscious of the great tragedy being enacted all around. To her it was probably one of a nature's storms, and the louder the noise the tighter she settled upon her five small eggs.

One morning I took a friend to see the plucky little bird. When we reached the bush I struck it gently with my stick to see if the bird was at home. As I did this a small bundle of feathers tumbled out and fell upon the ground at our feet. The bird appeared to be badly wounded for one wing seemed to be broken, and a leg, lying limp under the tail certainly looked as if it were broken. My friend thought that here was a victim of the war, and he was sympathizing with the bird when I stooped down to pick it up. As I did so the whitethroat dragged itself along the ground. We went forward and made another attempt to capture it, but again the bird kept just out of our reach. Eventually it fell to the bottom of a trench and dragged itself over empty bully-beef tins, coils of wire and other rubbish. For sixty feet or more it led us, then the whole appearance of the little actor changed, for it flew up with a jaunty flight, raised the feathers on its head in the form of a crest, and uttered a few cheeky notes! As we listened it seemed to me that the whitethroat was asking us in its bird language how we liked "being had." It was a good trick cleverly performed, and my friend, who had not seen this dodge before, thought it wonderfully clever.

LIME OF EGGSHELL HELPS BUILD CHICK

The limy shells of eggs are there not only to protect the inside against breakage and to prevent its drying up, but also as a source of calcium for the development of the embryo chick, according to the finds of a group of German scientists, Drs. Plimmer, Aders and Lowndes, who analyzed hatched, half-hatched and unhatched eggs. An unhatched hen's egg contains about .04 grams of calcium, and a freshly hatched chick about five or six times as much. The tough "skin" that incloses the yolk and white absorbs more and more calcium as hatching proceeds, and becomes quite opaque by the time the chick is ready to come out. The experimenters claim that the carbonic acid and water given off during incubation dissolved the calcium of the eggshell and makes it available for use by the embryo.

Fishing Birds

The Japanese have taught comorants to fish for them. Rings around the necks of the birds prevent them from swallowing the fish they catch in the sea glades. The fishermen control the birds with long cords.

Co-Operation Cut Wastage

The Federated Fruit and Vegetable Growers have issued a statement saying that a saving of $1,700,000,000 was made in the co-operative marketing of fruits and vegetables in one year. This meant that $2,000,000 was added to the returns for the grower without adding anything to the cost to the consumer. The success of the fruit and vegetable men's co-operation is responsible for a move to market potatoes in the same way.

A Niagara Found in Brazil

A waterfall as great as Niagara in the midst of a barren desert was one of the sights seen by Mrs. Agnes Chase, botanist of the United States Herbarium, who has just returned to the United States after seven months in the wilds of Brazil, says Popular Science Monthly. Looking for peculiar species of grass, she went high into the eastern plateau where the land becomes a desert through overgrazing. She climbed the highest peaks in Brazil east of the Andes.

Irish Firearms Act Effective

The Free State Firearms Act, which became operative August 1, provides for the licensing of all holders of arms.

Many applications for licenses were received from sportsmen both in Ireland and across the channel. There has been little game shooting in Ireland since 1914, and during the fighting in Ireland it almost wholly stopped. It is now being renewed and the approaching season is likely to be a good one.

JEWETT CITY

A number of Jewett City people will be interested to learn of the retirement on a life annuity of Henry Sheldon, of Mansfield, Mass. He was one of the veteran engine drivers of the New Haven system. For close to 30 years he has run what is known as Train 30, the Night Postal express, east. The famous train de luxe, the Knickerbocker Express, has responded to his experienced handling of the throttle ever since its inauguration. These two trains, with a lightning time card, who very seldom off schedule when Sheldon with his big Pacific superheater 1356 were on the job. He had the knack of getting to know an engine and any of his firemen will tell that the big moguls certainly knew him.

The way he would sail down the iron, when a little late after leaving some station, with a dozen Pullmans, or a long string of steel mail cars, was something fine to see. When railroad men themselves point out an engine driver, and speak of him as a fancy runner that is recommendation beyond question. Strangely two Jewett City men in times past have been his firemen—James Procter and Frank Shea. They will tell when Henry had cleared the New Haven yard and left Cedar Hill junction, he would brace his left foot against the big boiler butt, and pull her wide open. Firemen knew then that there wouldn't be the giving of a notch until they heard the rattle of the cross-overs in the New London yard. Nobody is inclined to give away railroad secrets; it is 51 miles from New London to New Haven and in a pinch Henry could make it, when his big machine was working good, and he made them work good, in, well, say, the hour hand of his Hamilton lacked considerable of having travelled around the dial. Such railroad men, whose machine gets to be really a part of their being are born, not made.

At a meeting of the directors of the Quinnebaug Camp association Inc., held Tuesday evening plans were made for a whist and dance and for the production of another play which will rival last season's success. The committee is already at work selecting a first class play and cast.

At the meeting of Whatsoever Circle of the King's Daughters Tuesday evening at Mrs. Francis Campbell's Miss Ida F. Foster was appointed a delegate to the state convention to be held in Norwalk, October 13 and 14. It was voted to hold an experience social and a covered dish supper for members only. The committee appointed is Mrs. E. E. Scates to have charge of the covered dishes, Mrs. Campbell the tables, Miss Foster coffee and Mabel McBroome the program. Both the Whatsoever and Dorcas circles have voted five cents per member, the amount asked toward sending the state president, Miss Woodruff to California next year with Mrs. G. H. Prior the international president.

MARKET WAS UNSETTLED.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23. (AP)—The stock market today was shot through with confusing cross currents as speculative operations for the rise and decline were conducted with varying degrees of success. Consistent strength was shown by the railroad shares, but other groups were subject to the conflicting whims of traders failing to follow a clearly defined trend.

An abrupt decline to $6 to $7 a bale in cotton prices following the appearance of the government crop report contributed to the unsettlement of stock trading. The official estimate of a yield of 1,931,000 bales was some 200,000 bales larger than a fortnight ago and was unexpected by the trade after the reduction reported on Sept. 1.

Call money rates showed further indications of easing, but the relaxation came too late to have much effect on prices. A reduction to 4 1-2 per cent. after renewals were quoted at 5, however, was followed by a late upturn in which the oil shares made the most conspicuous gains.

Trade news offered little encouragement for the opening of aggressive buying operations. Reports of the weekly steel trade reviews that the industry was merely consolidating its late summer gains rather than making further progress were somewhat disappointing to speculative Wall street, which had counted on the steel trade leading an autumn revival of business. U. S. Steel lost ground and some of the independents were freely pressed for sale.

Uniform improvement in the August earnings of the carriers which have so far reported, furnished the background for another rally in railroad stocks. Early gains of 1 to 3 points were scattered throughout this group, with Atlantic Coast Line, Chesapeake & Ohio common and preferred and Western Pacific reaching the year's highest levels. Active buying of Norfolk & Western, New York Central and Baltimore & Ohio also took place.

Readjustment of speculative accounts meanwhile proceeded in many industrial issues. Equipment, pipe, motor and accessory shares and some of the public utilities yielded readily to profit taking. Selling pressure increased against several recent speculative favorites such as American Can, Dupont, International Harvester and American Ice, the last named dropping 3 points at one time, despite an increase in the dividend. Trading turned rather dull on the reaction, however, and no acute weakness developed.

In face of general uncertainty, several pools persevered in their activities and found little difficulty in putting up prices of tobacco, mercantile and some of the more moderately priced motor shares. Following the decision of the Reynolds Tobacco Co. to retire its preferred stock, the company's "B" shares were pushed up to a new top price at 91 3-4 and closed 2 1-2 points net high at 90 3-4. American Tobacco jumped 3 points to 117 5-8.

Dealings in the final hour were enlivened by bullish demonstrations in the oil stocks, many of which moved up 1 to 3 points on the belief that the recent wave of price cutting was nearing its close. Pan-American "B," Texas Company, Independent Oil & Gas and General Petroleum participated in the upturn.

Call money was in better supply today, the lower renewal rate of 5 per cent. being followed by a reduction to 4 1-2 per cent. for new loans. Time money, however, showed a slightly harder tendency, accommodations for four to six months being quoted at 4 3-4 per cent. Short term and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Trading in foreign exchanges was quiet. Demand sterling hovered around $4.84 3-16. Norwegian and Danish kroner were lower early in the day but later recovered most of their losses.

TAFTVILLE

Leo Belisle of Hunter's avenue has returned to Woonsocket, R. I., to take up his studies at Mount St. Charles of the Sacred Heart School for boys, after spending the summer at his home in town.

John Murphy of South A street has gone to Philadelphia, Pa., where he has accepted a position.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Decelles of Lisbon were among the local people who visited the Eastern States Exposition at Springfield, Mass., this week. They were accompanied by Mrs. Decelles parents, Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Krodel of the Baltic Road, and made the trip in Mr. Decelles automobile.

Bertrand Parent, who has been spending the summer at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon T. Parent of South Second avenue, has resumed his studies at Assumption College, Worcester, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bogie of Providence street are the guests of Mr Bogie's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Osten Ferguson in Holyoke, Mass.

A meeting of the standing committee of the Taftville Congregational church was held Tuesday evening at the church, with the chairman George J. Meyer presiding. It was reported that the floors and woodwork of the church had been re-varnished during the period when the church was closed.

Frederick W. Stone of New Haven, is the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Stone of South A street.

Miss Magda Bjurstum of North Third avenue spent a short time this week at Watch Hill, R. I.

Andrew White, who has been with the U. S. Naval rifle team at Camp Perry, Ohio, has returned to his home on South A street.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Grant Peck of Honor, Michigan, are guests of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. E. Tracy Clark and family of North Third avenue.

Private postcards are to take a three cent mailing rate for Canada after October 1st, according to an announcement made Wednesday by Assistant Postmaster Edward V. Murphy.

W. J. Cole has left town to make his home in Central Falls, R. I.

Mrs. Bertha Joubert and son of Norwich avenue have left town to take up their residence in Jamaica, N. Y.

Emile Girard of South C street has resigned his position with the Ponemah company.

Rapid progress is being made on the new state road over Gallows Hill to Norwich town, and it is now believed that the work will be completed before the cold weather arrives.

A heavy frost Tuesday night took its toll of many of the fall flowers in the local gardens, although it did not appear to damage the blooms in every garden. Dahlias, cosmos, marigolds and calendulas were hard hit by the sudden drop in temperature.

Albert Bardsley of North A street is enjoying his annual vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Curran motored to Springfield, Mass., Wednesday to attend the Eastern States Exposition.

Miss Rose Raymond of Norwich avenue who has been enjoying a week's vacation has returned to her work at the local mill.

The third night of the carnival boxing given on the Providence street grounds under the auspices of the Taftville Athletic Association, brought out a record breaking crowd, to enjoy the amusements and watch the entertainments of various sorts on the midway. The carnival band has on different evenings given concerts in different sections of the town, and this with the brilliantly lighted grounds attracts sightseers from far and wide. The officials of the association are very much pleased with the patronage that the show has been enjoying.

The field corn which has been planted by the Ponemah company in a number of their lots surrounding the village, is being harvested this week, the work requiring a number of men and teams.

Mrs. Albert Leathers of Plainfield was in town Wednesday.

New Magnetic Balsam Destroys Hair Growth —FOREVER

Prominent scientific and health authorities now acknowledge that the safest and surest way to get rid of superfluous hair forever is by the repeated removal of the superfluous hair roots. Thousands of women are using KARMA, a new oriental balsam, because it can be applied so easily in the privacy of one's home, without muss, without odor, without the slightest danger. When applied, Karma penetrates towards the roots, loosens them and gently lifts out each objectionable hair, root and all, leaving the skin clear, white and beautiful.

Don't suffer the embarrassment of superfluous hair one day longer. Get Karma today, and try it on an absolute guarantee—it rids you forever of superfluous hair or costs you nothing. Sold by all good dealers such as

GIVES TALK ON ZONING BEFORE WEEKLY MEETING OF ROTARIANS

The Zoning System and Its Workings was the topic of an interesting talk given by Henry Shannon Wednesday noon at the weekly meeting of the Norwich Rotary club. Mr. Shannon's talk showed a very thorough study of the subject and its operation in cities where it has been in effect for a number of years. Mr. Shannon said in part:

Five years ago in every large city of our country a land-owner could put up a building to any height, in any place, of any size, and use it to any purpose, regardless of how much it hurt his neighbors. A few cities had passed ordinances limiting the height of buildings, but these limits were subject to easy change and not part of a comprehensive plan. In many cities regulations looking toward zoning were practiced or attempted, but they were usually for chosen sections or to meet local emergencies. Building laws, apart from those applying to fire limits, treated all parts of the city alike, whether inside or suburban, whether business centers or residential outskirts. Really the upbuilding of a city was left to the whim or personal profit of the individual builder and he could do what he wanted to do with his own land, even if it hurt the city or neighborhood.

Some people think that instead of a system of zoning that the same results can be accomplished by private restrictions in deeds. The history of private restrictions has been far from satisfactory. They have operated fairly well in residential developments, but have almost never been resorted to for the regulation of business buildings, to prevent the invasion of industry in business localities or to stabilize large land areas, different parts of which can properly be put to different uses. When localities are built up without restrictions it is always too late to impose them because private owners can never agree after their buildings are once erected. Even in private residential developments the beneficial effect of private restrictions is apt to be short-lived.

A zone is a belt. Medieval walled towns in Europe were somewhat circular in form. When they outgrew their walls, especially in the case of large cities, the location of the walls would be made into public parks or circular boulevards, and outside of the former walls the land would be laid out in belts, sometimes restricted to different classes of residence. These were called zones.

A man does not have to be a judge or a lawyer to understand the fundamentals of zoning. They are plain, common sense and will appeal to any city official or property owner. The conditions existing in cities which have not adopted zoning are really due to the inability of the individual to protect himself. The power of the community is the only safeguard and the community has not discovered how to exercise its power. Some landowners do not consider that they really own their land unless they are free to do anything and everything with it that is possible. Others will gladly treat their neighbors fairly if they have any assurance that their neighbors will do the same. The truth is that no man can make the best use of his own unless his neighbors are required to make such use of their own as not to injure others.

The people of every state have the right to pass laws for the public safety, health, morals and general welfare. Call it community power or police power. It is that power which the state employs for fire protection, for sanitary regulations and for preventing the spread of epidemics. One does not assert that the public must pay him something when the health department says that he must be vaccinated, and yet he is giving up something of his absolute freedom. His compensation is that he, along with all of his neighbors, is protected against the spread of smallpox. Fireproof requirements, plumbing rules, strength of construction requirements, all come within the police power. They are exercised without compensation being made to the private owner subjected to regulation. The courts rigorously uphold these laws and ordinances, scrutinising them, however, to see that they are related to health, safety, morals and the general welfare of the community. The police power can as well be employed for zoning as for uniform sanitary and fire protection laws. It must, however, similarly be confined within the limits recognized by the courts. That is, zoning must be done with relation to the public health, safety, morals and general welfare. If it is done arbitrarily or for purely sentimental purposes or with unjust discrimination, the courts will not uphold it.

The first comprehensive zoning in the United States was done in Boston. A building height of 80 feet was allowed on some main thoroughfares and a limit of 125 feet was imposed on new buildings on all other streets. This ordinance was attacked in the courts for unconstitutionality, but was upheld by the highest court of Massachusetts and was affirmed by the supreme court of the United States. Los Angeles followed with a zoning plan which divided the city into residential and non-residential districts. Under this ordinance, which was retroactive in form, the city authorities ousted a brick yard around which a residential district had grown up. The owner of the brick yard attacked the ordinance on the ground of unconstitutionality but the ordinance was upheld both by the highest court of California and by the United States supreme court. Personally I think a zoning system should not be retroactive.

In general zoning stabilizes buildings and values. Most of all it conserves the future. Zoning does not endeavor to put existing stores out of residential localities or apartment houses out of private home districts or factories out of business localities. It regulates new buildings and changes of uses. Successful zoning endeavors to protect investments rather than destroy existing property.

At as late a date as Jan. 1, 1925, a total of only 320 municipalities in the entire United States had zoning ordinances in effect. It would seem to me that the city of Norwich should be congratulated on getting into the running at such an early date.

President J. Nelson Weymouth presided at the meeting and James L. Case was the song leader. There was a number of guests from other clubs at the meeting. At the business session President Weymouth read an interesting letter from Henry J. LaFontaine who is now in Switzerland studying music.

Wilbur Austin, who recently returned from a tour of the European countries was present at the meeting for the first time in several weeks and he expressed himself as being well pleased at being home once more.

Announcements Made

Several announcements were made that were of interest to the Rotarians, the first being the notice of a meeting to be conducted by the Norwich Rotary club as guests of the Willimantic club on October 13th; the governor of the 30th district of Rotary will make his official visitation to the Norwich club on Oct. 7th; on October 7th there will be a hearing on the Norwich-Putnam proposed road at the Plainfield town hall in Central Village to which all members of the club are invited.

Talk on Aviation

Herbert M. Lerou gave a short talk on the aviation policy of Col. Mitchell saying that Colonel Mitchell, who favors a separate department of united air service might properly have resigned after he failed to receive recognition in the first place. While the air service is of great value to the army and navy, it is essential that discipline be maintained in both the branches. High officials of both army and navy seem to be against the united service plan, but it is hoped that the investigation now in progress may report to congress sufficient information to enable that body to formulate plans which will properly end the controversy and adopt what is found to be the best method of handling the government air service.

Chairman Charles A. Saxton of the Educational committee, outlined in detail the six main objects of the organization, after which an instructive dialogue was put on by Chairman Saxton and James L. Case, answering the question, "What is Rotary?" The history of the Norwich Rotary club was then briefly sketched and Dr. Hugh B Campbell closed with an enlightening talk on Acquaintanceship at Rotary Conclaves.

Flower Show in New London

The Horticultural society of New London will hold a show of dahlias and other flowers, also of fruit and vegetables Friday at the parish house of Second Congregational church in the afternoon and evening. The show is free and everybody is invited to exhibit. Worth while prizes will be offered. There are sections for amateurs, professionals and commercial growers, with numerous classes in each.

Adversity is the only scale that gives the correct weight of our friends.

FIVE NORWICH GIRLS FRESHMEN AT COLLEGE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 24.—Connecticut college now has in its entering class girls from twenty different states; two girls from Hawaii, and one from the District of Columbia. Connecticut still sends the largest quota, 54 girls. Out of these fifty-four, five are from Norwich, two from Danielson, and several from Storrs, Willimantic and Hartford.

Norwich is represented in the class of '29 by the Misses Grace Alberta Boardman, Lois V. Latimer, Elsie Anna Peterson, Annie Alexander and Marcia C. Stanton, all graduates of the Norwich Free academy.

Miss Boardman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Boardman, of 31 Slater avenue. She is a graduate of the class of '25 at the academy, was on the honor roll, a member of the color committee of her class and was for two consecutive years in the Glee Club Cantata.

Miss Latimer, also a member of the class of '25 at the academy, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Latimer, of 167 Mt. Pleasant street. She was one of the speakers at graduation, a member of the glee club and also took part in the club's cantata.

Miss Peterson, a graduate of the class of '24, was out for the past year because of the loss of her father. She was one of the honor students of her class as well as a speaker at graduation.

Miss Alexander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Alexander, of Sturtevant avenue, was also an honor student of the academy, graduating in 1925.

Miss Stanton is the daughter of Principal and Mrs. J. B. Stanton, of East Great Plain, and is also a member of the glee club, as well as an honor student of her class.

The college has undergone marked improvement; more of the campus has been graded and curbed, thus improving the general appearance of the college.

Dean Irene Nye, recently returned from a fifteen months leave of absence, is the Fellow of Colonial house, the new dormitory.

Miss Esther Hull, graduate of Norwich Free academy of 1915, and the Lawrence hospitals, 1922, is the new nurse at the infirmary.

TRYING SUIT OVER SAND TAKEN BY CONTRACTOR

Trial of the case of Alpheus N. Williams of Mystic, against Frank Arrigoni and others of Middletown was begun Wednesday in the superior court in New London before Judge Allyn L. Brown. The plaintiff asks for damages of $8,500. The suit arises over certain lots of gravel and sand which the plaintiff claims were taken from the bank on the premises owned by him by the defendant in Groton.

The defense in its amended answer to the allegations of the plaintiff's complaint deny the allegations. The defendants claim that on or about Feb. 4, 1924, the defendants were engaged under contract with the state in building a new state highway, known as the Old Mystic road, which lies partly in the town of Groton. They claim that at this time the land in question was owned by Byron S. Watrous and that he, acting through his agent, Alfred B. Watrous, gave the defendant a license to take gravel and dirt from the premises and that in consideration thereof the defendants paid Watrous the sum of $50.

The defendant in his answer also claims that the plaintiffs knew that the defendant was in possession of the land and were removing dirt therefrom, under license. It is also claimed in the defendant's answer that the plaintiff has never revoked the license before bringing the action.

The defense answer further alleges that at the time the plaintiff claims to have purchased the land from Watrous, the latter was not in possession of the land, all of which the plaintiff knew.

TWO HONORARY DEGREES CONFERRED AT COLLEGE

At the opening of Connecticut college Wednesday morning, the honorary degree of master of arts was conferred upon two members of the faculty. Associate Professor Carola Ernst of the French department and Associate Professor Henry Bill Selden of the department of fine arts. The presentation of these degrees was postponed from commencement in June owing to the absence in Europe of Professors Ernst and Selden. The latter has completed ten years of service at the college.

The exercises started with an academic procession in which the choir and seniors and members of the faculty in cap and gown, marched into the gymnasium before a standing audience of more than 500 students and guests. President Marshall's opening address, centering on the college of distinction, was delivered at the close of the chapel exercises. His address dwelt on the fact that colleges are in an introspective period and if they are to regain their former dignity, prestige and leadership in thought must raise and elevate scholarship.

GRACE CHURCH AUXILIARY BEGINS FALL MEETINGS

The first fall meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of Grace Episcopal church, Yantic, was held Tuesday evening in the parish house, with the president, Mrs. Charles Burbeck, presiding. There were ten present. Plans for the winter's work were formulated. Announcement was made of the Golden tri-annual convention, to be held at New Orleans, Thursday, Oct. 8. This is a day of thank offering for Episcopal churches all over the United States. On this date, a special service of prayer will be held in the parish house of Grace church, Yantic, at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, for all women interested in missions.

During the social hour at the close of the meeting, cake and coffee furnished by Mrs. John Hart and Mrs. Charles Kimball, were served.

FROM COAST TO COAST WITH HIS CRUTCHES

Edwin N. Byers, who walks on crutches, was a caller at the Bulletin office Wednesday, where he stated that he started out from Seattle, Oregon, on June 10, and arrived at Portland, Me., Sept. 12. In the journey of three months he wore out six pairs of shoes. When he left Seattle he had 16 cents, five whetstones and two razor strops, by the use of which he sharpened knives and scissors, which financed him along his route. He slept wherever night overtook him.

CONNECTICUT COLLEGE'S FRESHMAN CLASS 506

Connecticut college at New London opened Wednesday for its 11th year with an enrollment of about 505 students, distributed as follows: Seniors, 74; juniors, 116; sophomores, 155; freshmen, 160.

The significance of the number in the sophomore class can not be mistaken, for the shrinkage in numbers, as compared with the 174 students who entered last year is very small and the policy of the committee on admissions in choosing able girls, capable of sustaining the stress and pressure of college work is being vindicated. The freshman class has been chosen from upward of 800 applicants for admission and represents more than 20 states and territories.

Colonial house, the new dormitory is occupied by 44 students, who are delighted with the comfort and beauty of their accommodations. Dean Irene Nye, who has recently returned from 15 months' absence, will be fellow of this house, which will be the social center of the college.

The vital factor of the college is the faculty, and in this body there have been but few changes from the personnel of last year. Leave of absence will be enjoyed by Miss Caroline Black, associate professor of the department of botany, and by Mrs. Bessie Bloom Wesse, associate professor of the department of economics and sociology. The leave of absence of Miss Mary McKee, assistant professor of chemistry has been extended for another year in order that she may continue her work in Yale for the doctorate of philosophy in chemistry. Miss Black proposes to study in Harvard, while Mrs. Wessel has been released for a year to undertake important sociological research under the joint auspices of Brown university and Connecticut college, a project which has been financed by the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Foundation. Miss Evelyn Fernald has been appointed as a substitute for Miss Black, while Miss May Hall James is to act as substitute for the year for Mrs. Wessel. Miss Agnes B. Leahy, secretary of the personnel bureau and assistant in psychology, has returned after a year's leave of absence, during which, spent in graduate study at Columbia university she earned the degree of master of arts.

FOURTH WEEKLY LIST OF "WET" DRIVERS

The fourth weekly list of operators whose licenses have been suspended for one year for driving in Connecticut while under the influence of liquor was given out Wednesday at the state motor vehicle department as a part of the effort to reduce this highway menace. There are forty-eight names on the list. The cases of seven have been appealed. The department advised people to notify the department or the police in case they should see any of the suspended drivers operating motor vehicles. The following is the list:

Carl Angale, Fairfield, William T. Baker, Hartford, James P. Blood, Hartford, Carence M. Brown, Meriden, Joseph Buceviz, Hartford, Ernest Carenna, E. Hartford, John L. Carrol, Windsor, Thomas J. MISS ESTHER ALLEN IS STUDYING AT WASHINGTON

Miss Esther Allen, occupational therapist at the Union hospital, Fall River, left her position Sept. 15 to enter the Walter Reed general hospital in Washington, D. C. Miss Allen opened the occupational therapy department at the Union hospital in January, 1923, since which time her devotion to her numerous patients has been marked, and she has taught many profitable occupations. At the Walter Reed hospital Miss Allen will take a post graduate course in occupational therapy.

Miss Allen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David L. Allen of 158 Broad street, this city.

Car Stolen in New London

The Norwich police were notified from New London Wednesday evening to be on the lookout for an automobile that had been stolen from there. It was an Overland with registration N-7898, which, according to the state registration list, is the property of William Popkin of 100 Ocean avenue.

Attended Golden Wedding Anniversary

Friends from Plainfield, this state, were among those attending the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Cadwell on Tuesday in Springfield, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Cadwell received many gifts, including $200 in gold and gifts of silver, linen, gold and cut glass. The Baptist church at Southington, Conn., sent a gift of $25 in gold. Mr. and Mrs. Cadwell have lived in Springfield since 1900, going there from this city where he was employed by Henry Allen & Son, undertakers.

BANK BRINGS FORECLOSURE AGAINST PALACE THEATRE

A foreclosure suit on a $25,000 mortgage has been brought in the superior court by the Bankers Trust Co. against the Norwich Palace Theatre Corporation, owner of the theatre building between Rose Place and Ferry street. The mortgage was given on Feb. 21, 1924 to cover a note of the amount mentioned.

Named in the suit as co-defendants are the Norwich Savings Society, claiming a prior mortgage for $40,000, the Norwich Amusement company, claiming a lease on the property, John H. Wilson and John Hart, also claiming a lease.

The suit is returnable in October, the papers for the bank having been drawn by C. V. James of Brown & James.

WILL LAY CORNERSTONE OF SHELTERING ARMS BUILDING

The United Workers of Norwich take pleasure in announcing that the cornerstone of the new Sheltering Arms Building on Rockwell street and McKinley avenue will be laid at 4:30 p. m. on Tuesday, September 29th.

The program will be brief but appropriate, and the committee in charge extend a cordial invitation to the public, hoping that they will show their interest by a large attendance.

A further detailed announcement of the ceremony will be made later.

Given Surprise Shower

A surprise shower was given Tuesday evening at the Y. W. H. A. rooms in honor of Miss Rae Nowick, who is soon to be married to Joseph Friedman, a young business man of this city. Her fellow club members, her co-workers at the Boston Store, besides personal friends and relatives made up the large number present at the enjoyable occasion and the bride to be received a great variety of useful and decorative gifts.

One of the entertaining features was a mock marriage with Dora Sifon as the bride and Sara Mintz as the groom. The evening was spent in a general social way and refreshments were served. The arrangements were carried out under the direction of Miss Leah Addlestone, Miss Sara Nowick and Miss Jenny Lowenberger.

FRENCH HAVE MADE OFFER FOR WAR DEBT SETTLEMENT

Proposal Was Written by Joseph Caillaux, French Minister of Finance—Secrecy Shrouds the Terms of the Proposal—Matter Probably Will Come Up For Discussion Before Both Debt Commissions Today—French Delegates Are a Unit an Proposal Submitted—Members of Both Commissions Were Guests at the White House Last Night.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—The long pending Franco-American debt funding negotiations got under way today and the French have submitted an offer for a settlement.

There the conversations looking to an arrangement to fund France's four billion dollar debt rested tonight after a brief formal joint session between the commissions representing the two governments and two separate meetings of the American commission had been held.

Announcement that a definite offer had been laid before the Americans was made by Joseph Caillaux the French minister of finance and head of his government's commission.

"I made a definite proposal," he said, "I wrote it myself coming over on the boat. My colleagues are a unity on it."

Under-Secretary Winston, the American commission secretary, at the close of the second meeting of the American commission secretary, at the close of the second meeting of the American commission secretary, at the close of the second meeting of the Americans, said "no official proposal" was before them, but almost simultaneously there were declarations from other quarters that the French suggestions were unacceptable at least to some of the Americans.

The day's developments presaged intensive discussion of the whole situation at the joint meeting called for mid-day tomorrow.

The suddenness of the French offer was forecast, however, in M. Caillaux's statement in greeting the American commission that the French were ready as practical men to go to work on the problem. Secretary Melon, chairman of the American commission, welcomed the visitors with the declaration that "it is our duty to reach with you a conclusion in the estimation of each of our peoples, fair, and in the practical test of time, workable."

Immediately after the meeting, which lasted only an hour, Secretary Mellon reconvened his colleagues and they shut themselves in the conference room for an hour and a half longer. Late in the afternoon they met a second time.

All members of the two commissions temporarily abandoned the task before them tonight, however, and gathered at the white house as guests of the president at dinner. Besides the commissions, all members of the Cabinet excepting Secretary Work, who is absent from the city and Secretary Weeks, who is ill, attended. Congress was represented by Senator Borah, of Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee; Senator Swanson of Virginia, ranking democratic member of the same committees; Chairman Porter of the house affairs committee and Representative Linthicum, of Maryland, ranking democrat member of that committee.

Others attending were Acting Secretary Davis of the war department; Under-Secretary Winston of the treasury; Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador to France; Everett Sanders, secretary to the president; Assistant Secretary Wright of the state department; Count de Sartiges, counselor to the French embassy; William R. Castle, Arthur N. Young and Spencer Phenix of the state department, Count Jacques de Sieyes, secretary to the French embassy, Robert Lacourgayet, financial attache of the French embassy, Floyd G. Blair, adviser to the American debt commission and Colonel Sherwood Cheney and Captain Adolphus Andrews, the president's aides.

The day's events as they concerned the American commission's meetings were shrouded in almost complete secrecy. There was an absence of official statements from any source save only the brief speeches made by Chairman Mellon of the American commission and M. Caillaux in opening the sessions.

Mellon told the French there was no disposition here to minimize their difficulties nor to discount the ravages they had withstood. He believed that France faced the facts now under strong leadership and would emerge successfully from all her difficulties.

The treasury secretary declared that this government recognized the possible influence on world peace that the present negotiations might bear, adding that it was impossible for the Americans "to escape the repercussions."

"We feel therefore," he said, "the great responsibility resting upon us. To establish the binding character of an international promise and to protect its own citizens, the creditor nation must seek adjustment. To keep good its word and to give itself time to recover its prosperity, the debtor nation must determine its future liabilities. No concern can successfully reorganize in the face of an unfunded obligation. So we meet here in council as business men to conclude the one matter which is in controversy between our two countries."

richest city—New York—with its manifold industries and scores of skyscrapers, and is more than double the currency in actual circulation in the United States.

Since the close of the world war, foreign loans offered publicly in this country have totaled approximately $5,000,000,000. In 1924 alone the total was $1,243,135,000, exclusive of countless private banking operations which are not publicly advertised.

It is only within the last two years, particularly since the inception of the Dawes plan, that European industry generally has been placed on a sound enough basis to attract the investment of American capital. Previously most of America's foreign loans were made to governments, amply secured by fixed revenues and the high credit of individual nations. The past year, however, has witnessed such progress in the stabilization of world trade and commerce that large banks are freely lending money to foreign industries and a steadily increasing number are finding it possible of place loans with the wider American investigating public.

Contributing to the growing power of the United States as the world's financial center has been the unofficial but nevertheless effective embargo on foreign loans in London, enforced since the restoration of the gold standard in Great Britain. Foreign borrowers who had previously been accustomed to satisfy their money requirements in London have been compelled more and more to look to this country for aid. The diversion of British business to New York, because of these restrictions, was strikingly emphasized this summer when Australia floated a $75,000,000 loan here.

Financial conditions in other European countries which prior to the war did a large international banking business have not yet returned to the point of stability which would enable them to float large foreign loans. As a result New York is gradually assuming responsibilities long shouldered by London, Paris, Berlin, Amsterdam, Brussels and Vienna.

Demands upon American bankers for financial assistance are manifold and varied. From public utilities in Japan, cotton planters in Ceara, coffee growers in Sao Paulo, nitrate producers in Chile and steel manufacturers in Hungary, loans are sought.

Based on inquiries from foreign governments municipalities and industries, tentative estimates made in banking circles list prospective loans to various countries as follows:

Germany, $200,000,000.
France, $150,000,000.
Italy, $100,000,000.
Belgium, $75,000,000.
Czecho-Slovakia, $70,000,000.
Japan, $50,000,000.
Austria, $37,500,000.
Hungary, $30,000,000.

Scores of other loans, ranging in size from $1,000,000 to $25,000,000, are listed as possibilities.

For several months the chief obstacle in the way of large scale European borrowing has been the tightening of Uncle Sam's purse strings pending agreements on the funding of war debts. This has effectively closed the door to France, Italy, Czecho-Slovakia and other nations whose war debts are unfunded. Belgium negotiated a settlement last month and is now eligible for a loan to aid in the stabilization of its money situation. Bankers have indicated their willingness to assist in such a program as soon as the country is ready to proceed, which may be late this year.

If satisfactory debt settlements are reached at conferences between the United States and the French and Italian governments, it is considered certain that large private loans to these countries will follow. France is expected to ask for at least $100,000,000 and Italy probably will replace its present $50,000,000 exchange stabilization credit with a loan of $100,000,000 or more. Flotation of a $50,000,000 Czecho-Slovakian bond issue awaits only a similar agreement as to its war debt.

Bankers who have recently returned from Germany reported that no further financial aid would be needed by the central government for some time. The largest undertaking in Germany at the present time is the development of the Germen Rentenbank as an institution to finance the promotion of agriculture. This bank recently obtained an initial $25,000,000 installment of a loan which may total $100,000,000. Scores of German cities and industries have application on file for the sale of small bond issues. Austria and Hungary are interested mainly in obtaining new capital for the re-habilitation of their industries.

Relaxation of Japan's restrictions of gold exports and the possibility of that country's return to the gold standard have aroused reports in Wall Street that Japan may follow Great Britain's example of fortifying itself with a large American credit. The only Japanese bond issue in sight, however, is one for the city of Tokio, which may total $50,000,000.

AMERICA BIDS FAIR TO BECOME BANKER OF WORLD

NEW YORK, Sept. 24—(By the Associated Press)—Opening of the French debt funding negotiations, with a prospective settlement likely to pave the way for a fresh flood of European loans, has directed attention to America's growing prestige as banker of the world.

Loans to foreign countries and industries, including private bank credits and advances, so far this year have exceeded $1,800,000,000 and with negotiations pending for an additional billion dollars, 1925 promises to set a new high record in foreign financing.

Fortified by the possession of almost one-half the world's supply of gold, the United States has not found it difficult to extend its credit to the rest of the world. Yet in the space of three months, its investors are sending to foreign nations more money than it took to build the Panama Canal. The total of private American investments abroad exceeding $10,000,000,000, or approximately $90 per capita, approaches the assessed valuation of the world's

CAILLAUX VISITED GRAVE OF THE UNKNOWN SOLDIER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—Like others high in official life in foreign countries who come to America on missions of momentous concern, Joseph Caillaux, French finance minister, found time between a host of engagements today to pay his country's respects at the tomb of the unknown soldier in Arlington national cemetery.

Accompanied by Emile Deschner, French ambassador to Washington; Brigadier General George A. L. Dumont, military attache and the members of the debt commission, M. Caillaux made the pilgrimage to the cemetery in the early afternoon and placed a wreath on the tomb, while a platoon of American soldiers stood at attention.

The minister and his associates then visited the interior of the huge memorial amphitheatre, inspecting the various glass-encased wreaths, flags, and other tokens which have been bestowed by many governments and organizations in memory of the soldier dead.

Returning to the tomb, M. Caillaux stopped, doffed his hat and bowed in reverence. Then, after exchanging courtesies with Lieutenant P. M. McRae, in command of the pigeon, left for a drive around the burial grounds.

DEPOSITION IN $100,000 SUIT BY PROCTER AGAINST SPRAGUE

CHICAGO, Sept. 24. (AP)—Reading of depositions continued today in the trial of the suit in which Col. William C. Procter, Cincinnati manufacturer, seeks to recover from Colonel A. A. Sprague one-half of a note for $100,000. This sum represented money advanced to further the campaign of Leonard Wood for the 1920 Republican presidential nomination.

The proceedings were enlivened when Colonel Sprague replied to a question of a Jewish juror as to whether city hall business was carried on as usual on Yom Kippur, the Jewish new year, which is next Monday. The juror had asked Federal Judge Flick to recess on that day and the judge indicated he would not do so. Counsel for Colonel Procter objected to Colonel Sprague talking with the juror, but Judge Flick excused the defendant and ordered a holiday for Monday.

The jury had been excused early to permit counsel to argue over admission of additional depositions from 67 prominent politicians and business men throughout the country, five of which had been read into the record.

Reading of the depositions had continued with the understanding that opposing counsel in a night conference had reached an agreement. The introduction of that kind of evidence proved to be so long drawn out, however, that Colonel Procter's counsel objected to more of it. They said it was merely cumulative, that it was cluttering up the record, and that the very amount of it was prejudicial to the interests of their client that it would befog them and cause them to forget just what was cause at issue.

No decision was reached, however, and it was indicated that the reading would require another two days.

Tue droning reading was interrupted once this afternoon for the appearance on the witness stand of Charles E. Estes vice-president of the Illinois Merchants Trust company, which handled the $100,000 note in question.

He testified that the note was discounted by the bank before any signatures appeared on the back. He refused to state flatly that Colonel Procter paid the note, but said the bank got the money.

Colonel Procter insists that Colonel Sprague indorsed the paper as co-guarantor, while Colonel Sprague insists his signature was appended so as to indicate to the bank, of which he was a director that it was business that he had procured.

The trial previously had developed Colonel Procter's identification of notes totaling $450,000 for funds he made available for the Wood campaign, his admission that he would not be astonished if others raised the total to $700,000, and statements by others that the Wood campaign cost approximately $1,700,000, of which $1,000,000 was advanced by the Cincinnati manufacturer.

BREWERS TO FIGHT FOR LEGALIZATION OF 2.75 BEER

NEW YORK, Sept. 24—(A. P.)—The United States Brewers' Association today announced inauguration of "an open and honorable fight to legalize the manufacture of 2.75 per cent beer."

It invited "civic bodies concerned in the promotion of temperance to join us in legalizing the sale of non-intoxicating malt beverages." No such body was mentioned by name.

The resignation of Christian Feigenspan, president, offered because he disapproved a reported compromise with the anti-saloon league, was declined. A sub-committee was appointed to ask him to reconsider his action.

The organization, at a meeting of the executive committee, went on record urging the manufacture of beer with the same alcoholic content as that manufactured in the Scandinavian countries, where the association says it has been found to be non-intoxicating as a relief from the "poisonous illicit liquors that have been bootlegged since the advent of prohibition."

"The association is seeking no favors, but it believes that the restoration of the brewing industry is a matter of public concern and it cannot and will not refuse to co-operate with any civic bodies of the people who are concerned in the promotion of temperance and to this end are willing to join us in legalizing the sale of non-intoxicating malt beverages," a resolution passed today read.

LICENSE OF PROVIDENCE PHYSICIAN REVOKED

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 24. (AP)—The state board of health today revoked the license of Dr. James P. Coll, proprietor of the Victor Health Service, this city, after finding him guilty of gross unprofessional conduct, conduct likely to deceive and defraud the public and commission of fraud and deceit in obtaining his certificate to practice medicine in Rhode Island.

Among the witnesses for the prosecution was Dr. James A. Seaman, secretary of the Academy of Medicine, Springfield, Mass., who had testified in court when Dr. Coll was convicted of practicing medicine in the Bay State without a license. In that case the doctor was sentenced to two months in jail and sentenced to pay a fine of $200. He appealed.

He has 10 days in which to file an appeal from the Rhode Island health board's decision to the supreme court of the state.

NEW CANAAN TO PURCHASE SITE FOR HIGH SCHOOL

NEW CANAAN, Sept. 24. (AP)—At a special town meeting tonight it was voted to appropriate $12,000 for purchasing a site for a high school building and for making preliminary plans. A committee of five, also voted for, to have charge of selecting and purchasing the site, was appointed as follows: W. B. Simon, George W. Duryea, G. T. Smith, Stanley P. Mead and Walter C. Wood. The committee will report at a special meeting called for Oct. 9.

The necessity of a high school here has been brought about by the decision of Stamford not to allow New Canaan pupils to attend the Stamford high school after the first term closes next February. The New Canaan high school pupils have been going to Stamford since 1909.

Mosul Cause of Scene At L. of N. Assembly

Meeting Was Adjourned When Turkish Delegates Took Action on Deportation of Christians.

GENEVA, Sept. 24. (AP)—The Mosul muddle thickened during a dramatic session of the council of the league, which M. Loucheur, as president, hastily adjourned after an outburst of disapproval from those present against the attitude of Ruchdi Bey, head of the Turkish delegation, on the question of the deportation of Christians.

The committee of the council had introduced a resolution, which subsequently was unanimously approved, authorizing the despatch of a special league commissioner to the Mosul area to examine the British charges that Christian Chaldeans were being ill-treated and exiled by the Turks, the Turkish counter-charges that the British had occupied points held by Turkey, and in a general way to keep the council informed of any incidents liable to endanger peace.

Colonel Amery, British secretary for the Dominions, insisted that the commissioner should not only have the right to pursue his investigation south of the Brussels line, which is occupied by the British, but also in the narrow Mosul strip north of the line occupied by the Turks.

Ruchdi Bey evaded a clear answer; whereupon Colonel Amery repeated his statement, saying: "I think Turkey should make perfectly clear its attitude on this important point."

Ruchdi Bey replied that anything north of the Brussels line was Turkish; hence anything touching the treatment of the population there became a minority problem which was not concerned with the main Mosul dispute.

Again Colonel Amery put his question, demanding an unequivocal yes or no, but again the Turkish delegate refused to answer, saying he could only repeat his previous statements.

Murmurs of disapprobation arose from various parts of the hall, rapidly merging into a violent manifestation. M. Loucheur vigorously pounded the table and called for order. Immediately thereafter he announced that the debate was closed and the resolution adopted.

"Great Britain having accepted for the south, the council hopes that the Turks will do the same for the north," the presiding officer somewhat caustically remarked, then quickly adjourned the session.

After once more denying the deportation of Christians, Ruchdi Bey brought fresh charges against Great Britain. One was that an Irak band, after committing atrocities, had attacked a Turkish post north of the Brussels line. A second was that fifty persons of all ages and sexes, escaping from the oppressive rule of the British forced occupation, had taken refuge in the Turkish zone. A third charged that band of 500, including Assyrians, commanded by British officers, was preparing to attack the Turkish posts.

Colonel Amery informed the council that about 3,000 Chaldean Christians had been deported by the Turks. Ruchdi Bey retorted that the historians who had abandoned Turkey were working treacherously against Turkey on the British side. He demanded the appointment of a special commission to make an investication of the military situation and of all incidents which had occurred since the signing of the Treaty of Lausanne in 1923. But the council declined today to take action on his proposal.

GERMANY IS TO NEGOTIATE FOR A SECURITY PACT

BERLIN, Sept. 24—Germany will meet the allied powers to negotiate a security pact. The cabinet, presided over by President Von Hindenburg, today accepted the invitation of the allies to attend a conference to this end.

Dr. Luther, the chancellor, and Gustav Stresemann, foreign minister, will represent Germany at the conference, with Dr. Friedrich Gauss, chief legal expert of the foreign office, as secretary-general, and probably Dr. B. W. Von Buelow, chief of the league of nations division of the foreign office, together with various under-securities.

The German delegates will not be bound by inflexible instructions, but will enter upon the discussion with a firm determination to effect the conclusion of a security pact along the lines of the government's various recent pronouncements.

While October 5 is persistently named as the date of the conference, neither date nor location has been definitely agreed upon, the allies deferring to Germany's wishes on both issues.

Now that the nationalists have acquiesced in the government's formal participation in the conference on condition that it adheres to the principles of its July note, no serious parliamentary position awaits the German foreign ministry if he succeeds in securing a pact negotiated along the lines he has promulgated, with the sanction of the chancellor and other members of the cabinet, the nationalist ministers included.

Germany's entrance into the league of nations is viewed as a logical sequel to the successful conclusion of a security pact.

The cabinet will confer with the premiers of the federated states tomorrow and discuss its line of procedure at the forthcoming conference with the Reichstag foreign relations committee Saturday.

President Von Hindenburg received the proceedings of the cabinet council by requesting the chancellor to accelerate official action with respect to the adoption of measures calculated to reduce the prevailing high cost of living, which continues to constitute the government's most outstanding internal issue.

HERE IS AN OPPORTUNITY TO FIND WHAT'S IN A NAME

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—(A. P.)—Lieleusszuleuszeszes Willihiminizzisszeizzli Hurrizzisseizzli of Folsom, California, in addition to bearing one of the longest names on record, has been passed as an undesirable alien.

W. W. Husband, assistant secretary of labor, today signed an order for his deportation on the ground that the Siemese had been convicted of arson and was therefore ineligible to remain in the country. Friends of the man had waged a long fight in his behalf.

Welcome For Crew of Seaplane PN-9 No. 1

Greeted as Heroes Upon Their Arrival at San Francisco Yesterday — No More Flights Before January.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 24—(A. P.)—Commander John Rodgers and the four members of the crew of the naval seaplane PN-9, No. 1, were greeted as returning heroes today. The aviators, who left August 31 on an attempted non-stop flight to the Hawaiian Islands and later were picked up near the islands after having been given up for lost, arrived on the battleship Idaho.

The aviators were escorted up Market street by detachments of police, marines and sailors from the Idaho with an army band. At the city hall, they were greeted by Mayor James Rolph, Jr., and a citizens' committee and were given medals.

Asked by a newspaper man if he had any comment to make on the charges made by Col. William Mitchell against the military air service, Commander Rodgers said that he did not know of the charges.

"If he said that the failure of the Hawaiian flight was due to mismanagement, however, he is mistaken," the commander ventured. "I was responsible for all of the flight arrangements and know that no more could have been done than was done."

The aviators were forced to repeat many times the oft told tale of the epochal flight. All included in their statements the firm conviction that they wanted to try again and that the next time they would succeed.

Otis Stantz, radio man, told of having a picture of his little boy and girl aboard the big seaplane.

"All I had to do was look at that picture and say 'You big stiff, they think you are the greatest man in the world. Now be that kind of a man. Believe me, boy, that picture cheered me up."

Tonight they were the guests of honor at a banquet attended by notables from many parts of the state and the three arms of the military service, and they told their story over again.

Another day of entertainment awaits the fliers tomorrow, after Commander Rodgers, Lieutenant Connell will proceed to Washington to testify in the air inquiry there. The remainder of the crew expects to go to San Diego on station duty.

NO MORE HAWAII FLIGHTS BEFORE NEXT JANUARY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—(A. P.)—No further attempt to make a non-stop flight from California to Hawaii will be made before January, Secretary Wilbur announced today.

BOBBED HAIR BANDIT WAS IN HARTFORD LAST WEEK

HARTFORD, Sept. 24. (AP)—Mrs. Kitty Landrigan, alleged bobbed hair bandit held in New York following the attempted hold-up of an Amsterdam avenue jewelry store, wife of John J Landrigan, formerly of 26 Kenneth street, Hartford, was in this city that week according to the police, who are investigating a report that she was seen entering a local hotel. The police say she received money telegraphed to her from New York city by Anna Blue, who was held by the New York police as a friend of the Landrigan woman for questioning following the hold-up.

Inquiry by the police at the hotel failed to show that she had registered there last Thursday when she was reported to have been seen entering. All trace of her movements here was lost until the police learned that on Saturday Mrs. Landrigan, together with a man companion, waited for the receipt of a telegraph money order here.

According to the police, Mrs. Landrigan received the money here under the name of Kitty Burton, one of the aliases which she gave the New York police following her arrest. Information of the amount sent was withheld.

COLONEL MITCHELL IS DUE IN WASHINGTON TONIGHT

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 24. (AP)—Jaunty and debonair, Colonel William Mitchell, the acrid critic of America's air policy, left St. Louis late today for Washington to tell President Coolidge's committee what he knows and thinks about the air forces.

During a four-hour stopover after his arrival from Muskogee, Okla., he reiterated a remark made as he stepped from the train, "I have nothing to say. I've said most of it already."

Colonel Mitchell's train, the Pennsylvania Limited, is due at Washington at 7 o'clock tomorrow night. He abandoned the trip from Texas by automobile because of a cloudburst.

NEW HAVEN ROAD ORDERS 35 CARS OF MULTI-UNIT TYPE

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 24—The Osgood Bradley Car Company has received an order from the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad for 35 passenger coaches, of what is known as the multi-unit type. The contract price is about $900,000.

These cars are intended for the suburban New York service, operating in the electrized zone between New Haven and the Grand Central station. Each is to be motor equipped, so that it can run under its own power using ordinary coaches as tailers, or in units of its own type.

They will be 70 feet long, which is longer than the standard, and will be arranged to seat 124 people.

MACVEAGH APPOINTED AMBASSADOR TO JAPAN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24. (AP)—Charles MacVeagh, of New York, today was appointed ambassador to Japan.

His name has been submitted to Tokyo and has been found acceptable. He is a lawyer of wide experience and the son of a former cabinet officer.

The ambassadorship has been vacant since the death several weeks ago of Edgar A. Bancroft, of Chicago.

"RED" MURPHY WAS FOUND GUILTY OF SELLING LIQUOR

BOSTON, Sept. 24.—(A. P.)—Daniel J. "Red" Murphy of Chelsea, who accused Mayor Quigley of Chelsea of "framing" him when arraigned on a liquor charge a year ago and who declared he would produce evidence that would involve the mayor in liquor law violations, was found guilty in federal court here today of selling liquor.

Soon after Murphy's accusations against Mayor Quigley a federal investigation resulted in the indictment of the mayor and various police officers and citizens on charges of conspiracy to violate the liquor laws. Murphy was among those indicted.

ENGINE TROUBLE A FACTOR IN SHENANDOAH DISASTER

Colonel Hall, U. S. A., Observer on the Naval Board, Testified That the Failure of Two Engines Made More Possible the Drawing of the Shenandoah Into the Vortex of the Storm Which Destroyed the Dirigible—Testimony Was Given That the Ship Began Breaking Before the Control Car Fell.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 24—A much more vivid word picture of the wrecking of the airship Shenandoah than any heretofore given together with important evidence bearing on at least one possible contributing cause of the disaster was presented here today to the naval court of inquiry.

High lights in the day's developments were:

Testimony of Colonel C. G. Hall, U. S. A., observer on board, that the failure of two of the Shenandoah's engine's made more probable the drawing of the ship into the vortex of the storm which wrecked her.

More definite testimony that the ship actually began breaking in two before the control car fell, carrying Commander Zachary Lansdowne and other officers and men to their death.

The offering of evidence that the Shenandoah began to break up when arrested after a fall of nearly two thousand feet in three minutes.

Declarations of two witnesses that Commander Lansdowne had not been reluctant to make the flight at the time it was undertaken and that he voiced no dissatisfaction with itinerary fixed by the navy department.

Introduction of the barograph record of the ship indicating that her first sudden ascent began at 4:26 a. m., central time on September 3 and lasted eight minutes during which she ascended 1130 feet: that two minutes later she began another and more rapid rise going from 3,016 feet to 6,065 feet in approximately ten minutes and that she then fell abruptly 1,785 feet in three minutes.

At that point the barograph ceased to function and testimony of some survivors indicates that it was at about this time that the hull gave way just forward of amidships and the craft broke in two.

Both the barograph record and the estimate of witnesses examined today tend to indicate that the Shenandoah was buffeted about in the storm for fifteen minutes from the time of her first uncontrolled ascent to an extreme altitude of 6,065 feet until she finally began to break up at an altitude of approximately 4,000 feet.

While the word picture of the disaster painted by Colonel Hall proved the most absorbing of all the testimony, perhaps the most important from a viewpoint of the purpose of the inquiry was his statement with respect to the engines, one of which failed because of a cracked cylinder and another because of a loss of water.

This phase of the inquiry was introduced by Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, president of the court, who asked what effect the engine failure had on the failure to escape the line squall.

"I believe if it had been possible to have had the power of all five engines constantly," Colonel Hall replied, "it would have been more probable that we would not have been drawn into the vortex of the storm which wrecked the ship. I do not believe, however, engine power had anything to do with the situation after we got into the vortex of the storm."

Replying to another question Colonel Hall testified that under all the circumstances he did not think the Shenandoah could have escaped the "twister" which tore her in pieces. He added that he thought the ship was "flown judiciously" to escape the thunderstorms which were observed off either beam and that had she not met the "twister" there would have been no difficulty with the thunderstorms themselves. "Have you any criticism to make of the handling of the Shenandoah prior to and during that storm?" asked Admiral Jones.

"None whatever," replied Colonel Hall.

The army officer was positive in his declaration that the ship began to break up before the control car parted. He was in agreement with Lieutenant Commander C. E. Rosendahl, another witness, and navigator of the Shenandoah, that the wooden struts of the control car first snapped on the downward drop of the ship.

Commander Rosendahl could not say whether he heard the noise of snapping girders after or at the same time that he heard the struts break. Commander Rosendahl then was climbing the ladder into the car, having been ordered up for duty by Commander Lansdowne.

Colonel Hall was in the control car when he heard the struts cracking, but he said the rigidity of the car was not lessened as the support wires were holding. The ship was then falling. A few seconds later he heard a rending of beams in the hull and it was then that he yelled or thought he yelled to the others to get up into the ship.

MARRIED WHILE GROOM LAY ON HIS DEATH BED

HARTFORD, Sept. 24. (AP)—The marriage Sept. 1 of John Robinson Coombs, 25 years old, prominent West Hartford, building contractor, and Miss Marguerite Theresa Dougherty, 20 years old, while Mr. Coombs lay on his death bed, was disclosed today by a marriage license on file in the town clerk's office in West Hartford. Mr. Coombs died Monday.

The ceremony was performed in the sick room at 315 Park road, West Hartford, by Rev. George W. Reynolds of 84 Whiting lane in the presence of two witnesses, Mrs. Matilda Coombs and Mrs. Arthur Coombs, mother and sister-in-law, respectively, of Mr. Coombs. The marriage license had been made out hurriedly a short time before by Town Clerk Harry Whitman, who had been summoned for the purpose to the bedside, where Mr. Coombs signed it.

The clergyman, bride and witnesses sat by the bed in which the bridegroom lay, while a simple, impressive ceremony was performed. Mr. and Mrs. Coombs had intended to be married this year, but when a relapse in his condition on Sept. 1 gave warning that he was dying, they decided not to delay the marriage.

The bride's home is at 771 Farmington avenue and she is the proprietress of the Kingswood pharmacy at 844 Farmington avenue. She came to Hartford about five years ago from Wilmington, Del., and was employed for a time at Goodwin's drug store, where Mr. Coombs met her. Mr. Coombs and his first wife were divorced about a year ago.

GOELET-WILLARD WEDDING IN NEWPORT YESTERDAY

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 24—Miss Roberta Willard, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Joseph Willard, was married late today to Robert Goelet a member of one of America's wealthy and socially prominent families. The wedding ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents here by Rev. Robert R. White, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

Owing to the illness of Mrs. Willard, mother of the bride, Miss Mary Willard, an aunt, and Mrs. Ogden Goelet, mother of Mr. Goelet, the services were simple. After visiting Mrs. Goelet and Miss Willard at their homes here, the couple left by motor on their honeymoon. They did not make known their destination. Mr. Goelet has been married twice before.

YALE STUDENTS EXCEED THE CAPACITY OF CHAPEL

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 24. (AP)—Yale college will abandon daily compulsory chapel this year after a century of the traditional services, according to Frederic S. Jones, dean of Yale college. The increasing number of under-graduates in the sophomore, junior and senior classes has finally exceeded the limit of capacity of Battell chapel, and these men will be divided into two groups, one attending on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and the other on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, with the groups attending the hour service on Sunday alternate weeks. The daily schedule will also be alternated so the privilege of the Saturday vacation will be divided.

The incoming freshmen will still be required to attend every day, their service coming at an earlier part of the morning. The chapel can accommodate the 850 members of 1929 that are expected to enter when college opens next Thursday. But the upper classes numbering over 1,500 will have to be taken care of in the two groups. If daily chapel for the upper classes is to be restored it will be necessary for Yale to have a new chapel, and Dean Jones expressed the belief that there were friends of Yale that would donate such a structure if the undergraduates desired a return of daily chapel.

Dean Jones also mentioned that the traditional fence of the old campus was in danger. Changes in the walks and roads inside the campus have left the fence in an awkward place but Dean Jones said nothing would be done to it until the opinion of graduates and under-graduates had been heard.

STATE AID TO TOWNS FOR EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES

HARTFORD, Sept. 24—(A. P.)—Payment of $55,150 to 27 towns as state aid for educational purposes was approved today by the state board of control. Application was received for the aid from forty seven towns, but one town, New Hartford, failed to file the required data and the other claims were not allowed, as the towns have not expended an amount in excess of six mills fro mthe town tax for education as required by statute.

The towns to receive aid and the amounts are as follows:

Barkhamsted, $950; Eastford, $400; Colebrook, $300; Tolland, $800; Wolcott, $500; Burlington, $400; Oxford, $800; Coventry, $800; Lebanon, $2,000; Mansfield, $4,000; North Branford, $1,200; Colchester, $2,000; Haddam, $2,750; North Canaan, $2,500; Rocky Hill, $4,000; Chester, $2,000; Pomfret, $1,200; Somers, $4,000; Old Saybrook, $2,000; Orange, $750; Avon, $4,000; Bethel, $4,000; Canton, $4,000; Cromwell, $1,000; East Haddam, $5,000; Ellington, $2,500; Saybrook, $2,000.

Washington clinched its second consecutive American league pennant.

WILLIMANTIC

After the circulation of false rumors regarding the solvency of the institution had resulted in heavy withdrawals, banking conditions at the Willimantic Trust Company are again normal. Thursday morning, Treasurer Herbert W. Huber received a notification from L. E. Shippee, deputy bank commissioner that he regretted the unfortunate condition of earlier in the week and that the state bank commissioner's office was anxious to co-operate in the prosecution of any person who may be found responsible for the circulation of the rumor. The withdrawals Thursday were small, nothing more than the bank would experience in the transaction of an ordinary day's business.

Charles O. Frye of New London will lead the "flying squadron," which will visit this city Sunday afternoon in the interests of the Bridgeport Federation of Men's Bible classes, to acquaint the bible class leaders in the state of the purpose and aims of the state convention of Bible classes, which is to be held in Bridgeport, October 17 and 18.

Mrs. John Clifford Carey, 45 who died Thursday morning at St. Joseph's Hospital following a week's illness, was a lifelong resident of this city. She was the daughter of Dennis and Johannah Connell Clifford. She is survived by her husband, John Carey, of 43 Walnut street.

Miss Sara Keevers of the Visiting Nurse Association has tendered her resignation and is to move to New Britain where she will engage in a similar line of work. Miss Keever, during her several years' residence here, has become widely known.

Late Thursday afternoon a report was issued from St. Joseph's Hospital that Michael Longo, proprietor of a store on Railroad street, who was injured in an automobile accident at Brooklyn last Monday, is improved. Mr. Longo, however, is still in a serious condition.

Montee Usher, of South Willington, and John Johnson of this city, both graduates of Windham High School, class of 1925, are to enter Connecticut Agricultural College, Storrs at the opening of the fall term. Usher and Johnson were members of last year's undefeated Windham High School football eleven, the former being an all-around athlete, having participated in football, baseball, basketball and track.

At a meeting of Windham High school dramatic club held Thursday during the fourth period, the following officers were elected: President, Virginia Paine; vice president, Russell Beckwith; and secretary-treasurer, Marion Bass. J. S. Z. Hunt is faculty adviser of the club which has a membership of fifteen and plans to arrange debates with other schools during the year.

Among local people who attended the Eastern States' Exposition at Springfield, Thursday were twenty-one members of the vocational agriculture classes at Windham High School, with their instructor, R. L. Hahn.

Fire of undetermined origin caused damage totaling $1,000 early Thursday morning in the one and one-half story frame residence on Birch street owned by Mrs. Maria Santa Lucia. The interior of the house was badly gutted. The flames also broke through the roof. Camelo Santa Lucia, husband of the owner of the property, and a young son, were nearly trapped in the burning house, but fled to safety when awakened by a bell alarm from Box 17, which brought an immediate response from the several fire companies. Insurance is carried to the amount of $2,000 on the house and $1,000 on the furniture which was badly damaged or destroyed.

What will undoubtedly be the swan song of the local baseball season will be sung this coming Sunday afternoon at Recreation Park when the Mount Carmel A. C. nine, champions of the Providence News amateur league, will engage in combat the speedy traveling West Ends of this city.

Miss Alice Boucher and Mrs. George Lavigne were hostesses at a whist party held Wednesday evening at the former's home, for the benefit of Conseil St. Cecile, No. 113, l'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique. Eleven tables were in play. The prizes were awarded Mrs. C. A. Lamoureux, Mrs. Joseph Delude and Miss A. Rousseau. Cakes and coffee were served.

A delivery truck owned by the H. C. Murray Company and operated by Gilbert T. Blackburn, figured in a collision Thursday forenoon with a touring car owned and driven by John B. Eldridge, the Eastford mail carrier at the intersection of Main and Railroad streets. Blackburn started to drive his car to the rear and did not notice the Eastford machine coming out of Railroad street. The affair was reported to the police, arrangements being made for the settlement of the damage to Eldridge's machine.

Archibald W. Buchanan of Mansfield Center, agent for the state board of education, granted a large number of local young people employment certificates Thursday morning.

First Selectman Russell A. Andrews received notification Thursday from the office of the state commissioner of motor vehicles that the operator's license of Mario Chappell had been restored. The police receive da similar notice regarding the operator's license of Charles Deschenes, of 84 Chestnut street.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 24.—Albert Monroe Perkins, who died suddenly of heart disease at his home, 50 Meadow street, last evening, had been in ill health for the past two years. Besides his wife, he is survived by seven sons, Everett, Francis, Theodore, Clayton, Raymond and Robert, all of this city, and Frederick, of California, and by five daughters, Mrs. Arthur Hall of Swansea, Mass., and Misses Myrtle, Ethel, Dorothy and Ruth Perkins, of this city. He also leaves three grandchildren.

ST. JOSEPH'S SCOUT BAND WINS SPRINGFIELD HONORS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 24.—At the Springfield Exposition, in a competitive contest for the juvenile band championship of New England, St. Joseph's Boy Scout band of this city won first prize of one hundred dollars this afternoon. The judges made an immediate decision.

The local band will return to Springfield Saturday to give a concert.

JEWETT CITY

Beginning next Sunday morning the New York and New Haven railroad will put the following train schedule into operation. As touching Jewett City the times will be:

Trolleys north 6.22, 8.19, 10.19 a. m., 12.19, 2.14, 4.18, 6.19, 8.18 p. m.

Steam trains north, 5.33 and 9.03 p. m. and 3.28 p. m.

Trolleys south, 7.03, 9.03, 11.03 a. m., 1.03, 3.03 5.03, 7.03, 9.03 p. m.

Steam trains south, 11.33 a. m. and 2.29 and 8.21 p. m.

There will be the following exceptions for Sundays. The 6.22 a. m. north trolley and the 7.03 a. m. south trolley will not run Sunday. The 9.03 a. m. train north and the 2.29 p. m. train south, will not run Sunday.

The north bound boat-train Sunday morning will leave at 6.03. This half hour difference in the boat-train on Sunday morning, is made on account of connections with the paper train from New York.

South bound, the boat train will run the same daily at 8.21 p. m. Contrary to the usual winter custom the state of Maine express will be operated over this line, but will not stop here. It is due to pass through Jewett City at 11.11 p. m., north and at 3.27 a. m., south.

The Bar Harbor express, which has run this way all summer makes the last trip Saturday night.

Local passengers now bound for points in New Hampshire and Maine may go to Norwich on the boat train at 8.21 and there take the State of Maine, north at 10.59 p. m.

Miss Grace Morton of Plymouth, Mass., is visiting Mrs. Frank Wilcox.

The men's class of the Methodist church is to meet this (Friday) evening at 7.30 at the church.

The Baptist men's class is planning for an unusually large attendance at the Sunday school Rally Day at noon Sunday.

These Rally Day celebrations, never have failed of filling the lecture room of the church.

The fine organization of the men's class in this school, doubtless due largely to the inspiration of Deacon John E. Phillips, its teacher, calculate to make the other model classes go some, to excel in attendance.

Mrs. R. F. Cheney has been confined to her bed for several days by illness.

The severe frost and partial freeze of Tuesday night, hit this section in a sort of belt formation, some sections suffering more than others. Mercury readings were as low as 30, with evidence everywhere of the devastation that such a tumble in the temperature can cause to anything in the flower and garden line.

From a money standpoint, uncut fodder corn for ensilage storage in silos, takes the lead, with tomatoes second. Of course thousands of plants, mostly dahlias and asters were ruined.

The Pilgrim dahlia garden in Newent, owned by Rev. J. W. Reynolds, so wide and so handsome with many costly varieties and courtlesa blooms, escaped not the ravages of this unseasonable freeze. And now as has been the weather many custom for five successive seasons, this section will have another month of fine fall days, with cool nights, but with temperature never dangerously near the frost line.

Sunday morning the town will awaken to good old Standard Time again. The churches will begin the day with all services held on Standard Time. During the advanced time period, now coming to a close, those persons who have advanced their time pieces have experienced not the least inconvenience locally. There has been a little figuring necessary when visiting the sister town to the north, but it is nearly over now, and one leaving here for Central Village or Wauregan, won't arrive there before he starts. Clocks that strike the hour will have to be stopped 60 minutes, watches, with escape motion equipment are not damaged by turning them back to Standard Time.

The Riverside Grammar school baseball nine is claiming that it defeated Ritchie's All Stars two games, September 17th by a score of 7 to 6 and again on September 23rd 17 to 11.

It. G. S. is claiming that certain statements relative to the games have been somewhat misrepresented. The Riverside line up is: Shorey c and p, Lefty Liberty, also a catcher and pitcher, Edward M., 1st. Morey 2nd Walt S., 3rd, Slomski ss, Henry F. Sweet, T. Avery, Rainville, and Cormier, fielders.

Irvin W. Foote of Preston has sold to Charles Roy a house and 125 acres of land, known as the Harry Coles farm in Glasco.

Through Andrew McNicol, local sportsman, the ball club has received from Bernie Friberg, star second baseman of the Philadelphia Nationals, an official National League ball autographed by members of the Pittsburgh club, National League champions.

This ball is to be given away at the Ashland A. A.-Town Talk game at Ashland Park, Sunday.

A meeting of the Chamber of Commerce held Wednesday, proved an evening of social enjoyment, several members contributing to the general good pleasure. A meeting to be held next week will consider a possible improvement in street lighting and the trimming of foliage that may overhang too much.

The Ladies' Society of the Congregational church planned several activities at its meeting at the parsonage Thursday afternoon. Mrs. E. A. Faust the president presided. Mrs. C. D. Wolf, chairman of the committee which has charge of serving a turkey supper, when Faith Chapter, O. E. S. entertains the grand officers, October eight, gave her report. Mrs. Norman Parkhurst, Mrs. Abraham Zegeer, Mrs. E. A. Faust and Mrs. F. E. Robinson were appointed a committee to have charge of the burlesque horrible fashion social. The date of the annual Christmas fair was set. Mrs. Gray was assisted by Mrs. Abraham Zegeer, Mrs. L. G. Buckingham, Mrs. F. D. Ballou and Mrs. E. A. Faust.

Dr. G. H. Jennings has been attending the medical clinic, the first of the kind held under the auspices of the Connecticut Medical association, in New Haven, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McBroome are taking a trip today (Friday) to New Britain for a visit with their daughter, Mrs. Alice Flannery. Sunday the party will motor to Wallingford to call on G. A. Barber, a resident at the Masonic home.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Tracy and Mr. and Mrs. James Blair are off today (Friday) for Hartford by automobile. They will leave that city on the Shriners' special at 9 a. m. for the Shriners' annual ceremonial to be held Saturday at Atlantic City.

At the 1925 exhibition of garden products, needlework, handiwork and carpentry held at Mechanics hall, in Worcester, the entries in competition for the David Hale Fanning prizes were more numerous and better than ever before, according to Frank A. Andrews, in charge of the exhibit.

At least 15,000 persons passed in and out of the building to view the work of the Worcester elementary school pupils. The High school of commerce orchestra played throughout the afternoon.

The $500 prize money will be distributed among the several thousand entries and will go to the schools at which the winning pupils are enrolled. The prize money will be used by the principals of the schools for educational purposes.

This was the 12th annual exhibition. Seventy schools now participate.

Two silver cups are to be awarded to the school whose pupils receive the most points. One cup is for the most flower-exhibit points and the other for the most vegetable exhibit points. In no event shall both cups go to the same school. If the cups are won for three years in succession they will become the property of that school.

The annual town report of Griswold will show the following:

Report of the Superintendent of Schools to the Town School committee:

Sixty-eight Griswold pupils had perfect attendance for the past schoo: year. Some of these pupils have four or five years to their credit. The boys and girls will be awarded perfect attendance certificates this fall.

Pupils are judged late if they are not on the school playground when the second bell stops ringing.

Through a definite program the schools are being brought into first class shape. This year the Burton school has been put into condition. Texts and supplementary equipment are changed to keep abreast with accepted progress.

It has been necessary on account of the growth of the school population to open up two more rural schools and add one more room t the Riverside school.

The revised course of study is now used. Conferences and teachers' meetings have been held in conjunction with the State board of education to explain the workers of the new plan.

Teaching force: This has not changed during the past year. For the new year we have six new teachers. From now on it is advisable to hire only normal trained teachers or teachers who have had experience. All teachers now have to be certified. Teaching is now a recognized profession.

Salary schedule: This has been used successfully for three years. It has been the means of obtaining successful teachers and keeping them. This schedule should apply to rural school teachers who are properly qualified as well as to teachers in the Riverside school.

Parents day and special anniversaries have been observed in all schools.

A spelling contest was held in Riverside assembly hall.

Health work has been carried on by the regular teachers following the state plan. The teachers have always been ready and willing to take care of different ailments which children came to school with. All bruises, etc. have been carefully treated by the teachers. Notwithstanding this, we do need to be able to get a nurse when necessary. Many epidemics could be stopped before they got started if we could have regular inspection of our children.

The children have been furnished with play-balls, etc., to be used in organized play. These have been greatly appreciated. It would be advisable to supply each school with swings and slides.

Music and drawing have been successfully carried on by the different teachers. At least once a week all the pupils have been assembled for singing, patriotic exercises and instructive talks.

In the different branches of art we have the valuable assistance of Joseph Wiseltier, state supervisor of art education. He has met with the teachers and given them definite instruction for the carrying out of the monthly plans issued and supplied to each teacher.

Thrift report: The following report is made concerning the savings of our children during the school years: Total number of pupil depositors 94; total amount deposited $150.50. Enumeration, Sept. 1924, attending school 771, not attending school, 168, attending private schools 177, total, 1,116.

School calendar, 1925-1926. Fall term—15 weeks (69 days). School opens Sept. 8th. School closes Dec. 18th at 12:30. Recesses, Columbus day, teachers' convention, visiting day Oct. 26th, Thanksgiving, closes Nov. 25th at 12:30.

Winter term — 14 weeks (69 days) school opens Dec. 28th. School closes April 1st at 12:30. Recesses: January 1st, February 12th at 12:30, February 22nd.

Spring term—9 weeks (44 days) School opens April 12th. School closes June 11th. Recess: Decoration day Total number of days at 180. No school signals—No school a. m., two blasts fire whistle 8:00; no school p. m., two blasts fire whistle 12:15. One session will run through until 12:30. The average attendance shows quite an improvement over that of the previous year. F. H. Clement, superintendent, schools of Griswold.

CHAS. WHITMAN ARRESTED— ACCUSED OF TWO BREAKS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 24.—Charles Whitman, 34, was arrested Thursday afternoon about 2 o'clock while riding a bicycle in Hope Valley, toward Westerly. Whitman has been looked for by the sheriff since last fall to explain several breaks in Washington county.

In November, 1924, report was made to the sheriff that the place of Geordianna R. Wandling, in the town of Hopkinton, near Woodville, had been broken into and goods to the value of $9, it is charged, were taken, including a large oil lamp, small oil lamp, two bed quilts, one picture and a teapot.

The farm house of Judge Oliver H. Williams, near Woodville, last April was alleged to have been broken into and the following taken: Shotgun, double barrel, valued at $20; Winchester rifle, value $18; Smith & Wesson revolver, $12; two bamboo fishing rods, $25, the total value being $75.

Following the break at the Wandling home, Sheriff Mitchell after making investigations had reason to suspect Whitman and the next day went to Carolina, R. I., to a house occupied by Whitman and a brother-in-law but found no one in the house. Learning from neighbors that some one had left the house about an hour before his arrival, Sheriff Mitchell went to the Carolina railroad station where it was reported that a man answering Whitman's description had boarded a west-bound train. Chief of Police Thoas E. Brown, of Westerly, was notified by Sheriff Mitchell and met the train at the Westerly station but Whitman was not to be found. The sheriff went to Wood river junction and Bradford and learned that no one answering Whitman's description had been seen at those places. Since this time the sheriff has made a diligent search, which was rewarded today by the finding of Whitman.

He will be presented Friday morning at the regular session of the Third district court in Westerly, before Judge Michael J. Turano on two complaints, breaking and entering and larceny from the Wandling place; also from the farmhouse of Judge Oliver H. Williams, of Westerly.

HISTORY OF OLD DAYS WOVEN INTO CARPETS IN COMMONS

Even the strips of carpet which run along the floor of the imperial house of commons in England have a history and a reason, remarks The Dearborn Independent. These strips are located near the front benches and were placed there originally to prevent the danger of members fighting with each other. The carpets were introduced in the days when members wore their swords, and a rule was made that no member was to stray beyond the edge of the carpet on his side of the House when speaking.

The carpets were placed two sword lengths apart, so that an excited speaker could not reach the members opposite if he flourished his sword. The carpets are still placed the old distance apart.

"Burglars"

A man passing the Wilson home in George street, Providence, R. I., at night observed a dim light within. As no one was supposed to be home, he halted, and when two figures glided by the light, he called the police. A squad surrounded the house, entered it and climbed all over it, but there was no burglar. The mystery was dispelled by an inspector. He noted that a second floor room of the Hinckley home across the street bore a light and that children were moving about the room. He explained that the light was being reflected in a mirror in the Wilson home. The movements of the children, also shown in the mirror, were the "burglars."

Language of the Bees

That bees have a language by means of which they can communicate with one another about new found feeding grounds, the kind of flowers to visit and their general direction from the hive appears to be proved through experiments made by a German scientist, says Popular Mechanics. He found a swarm of bees would visit the place where sugar was exposed immediately after one of them had fed and returned to the hive to spread the news. This the bee does by a peculiar dance. By marking bees with colors and feeding some while leaving others unfed, the experimenter proved that only those which had been fed would start the dance that brought swarms to new feeding grounds.

Carbon is Great Joiner

Because of its remarkable power of uniting with itself as well as with other elements, carbon is enabled to build up single molecules containing large numbers of atoms, and such molecules form the basis of framing the structure of living organisms. Without these properties of the carbon atom life as it is known upon the earth would be impossible, it is said.

Make your cake with Snowdrift—grease the pans with Snowdrift—and make the icing with Snowdrift.

Make doughnuts with Snowdrift—and then fry the doughnuts in Snowdrift.

Every use for a shortening or frying-fat is an opportunity to find out how good Snowdrift is. And using Snowdrift in your own favorite recipes is the best way of all to find out how much better it is than any fat you ever used before.

The Wesson Oil people make Snowdrift out of oil as good as fine salad oil—hardened and whipped into a creamy white fat—and packed in an airtight can to keep it as sweet and fresh as the day it was made.

Try it in your favorite cake.

It is much easier to cream because it is already so creamy itself. It is so delicate that it makes your cake very rich without changing the flavor. It is 100% pure fat, without salt or water, so add a pinch of salt if you have been using butter in your recipe.

Try Snowdrift in your favorite biscuit recipe and see how good biscuit can be.

Try Snowdrift in pie-crust—rich, tender, flaky. Snowdrift may not make you a better cook, but the family are likely to think so.

Fry in Snowdrift and see how delicious and wholesome fried food can be. A crispy brown crust forms so quickly that the food does not absorb too much fat and, inside this thin crust, cooks to a tempting lightness and daintiness.

Snowdrift is very economical as a frying fat—especially in deep frying. Strain it, to remove any crumbs of food, and you can use it over and over again for frying different things.

This is true to some extent of any fat. But here is one advantage of Snowdrift. It will not absorb the odor or flavor of any food cooked in it—not even fish nor onions. You may use it over and over again.

And Snowdrift is not altered much by heating to cooking temperature. Much cooking fat has to be thrown out after you have used it a few times. But Snowdrift is altered so little by heating that you can use it up and not waste it. It is almost as good the last time you use it as the first.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

George Alvord of Dayville, a former selectman of the town of Killingly and now an independent candidate for reelection, says that he is receiving encouragement and getting the promise of many votes on election day. Mr Alvord was elected for successive terms on the democratic ticket as a selectman. He has gone back into the campaign this year as an independent, a fact that will add spice to the voting on election day—a week from next Monday.

Letters were being mailed on Thursday to school committees of towns which are represented in the student body of Killingly High school that the tuition this year will be $100 per student, instead of $90, the rate in force for a number of years. There are 69 non-resident students in Killingly High school, this being approximately as large as the total enrollment of the high school here 25 years ago. Of these non-resident students 52 are credited to the town of Brooklyn, 4 to the town of Canterbury, 3 to the town of Foster, R. I. 2 to Sterling and one each to Pomfret and Sprague.

The advance in tuition charges by the school committee of the town of Killingly is to more nearly compensate the town of Killingly for the actual expense it assumes in furnishing high school facilities for out of town students than it has heretofore been receiving.

It was stated Thursday that it actually costs the town of Killingly about $110 for each student enrolled at the high school each year. This being the case, the stand is taken that Killingly is entitled to advance its tuition charge to a figure more nearly the actual cost per student than was represented by the $90 rate.

In connection with this consideration of tuition charges for out of town students it may be mentioned that Killingly, in turn, receives the advantage of having more teachers at the high school than would be necessary without the non-resident pupils, and that these additional teachers are of great value to the entire student body.

Mrs. George L. Sweet of Attleboro, for many years a resident of Brooklyn died Thursday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William R. Pond in New Britain. The body is to be brought to Brooklyn for burial. Mrs. Sweet leaves two other daughters Mrs. James A. Danielson, of Danielson and Mrs. Frank J. Lamb of Attleboro.

Throngs of friends came to extend greetings to Deacon Albert C. Greene, Thursday, at his home on North Main street. The date was his 86th birthday. Deacon Greene was delighted. He was showered with gifts and good wishes and many times was the hope expressed that he may live many more happy and comfortable years. Letters and cards came in such numbers as to surprise Mr. Greene.

Danielson again is to be honored by the New Haven road. After the fall time tables become effective next Sunday, the State of Maine express is to be routed through Danielson, as the Bar Harbors have been all the past summer. That will be just lovely! Tired citizens who are without a cuckoo clock, or insomnia victims, will be entertained by nocturnes and obligatos played on the locomotive whistles of these speeding night trains. This will help dispel the loneliness of winter nights and make Danielson thank goodness that it is at least on a railroad line over which trains run from somewhere to somewhere else. Then too, maybe one will stop here occasionally and belated citizens may have the pleasure of a closeup view of the nice shiny stateroom cars. Why go to Florida with such a winter filled with promise for those who stay right here at home?

Infantile paralysis caused the death of Theodore Bernard Blanchette, age three, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Blanchette. The funeral was held from the Blanchette home with burial in Holy Cross cemetery, where the committal service was conducted by Rev. F. X. Richards, M. S. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Danielson, generally, will note with satisfaction that daylight saving time will end at midnight Saturday. Danielson, maintaining standard time without interruption, has been put to it many a time in the last few months to keep in touch with things in areas where the daylight saving plan was in effect. It has all been very much of a nuisance. Just imagine an arrangement where it is 9 p. m. in Danielson and 10 p. m. in Central Village, six miles away.

Game wardens operating in this territory are to be uniformed, it was stated Thursday. It is understood that these uniforms are to be of a whipcord material. The outfit will include a cap and puttees. The uniform and other articles that go with it will cost about $40.

A number of employes of the S. N. E. Telephone company from the Danielson and Putnam divisions were in Norwich Thursday evening to hear an address by Harry C. Knight, New Haven, vice president and general manager of the company.

Sheriff and Mrs. Charles E. Ayer will leave this (Friday) morning for a motor trip of a few days in New Hampshire and other sections of northern New England.

Along the railroad right of way no inconsiderable amount of hard coal that has rattled off trains has been accumulated by thrifty persons seeking to protect themselves against a fuel shortage the coming winter.

Another bus line of interest hereabouts comes into being this morning with the establishment of a line from Providence through Moosup to Norwich.

Lester Williams of Brooklyn will be at Springfield today (Friday) attending the Eastern States exposition.

Governor Trumbull is to be at Warrenville September 30, when that community has a celebration planned to note the first anniversar yof the dedication of the Knowlton Memorial town house.

Two wandering minstrels were ordered away from Danielson by Chief John McFarland. The men were making something more akin to noise than music.

Harry C. Belmont of Springfield was a visitor with friends in Danielson Thursday.

PUTNAM

People here are wondering at the number of applicants for permits to operate motor busses in the vicinity of Putnam as stated in Wednesday's Bulletin. Five new lines to be established, maybe, through this city in view of the fact that the trolley company and the New Haven R. R. company, on its short passenger hauls, has been complaining, and evidently with justice, that there has not been enough traffic to pay expenses.

The Farnum company has been operating a line of motor busses from Providence to Springfield, passing through Putnam, for several months. It gives good service and has been well patronized. A new service from Providence was started a few weeks ago but was abandoned after a short time. There was evidently enough business for one, but not enough for two.

Between Putnam and Norwich the New Haven road is running three trains each way daily, the trolley company maintains an hourly service, and the W. G. Haggerty company is running several busses daily each way. Yet the state utilities board will meet here next Wednesday to consider the following applications for permission to operate busses: H. J. Barnett, from the Massachusetts state line through Mechanicsville, Putnam, Danielson, Brooklyn, Central Village and Moosup; Interstate Busses Corp., from Rhode Island state line through Putnam, Woodstock and Quinebaug to Southbridge, Mass.; George J. Gary, from Putnam through Pomfret, Phoenixville, Ashford and Willington Hill to West Willington; George J. Gary, from Putnam through Pomfret, Rockville, Chaplin and to Willimantic; George J. Gary, from Woodstock through Putnam to the Rhode Island state line.

The Second Congregational church is to observe Sunday, Sept. 27, as Rally Sunday. The regular service will be held at 10:30 a. m. and at 12 o'clock noon the following program will be given:

Song, "Onward Christian Soldiers," school, with Wallace Smith as leader; salute to the flag; invocation by Rev. James F. English; son, "Saviour Like a Shepherd Lead Us," school; responsive reading with Doris Carver Bayer as leader; song, "God is Love," beginners' department; "The Story of the Fairy King," Mrs. E. M. Warner; song, "Praise the Lord Above," primary department; collection; song, "Call to Service," Mrs. W. J. Bartlett's class with Lois Ranson, reader; The Ten Commandments, junior department; song, Miss Mary Wheaton's class; scriptural readings, Hold-Fast class; song, "Abide with Me," Mrs. E. L. Robinson, "Teddy Roosevelt's Eight Reasons for Church Attendance," intermediate grade; song, "America the Beautiful," school; presentation of diplomas, Rev. J. F. English; song, "The Son of God Goes Forth to War," school; benediction by the pastor.

The people of Putnam will welcome a return to Standard time by cities and towns in this state as well as in Massachusetts and Rhode Island which have been on the daylight saving schedule. Putnam has adhered to Standard time for the past five years and the vast majority of its citizens seem to prefer it, although the hour's difference between nearby points is more or less an inconvenience. During the war it was accepted without question as a war measure and the summer following the Armistice it was adopted voluntarily, but since then there has been no indication that anyone here favored a daylight saving schedule. The trains will be running one hour later than at present. The State of Maine will be routed by the way of New London, stopping at Putnam both north and south. A few changes have been made in the train schedules, however, and a new time table is a wise safeguard for intending travelers.

There was frost, while ice formed again Wednesday night and there has been considerable damage to vegetables and small fruits. Wednesday is said to have been the coldest Sept. 23 in this part of Windham county of which there is any record.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Mellor, of Grove street, have been entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tunstall, of New Bedford, Mass. Mr. Tunstall is the inventor of the Tunstall Comber and has just returned from a nine months' trip abroad, where he has been demonstrating his invention to foreign concerns. He was for many years agent of the Wamsutta mills, New Bedford.

A. M. Bowen, the Eastford Philosopher and newspaper correspondent, has the following to add to his account of the hold-up of a week ago when he was robbed of about $100 on his way to his home after closing his store for the night:

"Our advice to all is to do business with checks same as your correspondent always intends. If you give the Devil a living chance he is sure to be, or to have some of his snipes on hand when you least expect them. If we ever carry any more cash shall have firearms. Times are changed. Everything must be nailed down nowadays or some one will steal or carry it away. Same is being done everywhere.

"Your correspondent isn't at all dismayed over hold-ups. We are generally prepared for them and get the first crack. This time thought same was boys fooling until too late to avoid being thrown as the ditch was deep and the road shelving and a tree shade. Only the light of Miss Gardner's window furnished my proof. We always did find out all and catch all persons who did us any injury and certainly the last will be caught same as we caught the hen thieves, post office burglars, who got one year and six months in federal prison, the cow thieves and numerous not mentioned. Some tried in years gone by. We expect court soon as the fairs are over. We will show you better than tell you now."

The public utilities commission has assigned applications by five individuals or companies, regarding nine routes in the vicinity of Putnam, for hearing at the municipal building, Putnam, at 10:30 a. m., Wednesday, Sept. 30. The applications are: H. J. Barnett, from the Massachusetts state line through Mechanicsville, Putnam, Danielson, Brooklyn, Central Village and Moosup; Interstate Bus corporation, from Rhode Island state line through Putnam, Woodstock and Quinebaug to Southbridge, Mass.; George J. Gary from Putnam through Pomfret, Phoenixville, Ashford and Willington Hill to West Willington; George J. Gary, from Putnam, through Pomfret, Rockville, Chaplin and to Willimantic; George J. Gary, from Woodstock, through Putnam to the Rhode Island state line.

Mrs. Lillie C. Phillips, who has been spending the summer at Amesbury, Mass., has returned to her home in this city.

Howard C. Bradford, newly appointed state's attorney, has been in Manchester, N. H., on legal business.

Mrs. Frederick Prince has returned from a visit with relatives in Milford, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto E. Wulf have returned from a trip by automobile through the White Mountains, going by way of Franconia Notch to Bethlehem, N. H., and returning by way of Crawford Notch, Portsmouth, N. H., and home through the summer places on the North Shore.

Mrs. Omar Milot has returned from a visit of two weeks with her brothers at Malden, Boston and Nantasket Beach, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Sanderson motored to Springfield Thursday to attend the Eastern States Exposition.

Miss Mary Ryan, local manager of the Pasmik store, is having a vacation this week.

J. Richard Carpenter has returned from a business trip to Norwich.

Martin A. Nelson, of South Woodstock, has been appointed administrator of the estate of Raymond J. Fowler, late of Woodstock.

SHENANDOAH FLAG SYSTEM ADOPTED FOR THE CITY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Sept. 24.—To the Chamber of Commerce directors, this week, Otto E. Wulf has presented additional data regarding the proposed system of flag decoration in the sidewalks. The cost will be extremely moderate, it will mean an attractively dressed city for parades or patriotic celebrations of any kind with but a few minutes' work. The height of the average staff is 12 feet and some of the directors who have passed through cities which have adopted the system on the day that it was in use said that it made a fine appearance.

The staff sets in a one and one-half inch pipe sunk at the edge of the pavement. It has a threaded top and a metal cap to cover it when not in use so that there is no danger of water seeping in and a freeze impairing the sidewalk.

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce gave the plan unqualified indorsement and the merchants' committee will try to have it installed here before the Armistice day celebration. For flag, staff, socket, etc. the cost will be under $5. Four thousand towns and cities are using this method of decoration.

GOOD RACING A FEATURE. CLOSING DAY, BROOKLYN FAIR

(Special to the Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Sept. 24—Another good day favored the Brooklyn fair management on Thursday, the closing day of this year's exhibition. Attendance dwindled tremendously from the crowds that entered the grounds on Wednesday, but this is the unvarying rule. There are those who prefer to attend the fair on the closing day and avaid the difficulties of getting about when the grounds are congested with humanity and they were out in force on Thursday. Many who attended the fair on Wednesday came back for the closing day.

The fair has been a complete success this year from every viewpoint. It has been acclaimed as the best fair in a number of years. It was very satisfying to the patrons and the net returns equally so to the fair association.

This year's increased display in the cattle department points the way to even greater things. It has indicated the possibility of having a remarkably fine cattle show at the Brooklyn fair. This has not been overlooked by those entrusted with making the cattle show a success and next year likely will find great strides being made to build up this end of the fair. The possibilities are unlimited, for there are plenty of fine herds in Windham county.

What horsemen called the best racing seen on the fair grounds at Brooklyn in many a year, featur the closing day of the fair Thursday. In both the free for all and the 2:25 trot or pace there were thrilling heats that gave the attendants a splendid afternoon of sport. Both races went to five heats, in the free-for-all, Silver Thread owned by Joseph Gendron of Dudley, Mass., fought it out to final victory with Camerton, owned by George E. Gates of Norwich, the other starters being ruled out after the fourth heat. A similar contest developed in the 2:25 event, Fairworthy, owned by Baldwin and Whitman of Putnam, finally winning from Peter Jewett, owned by Henry Potter of Providence. In this race also all other starters were ruled out after the fourth heat. J. Carl Witter of Danielson, acted as starting judge, the other judges being Edward J. McBride of Danielson, Dr. Al King of Hyde Park, Mass., Dr. F. W. Page of Putnam, Henry S. King of Moosup and N. A. Witter of Danielson. The summaries:

DISAGREEING WITH LANSDOWNE

It was inevitable that the record of department correspondence should be introduced in connection with the investigation now underway concerning the loss of the Shenandoah. In that connection much is being made of the fact that Commander Lansdowne did not want to start the flight when he did, that he had asked to have it postponed a week and that such a suggestion did not meet with approval.

As the result of such a disclosure the inference is that Commander Lansdowne didn't believe the conditions were right for the flight at the time it was made and that he sought delay to insure greater safety in the flight over that section of the country where he was born and about which he was well posted as to what might be expected from the storms.

But the commander's effort to have the flight delayed may be considered in connection with the whole plan for the flight and the specific reason why he wanted a week's delay. When he urged postponement in July because of the summer storms his advice was accepted and the delay was granted. When he sought to have the September flight put off for a week it was not because of the possible storms, not because he anticipated bad conditions, not because the ship wasn't ready, not because he desired to avoid a storm expected at that time but because he didn't believe Scott landing field would be ready to receive the ship when it arrived.

It is true that had the flight been delayed a week the disastrous storm would have been missed and it might have been that the Shenandoah would be flying today with no thought of a disaster. But Commander Lansdowne's effort to get the delay was based upon nothing of the kind. The department heads heeded his suggestion when he believed flight would have been hazardous, but he offered no such warning in connection with the September flight. It is impossible to fasten the responsibility for the disaster upon the ordering of the flight when the difference of opinion simply concerned the condition of a flying field in the middle west.

A FINE DEMONSTRATION

Since it was established the veteran's bureau has had its ups and downs. It has been necessary for it to deal with a problem which had never been tackled before. It was new, it was big and it was complicated. Several directors wrestled with it without accomplishing what was desired. It was found possible to spend huge sums of money, as much as the government would provide, but it didn't follow that there was something to show for it in keeping with what had been spent or in accord with what was sought. Then like a big, cumbersome overloaded bureau it didn't function efficiently. Soon efficiently as was desired.

Under such conditions General F. W. Hines was made director of the bureau and it was not long before he was reorganizing it in a manner which it had long needed. He was keenly alert to the welfare of the disabled veterans and solicitous that they get every advantage possible. But he saw where it was possible to cut out the great waste and to put the funds to the use for which they were actually intended. He has made sweeping and beneficial changes. He has discontinued and consolidated hospitals and training schools, cut salaries, replaced waste with economy and by getting the bureau functioning as it should put an end to the complaints that were too often heard. All this was done without skimping the disabled and sick, but really catering more nearly to their requirements and giving them the relief and benefits intended for them.

For this bureau the last appropriation by congress was $450,000,000. It has been put to excellent use, but it hasn't been squandered. In addition to meeting the needs General Hines has been able to turn back to the treasury department the tidy sum of $70,000,000. That means that instead of throwing away this sum without any increased benefit for the disabled veterans the new director has saved it. He has been serving the veterans but he has also been serving the country. That is one effective demonstration of the way in which the great volume of government waste can be cut down.

PROTECT THE PRICELESS

Washington has for a long time set forth the importance of having fire proof structures provided for the housing of the valuable records. There are fireproof buildings already where important papers are kept but there is a vast quantity which has virtually no protection. Should a fire of any size develop in such buildings it would cause no end of trouble. Clearly it is a case of preventing any fire, but there is even a greater service that can be rendered by actually safeguarding the nation's records by fire proof buildings.

It is quite natural that this need should be pointed out at this time following the recent proclamation by the president fixing the week of October 4 as Fire Prevention week, for even though it is not a new proposition it is one that will get attention only through a persistent advocacy.

New impetus has been given to the idea by the recent removal of valuable historical documents from the office building of the house of representatives to the Congressional library as a means of protecting them against the possibility of fire. This step was taken even though the house office building is itself fireproof but it is not constructed for safeguarding valuable documents and while the building might not burn it would be possible for serious harm to happen to documents temporarily stored there.

But while there has been recognition of such a possibility in connection with a fireproof government building such has not been extended to other buildings where records are always kept and where neither the building nor the contents are immune to fire. It is not to be expected that there is going to be an immediate sacrifice of costly government structures. The importance of giving due weight to the advisability of preventing fire cannot be disregarded. As new buildings are authorized and constructed they should be made fireproof and until that time comes attention may well be centered upon seeing that the documents and records which are priceless are provided with a safe storage place. The same applies, of course, to state and municipalities.

A TEST IN WEST VIRGINIA

While John Hays Hammond as the chairman of the New England governors' fuel committee, is taking steps to interest the producers of bituminous coal in catering to fuel requirements of this part of the country and setting forth that the patience of the New Englanders has been strained to the breaking point, a move is being made by the union miners to stop production in the soft coal mines in the northern part of West Virginia.

This is a coal region where many strike battles have been waged. Part of the miners are unionized and part are not. Coal loadings indicate that the mines are non union about eight to one and it remains to be seen what the effect is going to be of the strike which has been called for today.

The demand for substitutes by this part of the country, and elsewhere, the lowering of the freight rates on bituminous coal and the many mines which are beyond the control of the union forces present a situation which causes more than casual interest to be centered in the outcome of the new move that is being made in West Virginia.

It is going to be possible to discern in this latest move a test of the plans of the union forces, and at the same time a test of such strategy as the non union producers can use in keeping their mines in operation to meet the increasing demand for their product. It is not improbable that the result in West Virginia will indicate the outcome of the contest in the hard coal region which has been underway nearly four weeks.

A PHILIPPINE DECISION

Once more the struggle of those who are fighting for the independence of the Philippines is brought to attention by a decision of the supreme court of the islands. The question involved is whether the auditor has the final say in regard to expenditures by the Philippines legislature, subject of course to appeal to congress and the president.

When the Jones act was adopted it was deemed necessary to name an auditor who would act as a curb upon unwarranted expenditures by the legislature of the islands. Such an official is appointed by the president and he has put his foot down against the appropriation of funds for work in behalf of independence and he has also stood in the way of expenditures which he is interested as justified. It has not been the disposition of the Filipinos to accept this action and they appeal to their supreme court for a decision. That court has just handed down a decision which holds that final authority does not rest with the auditor.

If that is so then the auditor becomes nothing but a figurehead. He cannot do what was intended and the present incumbent realizing this fact gives assurances that if that decision is sustained he will immediately resign.

Final decision in this matter will rest with the United States supreme court. If that appeal will be taken and the court of last resort will have a chance to wrestle with this matter. The conditions which General Wood disclosed there and the steps he took to prevent the Philippines from going into bankruptcy indicate the necessity of the restraint which the auditor was supposed to give.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It cannot be imagined for a minute that the embargo on everything but foodstuffs for Florida has any effect upon wet goods.

Considering the many things which it is planned to have congress investigate, it has slight prospect of doing anything else.

It is not difficult to get the impression these days that the weatherman is giving comfort to the coal strikers and speculators.

While we are being told that the petroleum industry is facing a crisis, we don't hear of anyone starting a subscription for its relief.

The man on the corner says: However much it might please there's no dependence to be placed on every cold weather having a warm aftermath.

A double hanging in Europe was postponed because the hangman had caught a cold. Will it be postponed next time if the men sentenced have a sore throat?

There doesn't seem to be anything wrong with the policy at Connecticut Agricultural college that when it comes to drawing a line between autos and studies the autos must go.

When Italy keeps a communist from attending the conference of the interparliamentary union at Washington it "apparently believes in putting only its best foot forward."

FLAPPERS.

"In regard to flappers," began the girl who likes to talk, "there is this good thing to be said: They don't gush!

"Flappers may have plenty of sentiment but there is not an ounce of sentimentality among them all, and lady gushers are nothing else but. They are mostly hangovers from the crop of 1920 and are fast disappearing because the world won't listen to 'em very much. But sometimes they stalk you down in your own home. Then it's awful.

"I was at my cousin's the other day. Camella is a bride and lives in a two-room kitchenette fixed up quite pretty and trim, and when the bell rang she let the caller in.

"'My de-ar!' gasped this Mrs. Dikkens before she was entirely through the door, 'what a darling apartment you have! Isn't it perfectly lovely! How sweet everything is! You don't know how glad I am to meet Bob's wife at last! Bob and my younger brother were just inseparable when they were in school and Bob was at our house as much as at his own, so I know him thoroughly. Oh, I entirely agree with you that he is the dearest thing. I know you must adore him and, of course, it goes without saying that he adores you! I don't wonder a bit that he wanted to marry you—I can plainly see that the sparkle in your eye and your delicious hair would weave a net from which there was no escape if a man had eyes in his head!

"'And what charming taste you have, my de-ah! This little room is have, my dear! This is more touching than the little nests where honeymoon couples set up housekeeping, is there? His chair over there and yours here right under the light from this beautiful lamp! I suppose you put out his slippers for him and after dinner you sit and sew and Bob reads aloud to you! My dear, all your life you will remember these evenings and the poems he read to you and his voice.

"'What books are you reading—dear me, isn't Galsworthy's White Monkey kind of cynical and bitter for young people as wildly happy as I know you two must be? There is so much lovely poetry being published nowadays—I shall send you one or two of the newest volumes and I know you will simply love them! I think it is so important to keep the mind calm and soothed and the spirit full of cheer and—and all that you know.

"'If we are determined to see the good in everything we just will, and that is all there is to—my dear child! What an exquisite frock you have on! All that handwork! I suppose that with every stitch you put into the embroidery you were stitching in your dreams of Bob, weren't you! He is such a dear—oh, you bought it all made at a shop? Yes, of course, that is easier, but then—and oh, I must see your darling little kitchen!

Isn't it a nice window, too, letting the sunlight shine upon you as you go singing about your work!

He is such a dear! You will adore him more and more as the days go on! What a cunning hall and what a darling bathr oom! Now I must run along because I suppose Bob will be coming home soon and I wouldn't spoil your meeting for anything! Good-by, you sweet little bride!'

"Whatchu doing?" I called to Camella after a few minutes of absolute silence on our part.

"'Me?' called back Camella clinking glasses and teaspoons. 'Ever hear of boneset tea? It's the bitterest herb that ever grew and the ancients considered it good, for every ill on earth! Gramma put a package of boneset in my medicine cabinet and I'm making a large boneset-tea cocktail! I've just got to have something! It's going to be too lovely!'" —Chicago News.

From Small Beginnings

Anthony Trollope, the Great English Novelist

In Cincinnati in 1829 an English woman tried to make a living for herself and her no'er-do-well husband by keeping a small store in which she sold the attractive things that women like to buy. She found herself unable to make money as fast as her husband could spend it, nor was she pleased with the ways of the women who patronized her. So she wrote a book in which she told very plainly what she thought of American women. From that keen-observing book-writing mother, Anthony Trollope inherited his ability as a writer. From his father he inherited poverty, the ability to get into debt and a love of pleasure.

As a boy, Anthony Trollope had to wear poor clothes and to know what it means to need money. He felt these privations so keenly that he learned little at school and was glad to become a poorly-paid post-office clerk in Ireland. At 29 he married and then needed more money than he had ever before. He, too, began writing books. He was 32 when he saw his first novel published—and his was the fate of many novelists: of seeing his first novel a failure. Nevertheless, he kept on and wrote other books, and they, too, were failures. So he kept his post office position and managed to find work that gave him the pleasure of riding horseback as part of his duties. He wrote book after book, most industriously and finally won recognition. When he was 43 he had the joy of gaining about $1,200 from a novel.

No author ever wrote more diligently than did Anthony Trollope. He wrote so many books that they form a library in themselves. He tried many kinds of writing, registered many failures and also scored great successes. For many years he earned an average of about $18,000 a year from his books. He made long journeys to Egypt, to South Africa, to the United States and to Australia, but on the whole he lived a most methodical, hard-working life. He even kept a position in the post-office until he was 52.

Trollope's life illustrates remarkably well the success that can come from persistence and hard work. By sheer perseverance he made himself one of the most notable of English novelists.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Mrs. Gertrude Franklin Atherton, whom France has honored with the order of the Legion of honor in recognition of her literary merits as well as her services during the World war, has long held high place among American novelists and magazine writers. Her home is in California, but of late years she has spent much of her time abroad. She has written not only fiction but An Intimate History of California. In 1898 she wrote American Wives and English Husbands, a work which attracted not a little attention and discussion at the time. Her field of work is broad, embracing widely separated activities. During the war she rendered notable service in aid of the soldiers in camp and at the front. Mrs. Atherton is a great-grandniece of Benjamin Franklin. She was born in San Francisco and educated in schools in California and Kentucky.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

THE KOMANDORSKIES

The Komandorskie Islands, near the coast of Kamchatka, where a British airplane crashed in an attempted round-the-world-flight, "seem fated to be an Island Nemesis for explorers whether by air or water," remarks a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society. If was on the largest of these islands, the bulletin recalls, that Vitus Bering, who discovered Alaska for Russia, was shipwrecked and died while on his way back to Siberia with his important tidings.

"The islands are unquestionably a part of Siberia politically," says a bulletin, "but they are physically the very tip of the Aleutian chain of Alaskan islands. The Aleutians sweep across the Pacific in a huge crescent for some 1,200 miles, fencing in Bering sea. As far as nomenclature goes they end with Attu, westernmost of the American islands. But 200 miles farther on the Komandorskie group continues the curve perfectly, completing the island bridge between the western and the eastern hemispheres.

"Geology, too, proves the kinship of the Asiatic and American islands. Both are of volcanic origin and approximately the same age, thrust up by the underground fires that still smoulder around Mt. Katmai and the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes on the Alaskan peninsula, at one end of the crescent, and in the numerous active craters of Kamchatka at the other.

"Though the Komandorskie islands are barely 100 miles off Kamchatka and straight westward from the mouth of the Kamchatka river from which the early Russian voyages started, they were not discovered apparently during the 12 years from 1728 to 1741 when Bering and his fellow navigators were cruising along the Asiatic coast and looking eastward for land. After Bering, in his Kamchatkan-built ship, had found Alaska near Mt. St. Elias in 1741 and had worked his way back along the Aleutian chain, he sighted what is now Bering island, largest of the Komandorskies, but thought it was the Kamchatkan mainland.

"Practically every one of Bering's company of 50 or more was near death with scurvy. The ship could no longer be operated and was anchored, and the men moved ashore. Later a storm wrecked the vessel and in the following weeks Bering and many of his men died. After wintering on the land which they found to be an island, the survivors built a 36 foot boat from the ship's wreckage and reached Kamchatka. Before leaving, the survivors christened the island Komandorskie or Commander islands, in honor of Commander Bering, and named the largest island Bering. The famous explorer's grave is still to be seen on the island which bears his name.

"The fog which put an end to Major MacLaren's flight shrouded the Komandorskies in Bering's day. The log of the survivors states that there was scarcely a day of good weather during the ten months they were on Bering island. In the winter there were snow storms or winds so strong that a man could not stand in them. When summer came the land was usually covered by fogs.

"The islands were not inhabited when Bering discovered them. A high lava ridge runs through Bering island which is some 50 miles long. No trees grow save a few stunted willows. Driftwood reaches the island, however, both from Asia and America.

"The waters about the Komandor skies became an important whaling region in the early 19th century, and at times as many as 400 whalers, largely New Englanders, were in the neighborhood. Huge 'sea cows,' 28 to 30 feet long, frequented the islands, browsing on the underwater forests of algae off the coasts. These huge creatures have been exterminated, as have most of the other sea mammals that visited the islands in early days.

"Though the Komandorskies are almost the most remote bit of Russian territory from Moscow, they are apparently firmly in the hands of the soviet republic. The American round-the-world flyers came near finding the islands an end of their voyage last spring when they were blown out of their course from the last Aleutian to the northernmost Kurile, and had to make a precarious landing for a few hours on the west in the lee of the Komandorskies. Officials from the little settlement, on Bering island rowed out to the anchored planes and demanded to know why the territory of the soviet republic was being violated."

At any moment, as shown by statistics, there are on an average about 1800 thunderstorms in progress in the world, giving 380,000 lightning flashes an hour, or 100 a second.

Stories That Recall Others

She Has a Preference

Virginia having edged into her sixth year, has begun her quest for learning. After her first week her mother asked:

"Well, Ginger, how do you like going to school?"

The little miss paused in thought, then replied: "Tell you what it is, mother, I don't care much for some things about school like lessons — but, oh, I just love recess!"

Memory's Such a Fleeting Thing

He is a bachelor but when out with a company of friends recently met a girl who excited his interest. He had told her he was going to give her a ring — that is, telephone her—a few evenings later. But when that evening came and he started for the telephone, lo, he had forgotten her name!

His first thought was to run through the telephone book, but that brought no luck. Then he went down and bowled a few games, but that didn't have the desired effect on memory. He smoked a couple of cigars, but without discovering her name. Memory was certainly not handing out a thing.

"Oh, well," he mused at last, "I might as well go to bed." He donned his pajamas, got nicely tucked away in the pillows and was just dozing off when—presto! her name came like a sign in front of a theatre.

"Some other night!" he said to himself and another lonely girl was left sitting on the porch, waiting for the stars to come out. Memory can be as unpliable sometimes as a five minute egg.

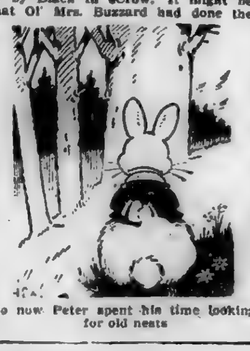
BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Peter Tries All the Old Nests

Nothing's ever lost by trying;
Nothing's ever gained by sighing.
—Old Mother Nature.

Though Peter Rabbit teased and teased he could get no more information from Ol' Mistah Buzzard. He had to be satisfied with the knowledge that Ol' Mrs. Buzzard didn't have a nest over on the Great Mountain. So once more Peter devoted his time to looking up in the trees of the Green Forest. An idea had come to him, so now instead of looking for a new nest, he went about looking for old nests. You see, he remembered that Hooty the Owl and Mrs. Hooty didn't take the trouble to build a nest for themselves, but simply fixed up an old nest—one built by Redtail the Hawk or by Black the Crow. It might be that Ol' Mrs. Buzzard had done the same thing. So now Peter spent his time looking for old nests.



So now Peter spent his time looking for old nests

He found a number of them. The trouble was that when he found one he couldn't tell whether or not it was occupied. How he did wish he could climb like Happy Jack Squirrel or Chatterer the Red Squirrel. But he couldn't. He would go all around the tree in which that old nest was and look up at it until his neck ached. He hoped he might see the end of Ol' Mrs. Buzzard's tail over the edge of the nest. But he never did. Then he would walk around in the hope that somebody would come of whom he could ask questions. Usually if he waited long enough some one of the feathered folk would happen along and Peter would be able to find out that that old nest was not being used on it was surprising how many old nests there were. Peter wasted a lot of time, and in the end he was no wiser than before as to where Ol' Mrs. Buzzard and her two eggs really were. At first Peter hadn't wanted others to know what he was looking for, but at last he didn't care who knew it. So he began to ask everyone he met if they had seen the nest of Ol' Mrs. Buzzard. Of course this started a lot of other people looking for that nest, for curiosity is not confined to Peter Rabbit. That nest became the greatest mystery of the Green Forest, for no one had the slightest idea where it was, and not having the slightest idea they didn't know where to look. Probably the trees of the Green Forest never had been looked through more carefully. No big nest and few little ones escaped the sharp eyes looking for the Buzzard home. But when the little people got together to talk things over none had found the secret of Ol' Mistah and Mrs. Buzzard. It made some of them very provoked. You see, they never had looked on Ol' Mistah Buzzard as being particularly smart, and of course they regarded Mrs. Buzzard in the same way. So it was most provoking to find that these people whom they hadn't considered very smart could keep a secret so well that no one could find it out. Some of them declared that they didn't believe that Mrs. Buzzard had a nest at all. They didn't believe that there were any Buzzard eggs. But Peter believed it. There had been something about Ol' Mistah Buzzard when he had said that Mrs. Buzzard was sitting on two eggs which made Peter sure that he had been telling the truth.

In all the Green Forest there were just two people who were not puzzled. These two people lived in a certain hollow tree not very far from Ol' Mistah Buzzard's favorite tree. They too, had come from the Sunny South. Can you guess who they were? They were Uncle Billy Possum and Ol' Mrs. Possum.

CHILD TRAINING

THE INFLUENCE OF EXAMPLE

Pauline Herr Thomas

Just over the way I have a neighbor of age. The boy's father is a salaried man and his family well-to-do. The mother has an orderly, tidy house, does all her own work and always looks, and is, well dressed. Her duties comprise the care of her four-room apartment and her family.

The boy, Tom, is a very lovable little fellow. He comes to my door to collect papers which he sells by way of earning spending money, going to the movies being one of his favorite pastimes. He seems to have good taste about his movies. I met him yesterday on his way to see "Penrod and Sam." I commend this little money-making scheme of his and love every paper. He gives evidence of home-training of the highest order; he always removes his cap and when he shoves as he comes in and thanks me respectfully as he leaves. I am always impressed also by his manly bearing.

There is just one thing, however, and the child himself is really not to blame, which distresses me whenever I look at him. Either Tom's stockings woefully need darning there is a rent in his coat, his shoe is minus a lace, or some other evidence of the lack of personal neatness is painfully evident.

Now, if we were to search for the cause of this unseemly condition, we should, undoubtedly find it in Mother's laxity in keeping the family workbasket in use. Although Tom may be quite able to replace the shoe lace or avoid the rent, it may be may even have been disciplined for such unsightliness without effect, we grew that she whole trouble lies in lack of example where mother's needles is concerned, the mending, or lack of mending, affected only the skirts of the family, it would be a matter of less concern but since the influence which it is having upon the ur-wise son is cause for deep regret. We may hope that he will outgrow that stage; he is such a manly little fellow one feels sure he will, but why foster a trait that must be outgrown?

My friend, is he the mothers who say—and how often we hear it—"I don't mind doing mending, darning seems to such an aimless task." Let once a mother think of her little "Tom" or "Mary" who perhaps will not realize outgrow such an influence.

I admit the darning a sock or putting a patch is in itself a rather uninteresting task, but, brightened with thoughts of the effect it may have upon the character of the boy or girl who wears the garment, it becomes a task glorified. May we all be, potentially, poets enough to beautify our homeliest labors thus: it will add both joy and worth to our motherhood.

Don't bet on what you feel in your bones—unless it's rheumatism.

FRIENDLINESS

No friendly hand held out to me shall ever go unshaken;
No human's kind "Good morning" go unanswered while I live;
No kindly impulse sent my way shall ever fail to waken
A kindlier within me—a desire my best to give.
For every friendly hand held out is God Himself come down
To touch me with His tenderness; and every friendly word
The voice of God in greeting. So I lose my worried frown.
To show His touch has reached me; and His kindly voice is heard.
Yes, only through our fellows may the good God speak to us,
And they who sneer and stand aloof shall miss the best of life.
Wherefore with friendly hand held out and ear attentive thus
I gather all the tenderness that in the world is rife.
Come, friendly hands, reach out to me—you shall not go unshaken!
Come, gentle-voiced "Good morning"—I shall answer while I live!
Each kindly human impulse must inevitably waken
In me a still more kindly; a desire my best to give.
—Strickland Gillilan, in Rotarian.

FROM GIRLHOOD TO MOTHERHOOD

Through all these periods of their existence thousands of women toil on, often suffering with backache, pains in side, headaches and nervousness, all telltale symptoms of some local derangement. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the fine great remedy that will overcome such ailments. All over America women are telling other women how this wonderful medicine has restored them to health and the joy of living. This accounts for the tremendous demand for this popular medicine for women.

SPECIAL COAL COMMISSION ON CONNECTICUT CONDITIONS

A special coal commission of fifteen members to function during the present anthracite coal strike and relieve efforts and energies will be directed towards bringing relief to the state should its coal situation become serious was appointed Thursday by President Ernest E Rogers of the Connecticut chamber of commerce. Notification of their appointment was sent out each member of the commission by President Rogers today.

The commission consists of James E. Skinner of Bridgeport, John O. Halliday, New Haven, superintendent of transportation of the New Haven railroad; Theodore Bodenwein, publisher of the New London Day; R. F. Booker, secretary of the Seymour Manufacturing company, Seymour; James L. Lindsley, purchasing agent of the Eastern Malleable Iron company, Naugatuck; J. Alexander Hamilton, president of W. S. Gilbert company, New Haven; Major Frank H. Johnston, president of the City Coal and Wood company of New Britain; Samuel Ferguson, president of the Hartford Electric Light company; George M. Wood, general freight agent of the New Haven railroad; Louis A. Dibble, vice president of the Rising Manufacturing company, Naugatuck; Frank H. Lee company, Danbury; George H. Brinke, treasurer of the New England Pin company, Winsted, and Thomas W. Russell of West Hartford.

State Treasurer Rogers, president of the State Chamber of Commerce and George B. Chandler, executive vice-president, will serve as ex-officio members of the commission. The commission will meet shortly to elect a chairman and formulate plans for operation.

WANT ANOTHER FEDERAL JUDGE IN CONNECTICUT

Action on the proposed petition to congress for an additional federal judge for the district of Connecticut will be taken by the Hartford County bar at a meeting to be held Friday morning, Oct. 2 called at the request of Lucius F. Robinson, vice-president of the Connecticut Bar association. The New Haven county association has adopted a resolution calling for a second judge, and a petition is now being circulated among lawyers of the state and already has a large number of signatures in favor of two judges for the state.

The plan is to have one federal judge at New Haven while the other sits at Hartford, and by so dividing the great amount of work that comes before the court as to overcome the present congestion due to the increase in the number of criminal cases.

The spontaneous movement of the lawyers of the state in circulating this petition followed announcement that the five circuit judges for the federal court of this district recommend to the coming session of congress that the present law be amended to allow the appointment of a second judge. Its action implies no Mr. Robinson said, as his work has been above reproach, and the amount he is called upon to do is more than should be asked of one judge. Mr. Robinson said that the increase in criminal work alone has embarrassed the federal court and the civil work is so much behind that it is almost impossible to get a case advanced. Joseph F. Berry, clerk of the Hartford County Bar association, pointed out that under existing circumstances the only time another judge can sit here is during an interchange of judges and then Judge Thomas is so busy with the cases of the second district in Vermont or New York.

The circuit judges to make the recommendation to congress will be Henry Wade Rogers of New Haven and New York, and Charles M Hough, Martin T. Manton, Julius Mayer and Learned Hand of New York.

PICKED UP PASSENGER WHO PROVED INSANE

Herbert Campbell, who is employed by automobile dealers in this city, was returning from Providence Thursday afternoon when he picked up a man on the Clayville road who turned out to be an escaped inmate from the Howard Insane asylum near Providence. The man stood in the road and hailed Mr. Campbell as he came along in his machine.

After the Norwich man had taken the stranger in, he got to talking with him and soon had the suspicion that there was something queer about him. Finally after persistent questioning on the part of Mr. Campbell, the stranger admitted that his name was Jones and that he had just escaped from the Rhode Island institution, having been sawing away at the bars of his window for several days.

Upon reaching Plainfield, Mr. Campbell called up the Norwich police and also talked by telephone with the asylum at Howard. The officials there readily recognized the description of the man and asked that he be held for them. Mr. Campbell turned Jones over to the Plainfield authorities, who were holding him overnight in the lockup at Central Village for the call of officers from Rhode Island.

Mr. Campbell said Thursday night that he was through giving rides to people that hail him on the road.

JUDGE RESERVES DECISION IN SUIT OVER GRAVEL

Judge Allyn L. Brown in the civil superior court at New London, Thursday morning upon the conclusion of the trial of the $8,500 damage suit brought by Alpheus N. Williams of Mystic against Frank Arrigoni and others of Middletown, took the papers reserving his decision. The suit was brought to recover on gravel alleged by the plaintiff to have been taken from premises owned by him in the town of Groton.

Thursday afternoon Judge Brown was engaged in hearing the action brought by the Progressive Finance and Realty Co., Inc., against Liebmann and others of Norwich. The action arises in a series of mechanics' liens.

WEDDING

Murphy--Malone

The marriage was solemnized at St. Mary's Memorial church, Greeneville, Thursday morning, at 7.30 o'clock by Rev. Charles W. Brennan, pastor of the Sacred Heart church, Norwich Town of Miss Elizabeth A. Malone, of Greeneville, and William A. Murphy of Norwich Town. Relatives and friends attended. Following the ceremony a nuptial high mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Brennan.

Mr. Thomas Healy was at the organ. At the offertory Miss Sadie A. Driscoll sang Ave Maria, by Chase. Mrs. Morgan Cronin and Miss Mary Buckley sang solos during the mass.

Miss Hanna M. Malone, sister of the bride was bridesmaid. John F. Murphy of Hartford, brother of the groom was best man.

The bride was attired in taupe brocaded georgette. She wore a blackvelvet hat and had a corsage bouquet of bride roses and lillies-of-the-valley. The bridesmaid was gowned in pencil blue brocaded georgette, with hat to match her corsage bouquet was pink rosebuds.

Following the ceremony the guests who included only members and relatives of both families, assembled at the bride's home on Central avenue, where breakfast was served. The bride who has been the popular organist of the Sacred Heart church, Norwich Town, for a number of years, received numerous beautiful gifts.

The groom is a well known resident of Norwich Town, being engaged as foreman in the finishing department at the Glen Woolen Mills. After a brief wedding trip by automobile, Mr. and Mrs. Murphy will reside on West Town street.

FUNERALS

George Kramer

The funeral of George Kramer of Colchester was held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home of his brother, William Kramer. No. 321 Central avenue, this city, with a large attendance of relatives and friends. The service was conducted by Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church. The bearers were C. A. Kramer of Colchester, William J. Kramer of Norwich, George Kramer, C. W. Burnham of Willimantic, Charles Kramer of Rockland, Mass., and Charles Kramer of Colchester where Rev. Mr. Rickets conducted a committal service. There were a number of beautiful floral tributes of esteem. Undertaker George G. Grant of Taftville had charge of the funeral arangements.

Alexander M. Purdy, M D.

At the home of Dr. Alexander Marshall Purdy, 13 Pearl street, Mystic, Thursday afternoon, sorrowing relatives and friends gathered for funeral services.

The service was read by Rev. Lucius Wilson Shey, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal church, and the committal ritual at Elm Grove cemetery was conducted by the officers of Stonington lodge, No. 26, I. O. O. F.

The honorary bearers were Drs. P. T. MacGown, L. M. Allyn, W. H. Gray, C. F. Congdon, A. H. Myers, of Mystic, and W. M. Hill, of Noank. The active beagers were C. C. Potter, F. O. Burroughs, George H. Greenman, G. E. Tingley, George D Johnson and P. H. Morgan.

OBITUARY

Richard M. Peck

Richard M. Peck, 70, one of the oldest residents of Hamburg, died Thursday morning at his home at Lord Hill after an extended illness. Mr. Peck was born in Hamburg where he spent all of his life. He was the oldest member of Crystal lodge, No. 88, I. O. O. F., of Old Lyme, having been accepted as a member when he was 21 years of age. His associations with the lodge were marked by active interest in all affairs until his health forbade it.

In 1871 he was married to Jennie M. Davidson of Old Lyme, who survives him. He also leaves two sons, Charles R. and William C. Peck of Hamburg; a grandson, Harry Peck of Bridgeport, and a brother, Charles M. Peck, of Hamburg.

Mrs. Daniel Sherman

Annie C. Sherman, 75, widow of Daniel Sherman, died early Thursday, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Eugene W. Clark, Franklin, with whom she has made her home for the past twelve years. Her death followed an illness of many months. She was born in this city, May 29, 1850, the daughter of Charles and Emeline Church Crandson, for a number of years residing here with her parents. Surviving her are a son, Charles, of Mechanicsville, and a daughter, Mrs. Eugene W. Clark of Franklin.

GASOLINE CARS TO RUN BETWEEN NORWICH AND NEW LONDON ON R. R.

The officials of the New London office of the New Haven railroad notified the Chamber of Commerce late Thursday afternoon that the gasoline cars will be placed in commission on the New London-Norwich line next Monday.

It will not be possible to carry any express packages or freight on these gasoline cars. As the delivery of express or freight is very important to the manufacturer or the merchant, the Chamber has been constantly striving to have the best express service possible maintained. It was therefore gratifying to the Chamber officials to learn that the New Haven railroad will send the express freight to Norwich on the first train going south in the morning which leaves New London at 6.35 arriving in Norwich at 7 o'clock and according to railroad officials, should be placed for delivery at 7.15 A. M., to the local office of the express company. This should mean that the express package deliveries will be much earlier than is the rule at present as it is 9 o'clock in the morning before the express packages are delivered to the local office.

For several years past, efforts have been made by the Chamber of Commerce to secure an evening train from New York. Local people having business in New York were compelled of necessity to take the 5 o'clock train from New York to Boston, and were compelled to waste at times half an hour in New London waiting for a trolley car, as the last train from New London arrived in Norwich at 6.30 P. M. Under the new arrangement with the State of Maine express stopping daily at Norwich, the last train from New London will reach Norwich at 10.45 P. M. The Maine express will stop in Norwich going south at 3.48 A. M. and going north at 10.45 P. M., every day including Sundays. This arrangement should be very beneficial and acceptable to the people of Norwich who have been denied a train after 6.30 P. M. It is certain to be welcome news to the manufacturers and merchants of Norwich and the public generally that the express deliveries will be much earlier than has been the rule for a number of years past in Norwich.

WRITES OF CHINA AND Y. M. C. A. WORK

In view of present disturbed conditions in China and the confusion in thought as to the real status of affairs there, a letter that has been received at the Norwich Y. M. C. A. is of particular interest, as it is written from Hangchow, China by Eugene A. M. Turner, foreign secretary of the Y. M. C. A. International committee.

Mr. Turner gives a picture of the situation in China, especially as it refers to the reception accorded to the work by the association.

He writes as follows:

"The greatest recent happening in Y. M. C. A. circles in China was the successful campaign in Shanghai for a foreign "Y" building. That great gateway city of China, has thirty-odd thousands citizens of America, England, France, Germany and every nation under heaven and these are known as foreigners, or, by many, as "foreign devils." The Chinese bring the population up to more than a million and a half, making one of the most rapidly growing cities in the world.

"It was not easy to put over a campaign in a community of such varying types of nationality, thought, ideas, religion, and race, but for once the city got enough together to over-ride active and vocal opposition and put the campaign over. This means that one of the centers of the world where such influences are distressingly needed is to have a half million dollar building. Two thirds of the money came from friends abroad and the balance from a multitude of small givers who saw the need and wanted to share in it.

"Here we have recently had a membership campaign which surpasses past records. It came at the worst possible time, or so it seemed to us. The influence of a recent civil war was still upon us, new officials had just come into power, the anti-christian movement was at its height and locally had singled out the association as a special object of attack because of its prominence, business failures were unusually frequent, and the political air was electric with fears of further upheavals. The campaign was needed, so we went ahead. There was expectation of failure in many quarters, but instead of failing to secure our goal of 2,200 members, we actually got more than 3,200. The total now is 3,586. Such a result in such a time is evidence aneut that we have the moral support and confidence of the city. The most active member of the campaign teams was Civil Governor Hsia-chao, who became a christian two and a half years ago through friends in the association. He was soon afterward elected to the association board of directors where he has continued to serve. The new military governor joined and sent in a gift of $500.

"Even though I am in the midst of the association here, I never cease to marvel at its success. It holds true to and emphasizes its Christian character and purpose. It is active in carrying out its program of Christian service in the community, schools factories and military camps, both independently and in co-operation with the churches. It has not compromised itself in any way for sake of the friendship of any class. It is a christian organization in a non-christian city. Its policy is controlled by a Christian board of directors, who are elected by Christian members who do not number one-fifth of the membership. Our $30,000 budget comes largely from men who are not only christians, but who know little of christianity except that they have observed it create a new type of unselfish service organization in their midst. They ask few questions about the use of their money. It is simply a case of confidence which has been built up through the years. It was this which brought success to the campaign which many thought a fool-hardy undertaking with conditions as they were.

"Backed by a confidence like this, the association is more able than ever in this time of intense nationalism and sensitive desire for indigenous institutions, leadership, education, culture religion and what-not, to lead out into every walk of life as the pioneer and fore-runner of the church. The mental life of China was never more alive and active than it is today. Much is being thrown off and discarded, but there is discrimination in essentials. In spite of the wide-spread criticism of christianity just now the heart and instinct of the people will not reject it, though they may finally demand it in different form. We feel that the more than 3,000 new Christians who have come into our membership and to the support of the program are speaking the real attitude of the people, and that Jesus and his teachings are more entrenched in the life of China than ever before. Christian America has seldom practiced wiser strategy than when she sent her representatives to establish the association, with responsibility for leadership, finances and policy resting on the shoulders of local christians. The association in China has always been Chinese, and its foreign secretaries while loaned from America, have been under the authority of their local boards. The whole experiment has been one of happy co-operation, and as a result the foreign secretaries, whose work has been that of training are outnumbered by their Chinese associates nearly five to one. The Chinese movement is safely on its way!

"The death of Sun Yat-sen is the outstanding political event. Regardless of opinion abroad, Dr. Sun was the idol of the students. To them he was China's Washington, as well as the Moses of their fight for democratic government. In every section of the country more was read into Dr Sun's words than he intended. He was never as radical as the impatient hopes of the younger generation made him seem in recent years. He was intensely patriotic, and so impatient of the long injustice of the west toward China that he finally ceased to be polite, and openly demanded that reparations be made and wrongs righted. To many this was Bolshevism To the younger generation here it was a battle-cry. The great leader died with clean hands. He handled literally millions in gifts for revolution, but when he died he left only his books, his clothes and his home with a mortgage on it! He died a Christian also. As facts of this kind came out after his death and as the people have come to realize his clean, unselfish, unending, single-minded, life-long and almost single handed struggle against overwhelming odds they have enshrined him in their hearts for all time. There have been few more devoted patriots and the hope his life gives for and to younger China is a stake more worth our playing for than has been true any time before since we heard the call to far lands thirty years ago.

"It is time to concentrate our efforts! It is time to occupy new cities! This is the double call which comes insistently to our movement which holds the moral leadership in China."

"I should like to write of the political situation in China, but wise men do not these days! Let me at least say that the unfortunate trouble in Shanghai which your daily paper has told you much of has brought about a situation which is grave in the extreme. Its effect on missions cannot but be serious. We feel that we shall be in no danger personally, but there is almost certain to be a nation-wide up-surging of anti-foreign feeling. The great prayer which we as missionaries stand in need of is that our nations shall practice the christianity we preach in their dealings and relations with China. That will win the day for our cause."

AUTUMN STYLE DAYS BEGIN IN NORWICH STORES

Those who were out for the first of the formal Style Days in Norwich stores Thursday found many surprising novelties in apparel, millinery and accessories.

Naturally, in the garment departments, interest centered in what Fashion has to offer in the shape of coats and dresses. In both there are new weaves, new colorings and new trimmings.

In the line of coats, the new shades include Sokhara—a rich wine tint—and two new blues, one on the hue of Sorrento and the other the favored cracklehead a lighter blue. Then jade and the other fashionable tint of green, epinard, are strong in favor. There is also a popular tint called pansy.

The majority of the coats are fur-trimmed, collar, cuffs, hem and in some instances are borders down the front.

Of materials, the leading weaves, all essentially smart, are needlepoint, suedes and the old fashioned Gerona, which is a ribbed fabric, very pleasing. A handsome coat of Gerona on view Thursday had for trimming Australian beaver.

Handsome Dresses Displayed

The newest dress designs show circular skirts, shorter than ever, 14 inches being the rule. Sleeves are long, some designs are fur-trimmed, others ornamented with buttons, hand-painting, or embroidery.

Materials in order of popularity are satin, chenille and cut velvet. As to colors, while black leads, jade, pencil blue, epihard and wood shades in brown are all strong.

The best liked materials are drurylaines, Kasha and replingle. The same straight lines characterize all the newest models.

Variety in Hats

The most fastidious shopper can find something pleasing in the season's millinery, since both close and large models are offered.

Some of the best materials are velvet, velour and felt. The colors featured include beige, new brown, rosewood damson, patou green, Bordeaux, rouge royale, claret, copper lustre, and of course a wide variety of smart designs in black.

WILL DEMONSTRATE ALFALFA ON ALSOP'S AVON FARM

Farmers interested in growing alfalfa as a dairy feed will have an opportunity on Oct 7 to study the methods employed on the largest alfalfa growing farm in Connecticut, the occasion being a field meeting called by the Hartford County Farm bureau at Wood Ford Farm, Avon, owned by J. W. Alsop.

Wood Ford Farm grew 70 acres of alfalfa this year, representing successive seedings from 1919 to last spring Three cuttings were made on all established fields this year and about 250 tons of alfalfa are in storage in the big dairy barn. Cost records kept at this farm prove that alfalfa costs less per ton to grow and harvest than any other hay crop, and the exceptional feeding value effects big savings in the purchase of grain and other concentrates.

J. W. Alsop, owner of the farm, will discuss the methods used in growing, harvesting and feeding alfalfa. J. J Anderson, the farm manager, will conduct a tour of the various fields where a good growth since the last cutting will permit the alfalfa to go into the winter safely.

The dairy herd of more than 200 animals, including young stock and about 70 milking cows, principally of the Ayrshire breed, will be on display. Milking will begin at 3:30 o'clock and the visitors will be shown the methods used on this farm in producing nursery milk for the Hartford market. The meeting is called for 1:30 o'clock and is open to all farmers in Connecticut.

HAD INTERESTING TRIP TO EUROPEAN COUNTRIES

Mr. and Mrs. Emil M. Fox of 43 McKinley avenue returned Thursday from a wonderfully interesting trip abroad for which they sailed from Montreal on July 4 on the steamship Regina. They visited in succession, England, France, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, and Germany, returning then to England, sailing from Southampton and reaching New York on the steamship Homeric on Wednesday.

Speaking Thursday night of conditions abroad Mr Fox said his observations led him to the conclusion that they were better in Germany than in either England or France. Evidences of unemployment in England are plain to be seen. Mr Fox visited most of the principal cities of Germany, including Strassburg, Stuttgart, Freiburg, Berlin and Mainz, being at the last named place just as the French troops of occupation were leaving. In Germany the conditions have changed from what they were two years ago. Then the people had plenty of money but nothing to eat. Now they have plenty to eat but not much money. Everybody is working, but the hours are long and the pay is small, while prices of commodities are high, higher than in the United States, he said. There is not the same speed in production in Germany as in the United States he remarked, as the American workman will do as much in a day as the German does in a week.

MANSFIELD FAIR WILL BE HELD AT STORRS

(Special to the Bulletin.)

STORRS, Conn., Sept. 24—The eighth annual Mansfield Fair will be held at the Connecticut Agricultural College on October 2, according to the announcement of A. J. Brundage, secretary, here today. Hawley Armory will be attractively decorated for the Fair, and will house exhibits of fruit, flowers, vegetables, household arts and poultry. Special displays will be set up by the Connecticut State Board of Health, the Mansfield Training School and the school children of Mansfield.

The livestock show will be the predominating feature of the outdoor attractions at the fair. This includes the livestock display the parade and the judging. In addition to this there will be hauling contests, a barnyard golf tournament, games and contests for the school children, boy's bicycle races and a decorated auto parade. There will be a band concert in the afternoon.

Officers of the Mansfield Fair Association are as follows: president, Byron Houston, Mansfield; vice-president Carroll Hawkins, Eagleville; treasurer, L. J. Storrs, Eagleville; secretary, A. J. Brundage, Storrs; auditor, Mrs. F. O. Vinton, Eagleville; member-at-large, Wayne L. Storrs, Eagleville.

EXCELLENT WAR RECORD HELPED LIQUOR VIOLATOR

Stanley Kendelinsky, of Suffield, a second offender, was sentenced to jail for six months for violation of the liquor law on two counts in the superior criminal court at Hartford Thursday. Kendelinsky had an excellent war record, and following his discharge from military service at Panama, he sent for a girl he had met in Germany, and they were married at Ellis Island

Despite the fact that the accused was considered by the state as

PLENTY OF ACTION PROMISED TONIGHT IN BOUTS OF DUWELL ATHLETIC SHOW

A-C-T-I-O-N. That's what the fans pay to see at a boxing bout and that's what they will get tonight when the Duwell A. A. puts on their card at Duwell field. Four bouts are on the program of action, headed by Johnny "Sheik" Leonard of Wallingford and Tracy Ferguson, also of Wallingford in the main bout for the state welterweight title. Leonard and Ferguson are the recognized contenders for the title and last month fought a slashing ten-round draw at Waterbury which was regarded as the feature bout of the card although it was only a semi-final to the Kaplan-Herman encounter.

Those who saw Leonard and Ferguson pummel each other for ten rounds are enthusiastic over the bout tonight which will decide the state title. It would be hard to find two better boys in the state to give the fans a real active fight, both being born sluggers and both endowed with a physical make-up that can absorb unlimited punishment and still come back for more. Several promoters in the state have been angling for this bout, each recognizing the attraction as a real drawing card, but it was up to Jackie Wilson to land the boys. Leonard has always been anxious to box in Norwich as he was sort of made the Rose of New England his second home. Leonard said recently that he was out to show the Norwich people that he is worthy to hold the state title.

Another bout that is of state wide interest is that between Happy Rollinson of Shelton who risks his state flyweight title against Young Coulon, of Taftville in a semi-final bout. This bout is creating no little interest locally as it is known that Coulon will step out in the very first of the fight and attempt to grab off the state title.

Coulon has been working hard and is in the best kind of condition. He wound up his training Wednesday night with a fast workout against Red Rankin and several other local boys. His work was fast and his hitting was hard and effective. Thursday was spent with light roadwork and punching the sandbag. When Coulon steps into the ring tonight it will be a different Coulon than the one that fought at Danielson a couple of years ago. He is faster and his main power lies in his terrific hitting power. Rollison is also in the best of shape and according to reports from the western part of the state is taking no chances on losing his title in the ring tonight.

The second semi-final will find Izzy Kaplan of Meriden, brother of Louis (Kid) Kaplan, world's featherweight champion, hooked up with Young Martin Flaherty of Lowell, Mass. Kaplan will be handled by his famous brother who will be in his corner. Flaherty arrived in Norwich on Thursday and worked out with a couple of the local lads and appears to be in good shape. Flaherty is no stranger to Norwich boxing fans who saw him several years ago. Flaherty and Kaplan are two fighters of the same style and are fast boys so that this will be the third action bout of the evening.

The preliminary bout brings together two Norwich lads, Young McCarthy of Jail Hill and Young Falcone of the East Side. Like the others this bout should whet the appetites of the fans for the remainder of the card for in Falcone we have a boy that is stepping along at a fast clip. Young McCarthy is a hard hitting lad of 126 pounds and will furnish Falcone a busy four rounds.

Everything is in readiness to handle the large crowd from all parts of the state that is expected to attend. The advance sale of tickets indicates a capacity house for the evening and it was thought last night that additional seats must be erected to accommodate the late comers. Never before has a bout in Norwich drawn so heavily and Promoter Wilson says that in all probability bouts will be staged here during the winter, as there is every indication that boxing is beginning to boom in the eastern part of the state.

The boxers will weigh-in at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the office of Dr. Sussler who is the local boxing physician.

ROSSIE AND MARTIN TEAMS IN THIRD GAME SUNDAY

The attraction at the J. B. Martin Park on Sunday will be the fast Rossie A. A. nine of Mystic in the third and deciding game of the series. Both clubs have a victory to their credit the first game going to the Velvetmen by the score of 5-1 and Rossie A. A. taking the second by the score of 7-2. The Rossie team will lineup as follows: Belair or McInnis, c, Chappell or Tedford will be on the mound, Wilson will cover 1st, Wilhelm at 2nd, Jack Murphy will cover 3rd, Walsh at short. In the outfield will be Wilhelm, Santin, Henry and Perry.

The Velvetmen will lineup the same as in previous games: J. Murphy c, Lemieux or Pepin p, J. Joubert 1st, C. Krauss or F. Murphy 2nd, F. Gley 3rd, DeCelles ss. The outfield will be taken care of by W. Gley, E. Murphy, E. Joubert and Dona.

Loughran Knocks Out Burke

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24—Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia, light-heavyweight, tonight scored a technical knockout over Jack Burke of Pittsburgh, the latter's seconds throwing a towel into the ring at the end of the sixth round. Burke substituted for King Solomon of Panama, who appeared in the ring and explained that he had broken a bone in his hand and was unable to fight.

RUTH WINS FOR YANKS WITH A HOME RUN

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP)—For the first time this season and for the sixth time in his career, Babe Ruth hit a home run with the bases full today, giving the Yankees a 6 to 5 victory over the White Sox. The big drive which was Ruth's 21st of the year, was made off Pitcher George Connally with one out in the extra session.

The clubs went into the tenth deadlocked at 2-all when Chicago staged a three-run rally at the expense of Ben Shields, recruit southpaw from Springfield.

It was the final game of the year between the clubs. The season's series stands 12 to 9 in favor of Chicago.

ATHLETICS PUT OUT OF RACE BY BROWNS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics lost their last game of the season with the St. Louis Browns here today, 6 to 4, in 11 innings. The Sislermen tied the score in the ninth inning by pounding two runs over the plate and won out in the eleventh when Slim Harriss went in cold. The Athletics won the season's series with the Browns by the slim margin of 12 victories to 10 defeats. Score.

MGR. LOUGHRAN SAYS DONOVAN IS WRONG ABOUT MOOSUP

In a recent communication from Henry Loughran, manager of the Moosup town team the Moosup mogul says that Bill Donovan of the Riverview Club is "all wet" in some of his statements about Moosup not taking on any teams in eastern Connecticut. Henry says that the records of last year's club show that he won a series from the Taftville A. A. and swamped the J. B. Martin team in two games. Now this season he is taking on River view because he considers them the only logical contender for the baseball title of the eastern part of the state.

Mgr. Loughran says that "Jack" Clabby, property of the New Haven Eastern League club, will positively appear in the Moosup line-up and not with the Riverview club as Manager Donovan has stated. As for the Moosup team having ex-Holy Cross players on it, Loughran says that the Holy Cross men are regulars on the college team and they round out a team that can take the measure of Riverview any day in the week. In closing his letter Loughran suggests that the Riverview come prepared to cover all bets for the Moosup fans are backing their club with everything but the household furniture.

FRANKIE BUSCH KAYOES MCLOED IN SECOND

(Special to the Bulletin.)

BOSTON, Sept. 24—Frankie Busch of Norwich knocked out Dan McLeod of Cambridge in the second round of the scheduled 10 round main bout on the Fort Banks card here tonight. Busch fought a hard slashing fight which completely smothered the Cambridge boy in the first round who was unable to withstand the storm. In the second round Busch floored McLode for an eight count early in the round and about the middle of the stanza a left to the head and a smashing right to the heart sent the Cambridge lad down for the count. This is the third bout that Busch has won at Fort Banks during te past month, all his victories being knockouts.

On Monday night Busch will fight a six-round preliminary to the Babe Herman and Honey Boy Finnegan star bout at Mechanics Hall in Boston, Busch's opponent is to be picked by the promoters of the show.

CURRIE IS GIVEN DECISION OVER DAY

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Joe Currie, of New Haven was given the referee's decision over George Day also of New Haven in a ten round star bout before the Nutmeg A. C. here tonight. Currie was Day's master throughout and jabbed Day's face until he had it covered with blood. Day was unable to use his rushing tactics being tied up by Currie every time he attempted to rush. Currie weighed 131; Day 132 1-2.

Meyer Cohen, of Holyoke, was given the referee's decision over Vincent Forgione of New York, in a ten round semi-final bout.

Wilbur Cohen, of Brooklyn, New York, was given the referee's decision over "Spark Plug" Russell, of Newark, in an 8-round bout.

Larry Rich, of New Haven, was given the decision over Young Monguese in a six round bout.

FINNEGAN AND BOSS WIN ON QUAKER CITY CARD

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—(A. P.) Dick "Honey Boy" Finnegan of Boston, and Benny Bass, Philadelphia, were the winners of the first two bouts at Shibe Park tonight for the benefit of the Columbus Italian hospital fund.

Finnegan made short work of Babe Ruth, of Philadelphia, knocking him out in the first round with an uppercut to the jaw. Finnegan weighed 130 and Ruth 128 1-2 pounds.

Bass was awarded the judges' decision over Eddie Anderson, Chicago, at the end of ten hard-fought rounds. Bass weighed 126 1-4; Anderson 124 3-4.

King Solomon, Panama, and Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia, met in the final bout.

ACADEMY OPENS FOOTBALL SEASON TODAY AGAINST WESTERLY HIGH

The N. F. A. eleven will play the first game of this season's schedule this (Friday) afternoon when they meet Westerly High School on the Academy Campus. Last season Westerly held the local boys to a scoreless tie in their first game and then won from them by a 6-3 score in the second at Norwich, the latter game being won by a blocked kick when it seemed that a victory for Norwich was imminent. Coach Whitney's charges hope to start the season right and defeat Westerly High to make up for last season.

The squad has been put through some long practice and hadi drills during the past week and should be in good condition for today's contest. Yesterday Whitney gave his men a short talk and then sent them twice around the track. Following this they went through a long signal drill and then closed the practice with their daily grass drill.

In Thursday's practice Schwartz was at center, with Polsky and Fedly guards, Mousely and Stefano tackles and Waters, McCluggage and Sargent ends. Captain Jimmy Williams at quarter, C. Brewer and Pheno Tombari halfbacks and "Radio" Ed Brewer fullback.

Whitney has had a hard grind to build up an eleven around Williams, Polsky and Stefano, the only three letter men and real veterans left from last year's eleven. Pheno, Tombari, Schwartz, Mousely and Waters were all first string subs last year. The principal thing that they appear to need is good team work and confidence, not only in themselves alone, but in the team as a whole. Whitney has this season some of the heaviest material of late years.

Coach Whitney, it appears, desires to make up a team with a heavy line and a rugged, fast backfield. At a low estimate of 160 in the center of the line that must average about 190 pounds while the backfield should tip the scales at something a little better than 150 pounds.

According to unofficial report Westerly's team may have a slight advantage over the local boys. It is four years since an N. F. A. team has defeated Westerly. The last time the Academy was victorious was in 1921 when they defeated Westerly by the score of 6 to 0. However, this year the boys are going out on the field to either win or find out the reason why. Some of the real old-fashioned Academy spirit is being shown by this year's team and it is hoped that the local boys will come through with the goods and trounce Westerly.

Harold Rogers, coach at Westerly, says that he will bring a squad of thirty-eight men to Norwich this (Friday) afternoon for their first game of the season. The team is in the pink of condition and should put up a fast, hard game against the N. F. A. eleven.

The tentative lineup for Westerly is as follows: Ends, Capalbo, Rossi; tackles, Captain Novogroski, A. Smith, guards; Fiore, Ledwidge; center, De Rocco; in the backfield will be Melkie at quarter, Turco and Martinoli half backs and Salemino fullback.

Ray Woods, this year's manager, has reduced the price of season tickets from $1 to 75 cents. It is hoped that this cut as well as the bright outlook for the season will stimulate interest among football fans. All Red and White fans should be on hand this afternoon to root for their home team as Westerly always brings a large delegation of rooters. The Academy field has been newly marked off and the ground put in condition for this afternoon's game. Also new goal posts have been erected. There are few high schools in Connecticut that have the advantages of an athletic field such as the Academy's. The kick-off will be at 3 p. m. sharp.

Borotra Beat Lott

CHICAGO, Sept. 24—Jean Borotra of the French Davis cup team, scored a brilliant 7-5, 6-3 victory over G. M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago in the opening round today of the intersectional team tennis tournament. The French star's win evened the series between the western association team and the French, as Luke Williams, of Chicago, had previously won over Jacques Brugnon of France, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

Mello Kayoes Laurie

LOWELL, Mass., Sept. 24—Al Melo of Lowell, Mass., knocked out Bob Laurie of Scotland in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round bout here tonight. They are welterweights.

AGGIES OPEN STIFF SCHEDULE AGAINST WESLEYAN SATURDAY

(Special to the Bulletin.)

STORRS, CONN., Sept. 24. The Connecticut Aggies 1925 football campaign, which looms up as one of the most difficult ever attempted at the State College, will get under way Saturday when Wesleyan is met at Middletown in what will be the opening encounter for both elevens.

Coach Dole's squad is now in its second week of intensive drill, which finds the team in tip-top condition and ready for the hard tussle expected from Wesleyan. The knee injury sustained early in the week by Donovan, promising backfield candidate from Middletown, is not as serious as was first thought, and he is in good condition now.

Dole will throw a veteran team into the fray Saturday, one that carries ten lettermen from last year, and seven of whom were regulars on the Aggies undefeated 1924 eleven.

Connecticut's team will be lighter than was first expected Dole sacrificing some of his heavyweights for lighter and speedier men. The line will average 168 pounds, the backfield 160 pounds, and the entire team 165 pounds.

The probable lineup, and weights of men starting against Wesleyan Saturday are: le, Captain Brink, 156; lt, Nanfeldt, 193; lg, Bitgood, 166; c, Daly, 170; rg, McAllister, 160; rt, Zollin, 178; re, Fienneman, 155; qb, Schofield, 153; lhb, Eddy, 172; rhb, Moreland, 145; fb, Makofski, 171.

With only twenty-one men on the varsity, the Connecticut Aggies probably hold the record in New England for having the smallest squad in college football. This means the Aggies reserve strength is none too strong, and it is hoped with the opening of college tomorrow a number of experienced candidates will report.

Despite the small size of his squad, Coach Dole is tackling a schedule that shows no soft spots. Following the Wesleyan game, the Aggies tackle Chick Meehan's New York University team at New York, Maine, Massachusetts Aggies, Tufts and New Hampshire. These contests loom up as the stiffest assignments on the Connecticut slate, and if Dole can weather them with so small a squad he is turning in a remarkable piece of work.

Dole would make no comment on the Wesleyan game today other than to say that his team is in excellent condition, and that he expects a hard game when his team stacks up against the Red and Black.

A long practice session was held this afternoon, which was in the main devoted to dummy scrimmage and signal drill. The usual work in kicking, passing and the fundamentals was also observed however.

WORKING MEN'S ATHLETIC COMPETITION PLANNED

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP)—With the purposes of fostering the spirit of sportmanship throughout the world, the sportsmanship brotherhood at a meeting of charter members in the Hotel Lafayette tonight approved proposals to send American athletic teams recruited from working men abroad for competition with similar teams.

Capt. Percy R. Creed, executive secretary of the brotherhood, who presided at the meeting stated that the purpose of the New York organization was "to form the nucleus of a national organization to extend the method used in Massachusetts throughout the United States."

Mathew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, was named president of the sportmanship brotherhood.

WASHINGTON CLINCHES AMERICAN LEAGUE FLAG BY BEATING CLEVELAND TWICE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Washington captured its second consecutive American league pennant today and will face Pittsburgh, which clinched the national league title yesterday, in the world series starting the latter city Oct. 7.

The American league race ended suddenly as the champions took two games from Cleveland today while St. Louis came from behind to nose out Philadelphia, sole remaining contender, in an eleven inning contest.

It happened so quickly that apparently none but the rabid fans who had figured out the mathematical chances of Washington and Philadelphia were aware that the Senators had won the pennant. The good-sized and mildly demonstrative crowd walked calmly from the field, only a few rushing to Manager Harris and President Clark Griffith with congratulations.

Not so with the players. Although they had counted the pennant all but won with an eight game lead over the Athletics, there was real jubilation in the dressing room. Smiling broadly Manager Harris directed that all the regulars appear as usual tomorrow to start against St. Louis in the three game series.

"It is a great feeling," Harris said. "It is a great relief to have it over and I am certainly proud of the team."

The youthful pilot who won the world series last year in his first attempt at managing, directed today's game from the bench. He has a badly lacerated finger on the throwing hand and there is some doubt whether he will be able to start at his position at second base in the worlds series.

The veteran "Dutch" Ruther, accounted for the first game today, scoring his eighteenth victory of the season. The champions had to go ten innings, however, to defeat Sherrod Smith, 4 to 3. Alex Ferguson, Boston and New York cast-off, turned in the second and pennant clinching contest six to two. He was seldom in trouble after the second inning and received great support from the patched up team behind him. Besides Manager Harris, Roger Peckinpaugh, shortstop, is out of the game with a sprained ankle. Adams and Scott played in their places.

The outcome of the Philadelphia-St. Louis game was posted at American league park during the eighth inning of the second games and it added stimulus to the champions who promptly unleashed a four run attack.

Goslin's eighteenth home run of the season and his double accounted for two of Washington's runs in the opener. The latter blow ended the contest.

Few of the regulars will be taken on the trip to Boston early next week for the four game series there. Besides St. Louis and Boston, Washington meets Philadelphia in two more home games, the season ending a week from Sunday.

JOSS RETURNS TO YALE FOOTBALL SQUAD

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 24—(A. P.)—Although Captain Joss of the Yale football team returned to practice this afternoon after spending several days in the infirmary suffering from sinus trouble, the coaches continued to shape the Yale eleven for its earlier games without Joss at tackle. The Blue captain put on his uniform today and jogged about the field, but he is still far from being well enough to get into the daily scrimmages.

His place at tackle is being filled by Richards with Butterworth at tackle on the other side of the line. Coleman replaced Potts at one end position on the varsity today, Bradley continuing at the other. Root continued at one guard position, but Wortham's injurless kept him out of the lineup, Flaherty playing as the other guard.

The rest of the lineup remained the same as on most of the previous days of practice. Sturhahn was at center; Bunnell at quarterback, with King, Allen and Cottle as the backs.

During a short scrimmage this team made one touchdown against the scrubs, Kline carrying the ball over. A second varsity then played another scrub team and scored twice, Barclay making both of the touchdowns. Hill, halfback, made a 30-yard run and a score for the scrubs.

Lindley, at back on the second string team, played in his first scrimmage this season. He has been out because of a cold.

TUNNEY AND MADDEN FINISH WITH LIGHT WORK

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 24—Road work—just enough to keep their joints limber—wound up the training today of WASTE, WASTE, WASTE.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

"Nature," it is said, "abhors a vacuum." To secure one, you've got to hog-tie nature and blindfold her. Then, when at last, by dint of extreme effort, you've got your vacuum, you have to watch it every minute or nature will sneak or crash her way into it and abolish it.

Just as vigorously does every right-thinking mind abhor waste. With that statement we'll all agree. Waste is the misuse of time, of effort, of money, of material, either for no good end or for no end at all. It is diametrically opposed to thrift. It is quite as antagonistic to reason and what we fondly call common sense, because it is so uncommon.

But when you come to look with any sort of closeness into the way in which men and women actually work and spend and live, you begin to see just how few, how uninfluential and how unimportant are what we have agreed in calling "right-thinking minds."

For the simple fact is that at least half the time, the labor, the money, and the materials which we use are utterly wasted, thrown away, dissipated,—either made of no effect or of bad effect, used to no purpose or to bad purpose.

How do I make that out? Tush, man, I don't have to make it out. The economists of the world have made it out,—and have the figures to prove their work. And the worst of it is that we of these loudly-boasting United States are about the biggest wastrels in the universe.

While waste is to be found in scores of directions, there are three which are especially tragic,—the waste in natural resources, waste in production, and waste in consumption.

Take natural resources first. Coal is one of them. It is something which nature has been scoring in her ledger—and safe deposits for untold millions of years. Something over a hundred years ago we broke into her bank and began digging and shovelling out and burning up the fuel she had been saving. Did we go at the job with any sort of reason or foresight or judgment? Most emphatically we did not. We went at it,—and by that "we" I mean the whole bunch of us, miners and operators and dealers and consumers,—we went at it in about the same spirit in which a drove of hungry hogs would attack a corn-crib they had managed to break their way into. The economists find that, for every ton of coal we've got out we've destroyed another; for every foot of natural gas we've saved we've lost another; for every barrel of kerosene we've actually used we've wasted nine barrels. But even that doesn't tell the whole disgraceful story. Most of the coal has been used to make steam for driving engines. This has always been known to be wasteful of power. But did you comprehend that, when the furnace under the steam-boiler has burned up enough coal to produce 20 horse-power, owing to wastes in mining, in transportation and combustion, the boiler has produced only one horse-power?

Talk about the Prodigal Son: He was a very John D. Rockefeller of nickle-saving thrift compared with us coal users!

And all this while at least 80 per cent of the water power readily available,—and indestructible,—from fall-streams has remained unused.

We have wasted and are wasting timber just about as recklessly. Two hundred years ago there were 800,000,000 acres of worth-while forest in this country. Now there are 138,000,000 We've already used up fully four-fifths of all we had to start with and are still using our reserves more than four times as fast as new growth is able to replace them.

And now we come to a subject which ought specially to interest us farmers. Wastes on the farm. In 1921, out of 4,500,000,000 pounds of milk solids,—not milk, please note, but milk solids,—less than half were used for human food or human purposes of any sort. The rest was thrown away. The country produces about 5,000,000 tons of sugar per annum. In the processes of refining that amount 12,000 tons of nitrogen, 18,000 tons of potash, and 4,000 tons of phosphoric acid are dissipated into thin air, wasted, blown entirely away. In the accepted system of making coke in "beehive ovens" 700,000 tons of ammonium sulphate are similarly wasted. If the knowledge we actually have today were only used in the entire coal industry there could be saved from the yearly 500,000,000 ton coal output 5,000,000 tons of this last fine fertilizer,—enough to keep all our soils rich. But it isn't used. It is ignored, wasted. Even in the gathering of such crops as we do raise, there is enormous waste. No figures of any sort are available to suggest the aggregate losses. But any farmer who will take the trouble to go over, say, a tenth-acre of his wheat or rye or oat field after the reapers and rakes have done their work, will be astonished at the amount of grain they have skipped, or grimed into the dirt. Threshing machines, no matter how cunningly devised or carefully run, send a lot more into the chaff-heap; rats and mice take a toll estimated at from $400,000,000 to $500,000,000 from stored grain every year;—and the entire original crop, even if every kernel had been saved, averages less than one-half what it would have been had we used an adequate amount of fertilizer. We use, on the average, 28 pounds per acre; Europe uses 200 pounds,—and raises double or treble the acreage yield we do, on lands that have been cropped persistently for 2,000 years.

Waste in manufacturing production is slowly being eliminated by the efforts of engineers and efficiency experts. There seem to be no figures available showing just how much manpower is still wasted by crude or slack methods. But a couple of facts cited by Stuart Chase of the New York labor bureau will suggest how huge the total must be. He states that there are shoe factories where the output is two pairs per man per day, and others where it is 15 pairs. How many men could be released to help in farm-work if all did as well as the latter? "If all the saw-mills of the country were as efficient as the average (not the best) mill, one-half the present man power could produce the present output."

When it comes to consumption, waste rises into figures which are almost incomprehensible. Taking the returns of the internal revenue bureau for 1921 as his basis, Babson, the finacial expert, estimated that the American people that year spent $13,766,000,000 for luxuries. Stuart Chase, from whose series of articles in The New Republic I have taken most of my figures, says that the very least number of men in this country engaged in the production and distribution of wholly waste products is 8,000,000,—probably nearer 10,000,000 in actual fact. That is almost a quarter of the total manpower of the nation.

Think of it,—one man out of every four in the country steadily engaged in the production of that which is either of no valid service or of that which is distinctly harmful!

And yet we kick about the "high cost of living," for which our own reckless wastefulness is immediately and almost solely responsible!

Of course there are excuses for all these wastes. The prodigal expenditure of our natural resources, imminently threatening their nearby extinction, is excused on the ground that it was cheaper to waste them than to save them. The waste in manufacturing and agricultural production is excused largely by appeals to habit. We've been accustomed to doing things certain ways; why bother to seek better ways? The waste in consumption we most of us excuse to ourselves on the assertion that what the other fellow calls luxuries we call comforts. Anyway, we "can afford them."

But can we?

Can we really afford to go on wasting a full half of the natural resources God and nature have given us: wasting a big half of our time and work doing things the wrong way instead of the right way; wasting more than half our money on things we either don't need or that actually hurt us?

It goes without saying that we farmers can't be held responsible for wastes in mining and in manufacturing and in transportation and in the extravagances of the unco' rich. Nor could we change them.

But we are responsible for wastes on our farms. And it is no defense for us to point to other peoples' prodigality as an excuse for our own.

For years and years farm economists have been mourning over the tremendous waste of farm manures. Chemists have analyzed and statisticians have computed and publicists have argued and exhorted. To what purpose? Do you know a single farm on which, today, all the manurial values of its barn-yards and stables and garbages and humus are scrupulously conserved? I don't.

We have to take the tools and machines the manufacturers turn out for us, with their imperfections on their heads. But how many of us study those tools and machines so as to get the most possible from them with the least loss? How many of us don't even take the trouble to house and oil them when their seasonal work is done?

How many of us study our possible markets and their probable demands, and fit our production to some reasonable expectation thereof?

Ah, brethren, there are beams enough in our own eyes to occupy our attention, without worrying too much over the motes in other-men's. It is up to us to put our own houses in order before we start in to remodel our neighbors'.

THE FARMER.

Canadian Production Higher

Canada produced a net value of $3,051,000,000 in commodities in 1923, according to a report issued by the bureau of statistics. This represents an increase of 3.8 per cent. over the figures of the previous year. The preeminence of Ontario was accentuated in 1923 by the increased productivity of manufacturers, this province contributing 39.7 of the Canadian total. Quebec held second place, while Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia and Manitoba followed in the order named. The contribution of the maritime provinces jointly amounted to 7 per cent. of the total value of Canadian production.

Why is marriage always such a surprise to a pair of lovers who think they understand each other thoroughly.

WORLD WHEAT AND RYE CROPS INCREASE

Further increases in the world production of wheat and rye are shown by late estimates received by the department of agriculture.

Wheat production in 25 countries which produce 76 per cent. of the world crop outside of Russia and China is estimated at 2,493,000,000 bushels against 2,335,000,000 bushels last year, an increase of 158,000,000 bushels.

Rye production in 17 countries, excluding Russia, is estimated at 863,-840,000 bushels against 619,371,000 bushels last year, or an increase of nearly 245,000,000 bushels.

Latest wheat estimates are: Canada, 391,813,000 bushels against 263,037,000 bushels last year; Yugoslavia, 82,305,-000 bushels against 57,771,000 bushels; Hungary, 86,358,000 bushels against 51,568,000 bushels; Czechoslovakia, 26,-560,000 bushels against 32,232,000 bushels; Poland, 58,569,000 bushels against 32,498,000 bushels; England and Wales, 48,685,000 bushels against 49,-7600,000 bushels.

The combined wheat production of five countries of the Lower Danube, which includes one of the most important surplus producing areas of Europe outside of Russia, totals 335,-247,000 bushels against 240,315,000 bushels last year.

Latest rye estimates are: Canada, 15,527,000 bushels against 13,751,000 bushels last year; Poland, 266,757,000 bushels against 143,884,000 bushels last year; Yugoslavia, 8,425,000 bushels against 5,541,000 bushels; Hungary, 30,864,000 bushels against 22,103,000 bushels; Czechoslovakia, 53,353,000,-444 bushels against 44,725,000 bushels last year.

Production of all important grains in Russia this year will be larger than in 1924 and probably larger than in any year since the World war, the department says. The area sown to all grain in present Russian territory for this year's crop is estimated at 194,000,000 acres compared with 186,-000,000 acres last year and 126,000,000 acres in 1921. This shows a marked recovery since 1921, but the area is still 29,000,000 acres below the area in grain in 1913.

Tattooed for Blue Lips

The intricate carving on the old lintels and doorposts reveals the Maori craftsman at his best, says Asia magazine, in describing a series of photographs collected by William Thompson showing Maori artists in wood, flax and feathers.

Grotesque human figures, superposed, are flanked with the spiral, which is a motif in almost all native design. Demon-like, with their enormous mouths and gleaming eyes, these figures keep away malevolent spirits.

Within the house the carving on rafter or wall is no less elaborate. From ceiling to floor extends a series of carved panels, alternating with latticework of reed and flax arranged in step design or other symmetrical pattern. Traditions of ancestor worship are here set forth for generations to come.

Since none would have a red-lipped wife, the Maori woman submitted to tattooing, which vouchsafed the coveted blue-lined mouth and chin.

The position of the men was also exalted by the tattooed spirals and lines, covering the faced with their involved patterns and adding barbaric dignity and force.

Gave Domain With String to It

To give away forty-one quarter sections of land to relatives is remarkable, but this recently was done by Carl Croffoot of Sheridan county, Kan., says the Topeka Capital. He homesteaded in Jewell county at an early day, but about twenty years ago sold out and went west, farming on a large scale. Croffoot was never married. To his seven brothers and sisters he gave a quarter each of his best land, then to thirty-three nieces and nephews he gave a quarter each. The only provision was that the recipients pay the taxes and give the donor one-fourth of the crop each year during his lifetime.

Emigration Decreases.

Laws of the United States and other nations outside Europe which restrict immigration are advanced as the reason for decreased Italian emigration during the first four months of 1925. In that time 118,000 Italians left to make their homes elsewhere compared with 146,000 during the first four months of 1924.

Statistics show that a larger percentage than formerly of the emigrants are going to other European countries.

Insurance Booming in Japan

Statistics gathered by the Life insurance association show that the total of life insurance contracts of forty-four insurance companies throughout the Japanese empire reached 4,681,-557,000 yen at the end of May, the number of contracts being 5,121,000. Compared with last year, an increase is shown of 17,552,000 yen in the amount of contracts and 227,500 in the number of insurance-takers.

Stormy Petrel Of Aviation Corps Faces Court Martial

Col. William Mitchell, former head of the Army Aviation Corps, launched a bomb shell in army and navy ranks with his scathing denunciation of the recent fatal accidents to the Shenandoah and the PN-9 No. 1 He said: "These accidents are the direct result of incompetency, criminal negligence and almost treasonable administration" . . . Dead silence has reigned in the departments since Mitchell's attack, but it is rumored that the air officer faces court martial and that he welcomes such an outcome.

WESTERLY

Dr. Edwin R. Lewis, well known amateur radio enthusiast of Westerly and a former fish commissioner of Washington county, returned to his home at 1 o'clock Thursday morning, from a 10,000 mile railroad and steamship trip of twenty-seven days on the Canadian National railways from Boston the Alaska Yukon.

Lewis visited the radio broadcasting stations along the route and while on the Pacific coast sent out a radio greeting to the Watch Hill Coast Guard station, in which district he is medical officer in charge.

The itinerary followed by Dr. Lewis from Boston was to Moncton, N. B., swinging around through the maritime provinces through to Quebec, Montreal and Ottawa. From Ottawa he went to North Bay through Cobalt to Cochrane, then due west to Winnipeg, where he was just half way to the Pacific coast, thence to Saskatchewan, Edmonton, Albert province, through Jasper Park and through Prince Rupert, and by steamboat through Hecate straits and the inland waters to Wrangel, Alaska, Skagaway. Thence into British Columbia and through White Pass and to White Horse on the Yukon. His return was by the last steamer of the season, while enjoying fresh strawberries and blooming flowers. The trip was by way of Vancouver and the south side of the Canadian Rockies to Winpet, Nakina, Toronto and Montreal, to Boston. Returning east the weather was found to be gradually growing colder until Boston was reached and where an overcoat was most comfortable. The first snow was encountered at Edmonton. Dr. Lewis speaks of the kindest attention received and states that he had a wonderfully good time, enjoying the trip even better than he had expected. He was the guest of Justice Beck of Alberta province for nearly a day and was present at the unveiling of the Harding Memorial at Vancouver. He visited what was reported as the largest cold storage plant at Prince Rupert, where forty or more fish schooners unload halibut and many other fish daily and from which plant it is not uncommon to send six carloads of fish east a day. As a former Rhode Island fish commissioner Dr. Lewis took much interest in the fisheries and followed the process of catching the fish, unloading, preparation, freezing and final shipment, being furnished every opportunity for personal inspection, also, the privilege of picking the particular mountain trout to be served him for breakfast on the railroad diner. Numerous souvenirs and photographs of his journey were brought home by the doctor.

Roy Russell and Earl Russell, both of Westerly, were sentenced to jail for four months and nine months respectively, by Judge A. A. Capotosto in the Washington County superior court Wednesday on charges of breaking and entering in the night time and larceny of $85 and a gold watch from J. J. Fitzgerald, also of Westerly.

Judge Capotosto declared that Earl Russell's history did not appeal to him and added that if a year at Deer Island and a former probation had done him no good he need not expect leniency. Judge Capotosto imposed the nine months sentence on Earl, but in consideration of Roy's youth, and an honorable term in the U. S. Coast Guard, gave him four months.

He warned both defendants that if they appeared before him again for a similar offence they would receive the maximum sentence of five years.

Chief Brown of Westerly police told Judge Capotosto that Earl Russell had been arrested two years ago for assault on his wife and was put on probation. Assistant Attorney General Louis V. Jackvony appeared as prosecutor for the defendants who have been held in the Providence county jail for some time. Attorney John Dunn of Westerly was assigned by the court as defence counsel.

Joseph Gabriele was fined for a second offence of illegal possession of liquor. Prisco Sevesano was fined $100 for illegal possession.

Clifford Smith of Westerly was granted a divorce from his wife, Clara Smith, on grounds of desertion. Clarence Roche was attorney for the plaintiff.

Mrs. Aldear R. Evans of Westerly was awarded a divorce from Philip Evans on grounds of non-support. The custody of two minor children was given to the petitioner. Mrs. Evans testified that she was married May 24, 1918 in Hartford and had received but little support from her husband since they were married. She does not know where he is, she declared: In 1920 he went to Putnam to work and she came home to White Rock, from which place she went to Philadelphia to work in 1923. Judge Capotosto told her to look up her husband's whereabouts to see if he could not be compelled to support the children.

Judge Capotosto adjourned court until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

At a special session of the Third District court held Thursday morning, Judge Michael J. Turano presiding, George O. Batalis, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Hanna Shahanty of New York were arraigned on a charge of peddling without a license. They were fined $15 and costs each. Officer Madison found them selling lace and linen without licenses.

George LaPierre was fined $10 and costs on an intoxication charge. He was arrested on Main street by Officer George Champlin.

The Colored Citizens' Republican club plans to open its campaign for the coming election by holding a political and social gathering Thursday evening, Oct. 1, in the Nardone block. Mrs. Elizabeth Getts Green of New London, chairman of the executive board of the Connecticut League of Republican Colored Women, will be the principal speaker.

Arrangements for the political meeting and social are being made by Thomas Buell, chairman assisted by William Sprigns secretary and Samuel Allen, treasurer.

The Pawcatuck fire department was called out by an alarm for fire Wednesday afternoon about 1 o'clock on the whistle at the Cottrell Press Works, from Box 43, corner of Mechanic and Palmer streets. The fire was in the rinsmith shop of Lafayette L. Foster at the rear of his residence, 40 Mechanic street. The interior of the place was well smoked and slightly charred, the damage being about $25. The truck of the P. S. Burbel Hose company responded and a line of hose was laid from the street hydrant but no water was turned on.

The Westerly fire department responded to a still alarm for a fire, Wednesday about 12:15 o'clock when one truck was sent to the site of the former Bliven Opera house, Main street, which was burned last January. Workmen are now engaged in cleaning up the rubbish and a carelessly thrown match was reported to have started a fire which was extinguished by the firemen before any damage was done.

ANXIOUS BONDSMEN GLAD WHEN POLICE STO. EXPRESS

(Special to the Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 24—The speed with which the Westerly police department can function was shown Thursday morning, when Sergt. Sullivan of the New London police department called the Westerly police by telephone to inform them that a young New London colored woman, accused of shoplifting was thought to be jumping her $300 bail and was a passenger on the Federal express, due to stop at the Westerly railroad station at 7.48. The express was just coming into Westerly when the request to hold the woman was received. Motorcycle Traffic Officer George Madison took Police Patrolman Robert Kessel from Dixon square to the station, where they arrived just as the train came to a stop. In a coach Officer Kessel found Mrs. Lucille Manning, 24, of 24 Golden street, New London, and requested her to accompany him to the Westerly police station. In ten minutes the New London department was informed that she was in custody and it was learned that Traffic Officer McCaskey No. 30 of the New London force was on his way to Westerly. At the Westerly police station the officer identified the young woman and searched her for a knife which she was reported to be carrying, but which she said she did not have with her. She claimed she was not the one of two arrested that kicked the police officer when arrested in New London. Another relieved party who also accompanied the officer on the return was Edward W. Jones of New London, who had become bondsman for the woman's appearance in New London court to the amount of $300. She was arraigned in New London court Thursday morning.

LAWS TO CERTIFY AUTO TITLES ENACTED BY 22 STATES

The joy rider and the automobile thief have both come to grief through the enactment of laws for the certification of automobile titles. Twenty-two states, according to the insurance department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, have enacted such statutes, seven of them this year, and more states are considering legislation of this character.

Estimates of automobile thefts vary running from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 annually in the aggregate. Certification laws have had the effect of checking them perceptibly by making it difficult for the thief to dispose of them, not being able to give title. Insurance companies have agreed to reduce their rates against theft 10 per cent in the states where statutes are enacted.

The curb intended for thieves has also placed a check upon the joy rider, as the latter often takes some one else's car when indulging in this diversion.

It is generally admitted that the maximum benefit will not be obtained from certification until it has been adopted in all states. When this comes to pass the thief will not be able to dispose of the stolen cars with out forging a certificate of title.

Birds Protect Big Animals

E. P. James, of Wembley, England, writing to The London Mail about birds that protect animals, says that such birds are common in South Africa, and adds:

"But only one bird performs the duty for each animal. The crocodile has a bird which enters its mouth to clean the teeth of the brute. Another bird acts as sentry to the rhinoceros and warns it by screaming in the creature's ear of the approach of an enemy. I myself have witnessed these things in South Africa."

RHABDOMANCER FINDS OIL IN EARTH BY SMELL

Father Innocenzo, vicar general of the Capuchine order in Alessandria, is a famous rhabdomancer. By putting and smelling the earth he is able to tell what is underneath. This ancient profession, indispensable to the tribe in nomad times, is still valued in Italy. Father Innocenzo has found water—and, what is more interesting to Americans, oil—in Italy and Tripoli. Recently, near the village of Broggi, in the Curone valley, while rhabdomancing around he suddenly announced: "Gold and silver." In fact, samples of the earth taken to a Turin laboratory were found to contain 4 grams of gold and 56 grams of silver per ton of earth. Not much, but the townsfolk got excited and capitalized Father Innocenzo's further researches in their community.

Artificial Silk

A fete in connection with the twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the artificial silk-spinning industry was held recently at Tubize, near Brussels, where the industry has transformed what was formerly a small farm village into a model garden city. There was a parade of the 4,000 men and women employes of the factory, and a large apartment in the works was converted into a temporary chapel where a choir from the theatre sang.

Lion Fears Rhinoceros

Ordinarily the rhinoceros is not fond of fighting, but when he gets mad he is a snorting, bellowing maniac and then even the lion, the king of the jungles, gives him a wide berth. Natives of Africa once believed the horns of a rhinoceros were of medicinal value and when ground the powdered horn was used to cure everything from a sprained ankle to falling hair.

MODERN ANTIQUES FIND EAGER BUYERS IN SPAIN

That American vogue for "Spanish houses," is sending to Spain an ever-increasing swarm of buyers of furniture and fittings who pounce on all Spanish articles, good, bad and indifferent.

Since genuine Spanish period furniture is becoming very rare, anything that is merely old is snapped up. A rug or carpet has become more valuable than the same article in good repair. All sorts of faking and imitation are resorted to.

For example, an old chair is taken to pieces and one of its legs is incorporated in a reproduction, which is then sold as an antique on the strength of its one old leg. In an antiquary's shop a few days ago was a man beating shown Andalusian rugs called Alpujarras. On old Alpujarra rug is very valuable, and when more than 100 years old pays no duty on entering the United States. It is one of the features of the rugs that they bear the names of the persons for whom they were woven and the date. Many purchasers of these rugs make it a condition of purchase that the date be removed when it is less than 100 years, in the hope of getting them home duty free.

Granada, visited by most tourists on account of the Alhambra, is the center of the new furniture-faking trade, though Madrid makes impeccably rusted doors, grilles, lamps and candlesticks. Ironwork is the easiest article to fake.

Tobacco Crop Drop

Last year in all the countries of the world for which figures are available the total production of tobacco was 2,686,000,000 pounds. This was a decrease of 2 per cent from the preceding year, but the production, according to the United States department of agriculture, is still larger than it was in the same countries before the war. Most of the decrease in production is accounted for by the shrinkage in the United States and in Greece. This country produced 275,000,000 pounds less than the preceding year, and in Greece there was a drop of 85,000 pounds. Turkey and the Dutch East Indies increased their productions and make up part of this loss.

The United States grows about half of the tobacco that is reported in the world and about half of the total raw tobacco that enters into international trade. It was the increase in production in this country that caused most of the world gains in tobacco production. Greece and Japan have also contributed to building up the total. Such well-known tobacco countries as the Dutch East Indies, Russia, Hungary and Cuba have shown a decreased crop.

Millions For Reclamation.

In the 1924-25 session of congress appropriations for new reclamation projects were made, the costs being estimated at nearly $60,000,000. Other projects authorized by earlier congresses will bring the total outlay for new work under way up to $110,000,000. This outlay in all will provide water for about 400,000 acres or 10,000 farms. The cost is roughly estimated at $150 to $160 an acre.

Are You Too Thin?

Broadway Theatre

Lost—a Wife, which opens a four days' run at the Broadway on Sunday is claimed to be one of the most colorful and interesting Williams de Mille comedies. It is filled with many intensely interesting bits of continental life. It has one of the funniest bedroom scenes on record, wherein Adolphe Menjou hides behind the curtains on the wedding night of his divorced wife and a French count.

De Mille, it is said, has put across these scenes with his usual extraordinary skill.

Menjou is featured with Greta Nissen and Robert Agnew in the picture, which is a screen version of Alfred Savoir's Broadway stage hit. Banco, adapted for the screen by Clara Beranger.

There's a typical de Mille cast playing a support of the principals.

The second feature is a snappy story of action, comedy and thrills with William Fairbanks and Eva Novak in Tainted Money.

Other attractive selections will be a comedy, Kinogram and special augmented orchestra. Just think fifteen big reels, a two and a half hour show for the new Sunday night prices—all seats 25c.

Don't forget to see todays great vaudeville and picture program.

Breed Theater

Audiences know when they enter the theater to see a Harry Carey picture, that they are going to be treated to the kind of fast action and stirring story that makes one evening all too short. Hunt Stromberg, the producer of the Carey features, has learned the secret of making western pictures. He bases their appeal on good sound stories—they are not merely a matter of a lot of trick riding and faked fights. Carey pictures ring true, because they are true.

The latest Carey picture, The Texas Trail, which comes to the Breed theater today and Saturday, beats all that have gone before. From the very start it is apparent that the hero and the villain are just itching to get at each other's throats and you're all primed for the terrific encounters which follow through the course of the film.

This isn't by any means a story of Adam and Eve, but it had its beginning in an apple, just the same—only a dried apple—in fact, a whole box of dried apples. The villain hides the roll of stolen money in a box of dried apples and it remains for the hero to help the heroine get back the money for her uncle, clear her and himself of suspicion, and deliver the bad man into the hands of the law. But doing all this isn't quite as easy as it sounds and there are breath-taking chases, amazing fistic encounters and startling rescues before Harry Carey wins his right to the pretty little heroine.

Harry Carey is, as usual, a thrilling western hero who knows how to get every ounce of excitement out of a situation and is admirably equipped to add to the original script of the story by masterful exhibitions of daring horsemanship and fistic proficiency.

Supporting Carey, in the role of the heroine, is winsome Ethel Shannon, who rides well, looks pretty always, and acts with that finer dramatic appreciation which is so often lacking on the screen. The supporting players have been well chosen and each, in his turn, adds measurably to the overpowering appeal of the picture.

Coming to the Breed

An unusual story of the present day, full of suspense and thrills and lavish with luxury, A Slave of Fashion comes to the Breed theatre on Sunday. It is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production upon which no time nor expense were spared.

The story is of the fashionable New York with a girl from a little middle western town suddenly thrust upon the ultra smart section of the sparkling metropolis.

Samuel Shipman, who wrote it directly for the screen, based his story on a real circumstance. In fact it tells a story that might be experienced by anyone.

Hobart Henley directed A Slave of Fashion for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It has been done on an elaborate scale and many weeks alone were spent on building the sets and designing the costumes.

Baby Chick Man's Store.

Roy B. Clark of East Hartford, well known as the Baby Chick Man, has opened a Norwich branch store at 50-52 Shetucket street, which will be an exclusive supply store, carrying a full line of feed and poultry supplies, while in the hatching season from February to August 1st the baby chicks will be on hand, Charles C. Miller is manager in charge of the store.

Mr. Clark's hatchery at East Hartford is of 48,000 egg capacity and turns out broods of baby chicks every week. Last season he sold over 200,000 baby chicks that were shipped throughout New England. One of his unusual experiences in shipping baby chicks was when he sent a box of twenty-five chicks by air mail to Chicago. They were the first baby chicks that had ever taken the air this way but the whole shipment arrived safe and sound and alive and healthy.

Frank L. Baum's screen version of "The Wizard of Oz" ranks as a classic. The scarecrow, the tin woodman and little Dorothy are all there but the Kansas cyclone is the real "wiz" of "The Wizard of Oz." It's by all means the most pretentious production Larry Semon, popular eccentric comedian, has attempted and with the capable support of such well known players as Bryant Washburn, Charlie Murray, Dorothy Dwan, Virginia Pearson and others, no adverse criticism could possibly be made about the acting.

Repelling a mimic robbery, with a revolver, which he thought was not loaded, Hugh Hickey, a paying teller in the Corn Exchange Bank on 142th street, New York, shot and dangerously wounded Joseph Herts, an assistant teller, who had entered his cage with two guns in a mock hold up.

COME IN AND SEE ALL THE LOVELY THINGS

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Paul Specht's European Triumphs

Paul Specht, the internationally famous musical director who is to play at the Norwich State Armory on Sept. 26th has just returned from Europe direct from London where playing for the Prince of Wales at the latter's own request and after accomplishments that have baffled all competitors in the field, Paul Specht, together with his Orchestra appeared at the Piccadilly Hotel of London and scored a tremendous triumph, the Prince of Wales himself having danced to their music no less than five times during one week. While this band played at the Piccadilly Paul Specht himself conducted negotiations with the Cunard Steamship lines for the placement of his bands on the entire Cunard fleet.

During Specht's presence in London the British public went literally wild over Specht's playing and so insistent has been the demand for Paul Specht music that several other bands are to be exported to London. Specht also arranged for the placement of American jazz in Paris, one of them having left for Claridge's Hotel but a few weeks ago under the direction of Frank Guarante. This makes a total of eleven Paul Specht bands in Europe and more than a score in the United States and Canada.

In "The Man Who Found Himself," starring Thomas Meighan at the Palace Theatre on Sunday next, Paramount promises a high powered story of the kind that Meighan fans like best—full of drama and romance and comedy.

Booth Tarkington wrote the story especially for Mr. Meighan. Alfred E. Green, who directed Tom in "The Bachelor Daddy," "Back Home and Broke," "Pied Piper Malone" and others just as successful, made this one also.

Adapted for the screen by Tom Geraghty, "The Man Who Found Himself" is a story intense with interest—strong, vital drama with a punch and an appealing theme of love and regeneration, laid against a prison background as was one of the biggest of all Meighan hits, "The City of Silent Men."

Virginia Valli, who was Meighan's leading woman in "The Confidence Man," heads the cast in this one, too. Frank Morgan, of the Broadway stage play, "The Firebrand," has a "heavy" role. John Harrington, Norman Trevor, Charles Stevenson, Julia Hoyt and Lynn Fontanne appear in the cast.

Morgan is a rival banker of Meighan in a small Hudson River town. He railroads the star to prison when he discovers that Tom's younger brother has been plunging in Wall Street, lost a lot of money and has borrowed bank funds to "cover up." Tom is shipped to Sing Sing when the brother refuses to admit his guilt. While in jail he learns his fiance is going to marry the man who put him behind the bars through trickery. He makes his escape and returns to the home town. With the help of two former convicts, he plants a clever trap whereby the crooked banker is killed by a night watchman at the bank while he is trying to make a getaway with the contents of the vault. Tom and the girl make up, this time for keeps.

It's the finest Meighan story to date developing situations of genuine humor and drama.

Meighan—Tarkington and Paramount! It's an unbeatable combination.

According to Lieut. Com. John Philip Sousa, lack of financial award commensurate with their efforts is likely to result in a blight of the rising generation of American composers. Sousa is without much doubt the most successful of living American composers, and yet he has earned much more as a conductor than as a composer. In spite of the sale of more than five million talking machine records of "Stars and Stripes Forever," Sousa would have had little more than a comfortable living had it not have been for his band. Victor Herbert, who died a year ago, and whose works were enormously successful, left an estate of less than $100,000—a year's profit for a moderately successful bootlegger. Even composers of popular music are not earning as much as a few years ago. Popular compositions "pay out" in a much shorter time and unlike most musicians, Sousa does not blame the radio. Rather he says it is due to the ceaseless change which the average American demands in his amusement.

Still "Strong" for Roquefort

There was an increase in the imports of cheese into the United States from 26,182,740 pounds, valued at $7,876,574 in the first six months of 1924 to 28,495,748 pounds, valued at $7,793,689, in the corresponding period of 1925. More cheese was imported from France, Italy, Greece, Switzerland, and the Netherlands, while the imports from Argentina dropped from 617,234 pounds in the first half of 1924 to 38,857 pounds in the first half of 1925, and those from Canada dropped from 569,338 pounds in the 1924 period to 120,615 pounds in the 1925 period. There were no imports of cheese from Austria in 1925, contrasted with an import of 101,706 pounds in the first six months of 1924.

The cheese imported into the United States from Australia and Canada is of the Cheddar type and comes in competition with United States cheese, while from France come mainly Camembert and Roquefort cheese; from Italy, Pecorino, Parmesan, Reggiano, Gorgonzola; Caciocavallo, and other special types; from Greece, Casseri, Macaroni and Fetta cheese; from Switzerland, mainly Emmenthal; and from the Netherlands, Edam and Gouda. These types of cheese are made only a comparatively small scale in the United States, and therefore imports are required to meet the demand.

Although imported cheese increased in quantity, during the first half of 1925, the value was less than in the 1924 period, partly on account of lower prices, principally in Italy and Greece.

Imports of cheese were largest in June, owing to the very large shipments which came from Italy and Switzerland in that month.—Commerce Reports.

The Modern Cooper

Cooperage is one of the oldest vocations. Probably a cooper accompanied and fashioned the water casks so essential to the success of their long voyage to the New England shores. Columbus many years later carried all of his drinking water in casks fashioned out of hoops and staves, and history records his landing on strange islands solely to replenish his supply. Even our famous New England whaling fleets sailed away upon a four years' cruise with a hold full of lumber and competent coopers among the crew.

Yet cooperage like cooking and baking, now responds to the touch of progress. Our modern cooper is a mere operative; a cog in a great industrial machine that can utilize costly materials and yet fashion finer barrels at a lower cost.

Our finished barrel comprises 18 board feet, and all of the interior surface must be thoroughly seasoned. Our old-time barrel manufacturer used for this purpose a charcoal fire, but such an improvisation would today be entirely out of the question with a monthly production schedule varying from 20,000 to 25,000 barrels.

Speed and true uniformity of the finished product are essential and can only be obtained through the use of gas. Our modern barrel manufacturer uses a cone approximately 12 inches in diameter set flush with the floor, and 12 of these cones are operated by a blower type of mixer.—Industrial Gas.

Camels Exchanged for Bullets

In Abyssinia camels represent the most valuable possession of the people, in many instances being used as the equivalent of money. Dr. Lutz Heck, son of the director of the Berlin Zoological Garden, learned this while in quest of animals for the Zoo.

However, he found some Abyssinians who regarded rifle cartridges higher in value than the animals. He succeeded in getting six dromedaries, which now are in the Berlin Zoo, for fifteen cartridges.

Every time the sun shines the pessimist consoles himself with the thought that it is raining somewhere.

Czech Industries Busy

The chief industries in Czechoslovakia are well occupied, money is easy, the grain crop is larger than that of last year but is inferior in quality, prices are decreasing, and unemployment is still diminishing, according to advices to the department of commerce. In July, car loadings showed an increase of 6 per cent. over the preceding month, and the production of coal and lignite an increase of 10 per cent. The Czechoslovak exports in July were 12 per cent. greater in value than those of July, 1924, and the imports 25 per cent. less, so that the favorable balance of trade was greatly increased.

Ears Back in Style With New Boy Bob

NORMA SHEARER

WITH the vogue of the extreme new French boy bob on the increase, feminine ears that were hidden during the reign of the regular bob are beginning to peek out into fashionable favor again.

Norma Shearer, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, affects this new bob which demands that the hair be drawn tightly back from the forehead and from the ears in real boy fashion in "A Slave of Fashion," her next film.

Playing at the Breed Theatre Sunday.

YOUNG MONTVILLE CHECK FORGER CONVICTED IN NEW LONDON COURT

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 24. — Albert C. Kellogg, a Montville youth of 18 was today convicted of having forged two checks, each for $250, and to have wasted the money. One check was cashed at the City National bank in New London and the other at the Chelsea bank, at Norwich. Then Kellogg conceived the idea that he could get away and stealing a bicycle at Montville he decamped. He was located at Sag Harbor a few days later. Proceedings were begun at once to bring him back, by sending Sergeant John Cavanaugh after requisition papers to Gov. Trumbull, who asked Gov. Smith of New York to honor papers that would bring Kellogg here for punishment. This proceeding required a few days, but it was accomplished and when the police court convened today Sergeant Cavanaugh was here with his prisoner. Kellogg though but 18 is "farm grown" and rises to a height of over six feet. He bulks up like a steer also.

He had no defense to make, but the prosecutor had gone over the facts and had determined that Kellogg was a victim of bad reading of wild west and detective stories that turned his thoughts into channels that convinced him that he could get easy money and that he might do bandit acts and escape punishment. He has probably abandoned that notion now. Fortunately for Kellogg his father could raise the money that would compensate the banks for the losses they sustained by cashing the worthless checks. The elder Kellogg did that. He also met the expense of bringing his son to trial. That was $75 more.

When the case was presented to the court with the statement of the prosecutor, who recommended a suspended sentence to the reformatory, Judge Prince hesitated, but decided that he would give a chap of 18 years a chance to get into the right way of living. He adhered to the recommendation of the prosecutor and disposed the penalty suggested. He also gave Kellogg some good advice, telling him to stick to the farm and to abjure bad reading and apply his talents to useful occupation.

James Bance, a member of the crew of the barge Pequot; Harold Jones, United States Coast Guard destroyer Cassin; Arthur Bhrestson, steamer Sterling; John McGinnis, 67 Jay street; Anna Hamilton, 7 Fourth street; Evelyn Greig, Westerly, and Manuel Alfreda Strazzo, 31 Grand street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were dismissed today.

Mrs. Fannie D. Smith died this afternoon at the residence of her son, William E. Leiton, 107 Green street. Mrs. Smith was a native of Charlotteville, Va., and had been a resident of New London about a year. She had been ill several weeks.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins E. Stoeckel today caused the operator's license of J. B. Monaghan, a sailor attached to the U. S. S. 18, stationed at the submarine base, to be returned to the owner. Commissioner Stoeckel also caused the license of Michael Sasson, 83 Union street, Amado Sejalharoh, 72 Wallach street, and Albert J. Dias, submarine base, to be returned to the owners.

Benjamin L. and Elizabeth H. C. Armstrong today sold to Joseph and Florence Fine a house and lot on Pequot avenue, together with a second small parcel of land. The price paid was $14,000. The purchasers mortgaged the Mariners Savings Bank for $7,000 and to Mr. Armstrong for $6,000.

Belle Cruickshank has sold to Morris and Elizabeth Gloria Federman a house and lot on Connecticut avenue.

It was revealed today that an automobile owned by Miss Katherine Sullivan of Steward street, which had been stored in the Frisbie garage, Bank street since the 19th inst., had been visited by a thief and that plunder worth $70 had been stolen from and off the car. The plunder included a purse containing $11, a raincoat, spare tire and snubbers.

Minnie Kerson and Lucille Manning were sent to jail from the police court today, each to serve sixty days on each of three counts for stealing from the stores of Kresge, Hart and Blair. The colored women did their thieving yesterday afternoon while they were shopping with a bag to hold what they had obtained by purchase or theft. There never was a clearer case of guilt nor was there one in which the accused put up a bolder defense, for while the stolen goods were found in their possession and were identified, the women pleaded not guilty when in court and attempted to give testimony to prove what they claimed. That was some task—one that was too great for the degresses to accomplish. Both the women have been prosecuted in court prior to this morning and both have been severely punished. The Kerson woman has been heavily fined for keeping a disreputable place and she has been similarly treated for breach of the peace. She has at times raised the money to pay and she has also served terms in jail. The Manning woman was in court some time ago for attacking a policeman with a knife. She had the same weapon in her shopping bag when arrested. She says she is married and that her husband is a sailor on the coast guard steamer Cassin, but there was no other evidence to prove that what she said was true. She appears to have obtained an existence without work, as does the Kerson woman. Both claimed they did laundry work, but that was a mere statement as they could not substantiate what they claimed. To Miss Winifred Reardon and Policeman Clyde Murphy may be attributed the arrest and conviction of the pair of crooks. It was from Miss Reardon that the Manning woman bought one dress and stole another. Miss Reardon had the good judgment to notify the police at once and to give a description of her customers that led to their apprehension. The thieving pair even stole garters and garter ornaments that they might have purchased for a very little money.

As evidencing the depravity of the Manning woman it may be said that when she was released on a bail bond of $300, furnished by Edward Jones, last night she remained in town until this morning when she purchased a ticket for Boston intending to get away before the hour for the police court to convene. The fact that she purchased the ticket got into the possession of Jones and he sought the aid of the police to capture the runaway. A telephone message to the police at Westerly brought Lucille into custody again. Then Jones hired a taxi at a cost of $8 and with Officer McCaskey had the Desdemona of her kind in custody and in court soon after it opened for the session. The woman appeared in court in a plaid cloth suit and brought with her an aroma of talcum powder. On the witness stand persistence in denial of guilt did not avail her anything. The penalty imposed upon the pair made it impossible for them to get liberty by paying money. They will work out their terms in jail and will pay some $50 in costs also.

Thomas J. Hanley, son of Mrs. James Nelson, of 59 Summit avenue, and Miss Ruth Hendry, daughter of Mrs. Sarah Hendry, 176 Bank street, were married this morning at 7 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church. A nuptial mass was sung by Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crowley, the pastor, in the presence of near relatives and a few intimate acquaintances, the wedding being simple because of the recent death of the bride's father, John B. Hendry. James A. May was best man and Miss Kane Hendry, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs. Hanley are now on a honeymoon trip and upon their return to New London will reside at 8 Summit avenue. Mr. Hanley is employed by Butler & Pierce of this city.

W. Howie Eden, son of William Eden of Lee avenue, and Miss Leona M. Noone, Boston, were married yesterday afternoon at the parsonage of the Second Congregational church, by Rev. J. Beveride Lee, pastor of the church. Mr. and Mrs. Eden will reside in Florida upon the conclusion of a wedding trip. Mr. Eden was formerly employed at the plant of the Whiton Machine company.

Miss Gertrude Mitchell, daughter of Mrs. Lilla Geddes, of Broad street, has returned to her home in New York, having spent a fortnight with her mother in this city.

Mrs. Richard Mansfield, of Ocean avenue, has returned to her home, "The Grange," after having spent several days in New York.

Mrs. Andrew Rowley, 15 Linden street, is a medical student at the private hospital.

The police department is to be provided with an additional supply of firearms, for City Manager William A. Holt has decided to have a dozen or more of the most modern police revolvers purchased at once for the use of the department. A representative of the Colts Fire Arms company was in this city today submitting samples of the latest models of the police weapon. The revolvers are worth $20 each and will replace some of the arms that have become defective and others will be kept in readiness for service as additional officers may be added to the force. The city has not purchased firearms of any description for about eight years, the last supply being obtained during the early period of the world war, when the members of the department were given the best possible equipment to protect themselves because of the various war emergencies that developed from time to time.

Chief Inspector of Detectives Lahey, of the New York police department this evening wired the local department that Dominick Colasanto, a youth of about 15, had run away from his home in New York and requested that the lad, should he be located in this city, be detained and the New York police notified that an officer might come to this city and take charge of the runaway. Inspector Lahey also stated that the runaway might be found at the residence of Mrs. Mariano Palmette, corner of Shaw and Steward streets. Patrolman William Corcoran visited the Shaw and Steward street house where inquiry revealed that the boy sought for had not been there. Mrs. Palmette was also indignant because an officer had visited the house in quest of the runaway.

William Popkis, 100 Ocean avenue, proprietor of a grocery store on Garfield avenue, who reported to the police last night that his automobile had been stolen from in front of his place of business recovered his machine during the night. Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray locating the car on a side street not a great distance from where it was stolen. It is believed that acquaintances of Popkis took the car and enjoyed a ride and placed the car where it was found when they had concluded their night's pleasure.

Connecticut College students held a day of sports at Ocean Beach today for over two score of the young ladies visited the shore and carried out a program of aquatic events that provided equally as much delight for the students as the stunts did for the spectators. The girls arranged a program of short distance swimming events, diving and fancy arm stroke swimming participated in by the greater number of the young ladies and the events occupied several hours. The temperature of the water was excellent and the air was not cold.

The man who is thoughtfully imbued with the idea that a public office is a public trust may believe in investigating committees.

TITLE TO NEW THEATRE SITE HAS NOT YET BEEN SECURED

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 24.—Title to the new theatre site, State and Church streets, Arthur S. Friend being at the head of a corporation that intends to erect a modern theatre on the tract, has not been completed, nor will it be for at least another week, although the transfer of the property from Walter S. Garde to Friend, a former moving picture salesman, has been in process of completion many weeks. Attorney Frank L. McGuire, who is preparing the deed whereby the property will be transferred from Mr. Garde to Mr. Friend, stated late this afternoon that the deed could not be ready for filing at the office of the city clerk probably before Wednesday next. A meeting between Attorney McGuire, Messrs. Garde and Friend took place Wednesday afternoon at the office of Attorney McGuire at which matters were adjusted whereby it was agreed by Mr. Friend to take over the title in the realty as soon as the deed was prepared.

The theatre it is planned, when completed, will represent a cost of approximately $600,000. It is intended that the lobby will have a series of stores on either side, where soda, ice cream and luncheons will be on sale.

CLAIM ALCOHOL IN SLOOP WAS FOUND IN SOUND

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 24.—One of the 75-foot coast guard patrol boats in patrolling the sound late Tuesday night came upon the fishing sloop Marian Dorothy, owned by Thomas Tengleston, 11 Cliff street, this city. Aboard were 20 cans of alcohol, each can containing six gallons. Alleging that the craft was a rum-runner, the boat, together with the alcohol, and Thomas Carey, William Chappell and Peterson, all of Noank, who were aboard the sloop, with Tengleston were brought into port. A record of the seizure of the craft was made in the United States Coast Guard sectional base here, but because the craft having been found off Watch Hill which is in Rhode Island waters, the seized boat, cargo and crew were taken today to Providence where they are scheduled to appear before a United States commissioner. Tengleston declared that his craft was not engaged in the rum-running traffic, but that the alcohol found in the hold of the vessel was some which the crew of the boat had found floating in the sound.

Several boats that have been detected carrying liquor through the sound of late have endeavored, and successfully in some cases, to dispose of their cargoes by throwing the booze into the sound as the rum-craft was chased by the patrol boats and it is barely possible that the story of the finding of the cans of alcohol floating as related by Capt. Tengleston is correct.

Lays New Program Before President Coolidge

COPYRIGHT KEYSTONE VIEW CO. NEW YORK

Senator James E. Watson, Republican, of Indiana, who visited President Coolidge at Swampscott, Mass., and laid a new program of the next Congress. The outstanding measures, in order of importance, are "tax reduction, lowering maximum normal and surtax rates to less than 25 per cent, affirmative action on World Court, legislation to stimulate railroad consolidations, reorganization of executive departments to cut out duplication and triplication and further immigration restriction." Incidentally, Senator Watson is in for a fight this coming election, as he is after a third term against a variegated opposition.

Engineering Students Quit.

It is estimated that less than 40 per cent. of the students who originally enroll in the leading colleges for engineering courses ever graduate in that course. The number who falter is steadily mounting, it is said. Lack of natural ability is not the chief reason given by the students in 28 universities and colleges in the United States and Canada. Dislike for the work, long hours and arduous study and failure to see a satisfactory earning capacity in a short time after graduation are some of the reasons.

Leopards are bolder than tigers, and more frequently man-eaters.

ITALY BUILDING GREAT TUNNEL UNDER APENNINE MOUNTAINS

FLORENCE, Italy, Sept. 24 (AP)—Italy soon will be able to boast of one of the world's greatest railway tunnels. The double track tube under the Apennines, part of the electrified direct line between here and Bologna now in process of construction, will measure 18 kilometres (slightly more than eleven miles.)

The tunnel will rank next to the famous Simplon tunnel through the Alps which is 12 1-2 miles long, and ahead of the Mont Cenis tunnel connecting Italy and France, which measures eight miles in length.

FREAK OFFSPRING OF COW AND RAM RAISED IN PRUSSIA

ROHNENSAND, Prussia, Sept. 24 (AP)—A cross between a cow and a sheep in this district has been a source of much scientific and popular conjecture during the past year. The mother of this extraordinary freak of nature was a black cow weighing 495 pounds, and the father a white ram of 176 pounds. The hybrid offspring of these strangely mated parents is the property of Herr Thomsen, the landlord of the village inn. The animal is considerably smaller than an average sized calf, but it has the body of a cow. It has a sheep's head and tail. The horns are curved like those of a ram and the coating of the animal resembles lamb's wool.

TROUT PLANTED IN MOUNTAIN WATERS

After having been in operation three months hatching 2,500,000 mountain trout eggs for the stocking of lakes and streams in Glacier National park, the government fish hatchery at this place was closed for the season. The last of the hatch was sent out for planting in Avalanche and Lower Two Medicine lakes. This region of the Rocky mountains now is said to contain more rainbow, speckled cut throat, Dolly Varden and other varieties of trout than any other area of its size in the world.

During the season just closed 1,000,000 grayling eggs, obtained from the state spawn taking station on Georgetown lake were hatched out, together with 640,000 rainbow trout eggs and 800,000 native trout eggs. Of the native trout eggs 388,000 were developed only to the degree that they became eyed eggs and these were then packed for transportation into the lakes which cannot be reached by truck or saddle horses.

Unable to pack the cans of fry by means of pack horses, the government system is merely to bring them to the stage of eyed eggs. These are packed in cloth trays and placed in small cases which are supplied with moss or ice to keep down the temperature. These in turn are packed upon the backs of men who carry them to the lakes in the recesses of the Rocky mountains and there planted in the waters.

The Junk Business

There are in the United States approximately 3,000 scrap iron yards, involving the investment of millions of dollars, employing probably 50,000 workers and an additional 150,000 scrap collectors who depend on this occupation for a livelihood.

About one-fourth of the scrap supply is derived form the railroads.

Automotive industries consume about ten per cent of the Nation's steel output each year.

It is estimated that about 5,000,000 tons of country scrap comes on the market annually. This is derived from all sources other than railroads, industries and automobiles.

Conservation of waste materials in the iron and steel industry not only prevents unnecessary loss of our iron ore reserves but the otherwise waste materials add quality to the finished steel product and a full measure of profit for the producer.—Thrift Magazine.

100,000,000 Worship Lama

More than a hundred million Chinese worship the Panchan lama, the Tibetian living Buddha. This religious leader was once a poor boy of the streets, and 37 years ago he was elevated to his present eminence by rites known only in the inner Buddha circles. He is worshipped as a living god.

PHENOMENAL INFANT PRODIGY DIED 200 YEARS AGO JUNE

Two hundred years ago, on June 27, 1725, died, if contemporary records are to be believed, a four-year-old child who surely holds the record for infant precocity, says The London Post. A few hours after Christian Heinecker (he was a little German) came into the world he spoke, and in ten months could converse on most subjects. By the time he was 18 months old the Bible was an open book to him. At the end of two and a half years he could answer any question dealing with history and geography, and then turned his attention to languages. He learned to speak Latin and French fluently, but his feeble constitution broke down under the strain, and little Christian's "crowded hour" was at an end.

Gathering of the "Boys"

Seven customers were in a barber shop at Bowdoinham, Me. They were Lorenzo Minot, 91; Al Hillman, 84; Emery Sedgeley, 84; Will Brown, 76; Fon Wood, 76 and Captain Hall, 81, when in walked a stranger. Nobody knew him. He started talking somewhat familiarly with the men present and particularly with Fon Wood. Mr. Wood did not know the stranger until chance words revealed him as Mr. Wood's brother, Frank, who went away from Bowdoinham more than 40 years ago, says the Boston Globe. Ten days before landing in Bowdoinham he had been in the saddle in California. Every person present had been an old-time boyhood friend with the exception of Capt. Hall. The combined age of the eight men was 640, or an average of 80 years.

Young Diplomat Shows His Ability At Hard Task

Ferdinand L. Mayer, native of Indianapolis, who at 33 is the Charge d'Affaires at the American Embassy in Pekin, China. It was his job, following the appointment of John Van A. MacMurray to succeed Jacob G. Schurman, to handle the difficult problems of the American people and property in China, in danger during the internal warfare. He is a graduate of Princeton, Harvard Law School, and has had a remarkable list of promotions while in the Diplomatic corps. During the Washington Conference on the Limitation of Armament, he was assigned to the Division of Far Eastern affairs in connection with Oriental problems before the conference.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKETS AT A GLANCE.

New York.

Stocks weak; high priced stocks break 5 to 11 points.

Bonds firm; French issues rise on heavy buying.

Foreign exchanges mixed; sterling slightly lower.

Cotton steady; favorable spot markets.

Sugar barely steady; increased spot offerings.

Coffee easier; lower Brazil market.

Chicago.

Wheat weak; foreign competition.

Corn lower; large deliveries.

Cattle strong; shipping demand, good.

Hogs firm and active.

DROP IN STOCK PRICES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24. (AP)—Stock prices crumbled 1 to 7 points today under an avalanche of selling orders for both accounts. Selling pressure was inspired by speculative fears of an increase in the New York federal reserve re-discount rates which later proved to be unfounded, and the apparent withdrawal of pool support in several issues.

Sporadic bidding up of a selected list of railroad shares and the progressive lowering of the call money rate, from 4 3-4 to 4 per cent., interrupted, but failed to halt, the selling movement. Buying of the rails centered largely in Chesapeake & Ohio, and Norfolk & Western, which attained new high prices for the year at 110 1-4 and 141 1-4, respectively, and in New York Central, which crossed 124 and then slipped back to 123 3-4 for a net gain of one-half on the day. Canadian Pacific and Nickel Plate, also showed substantial gains.

The sharpest breaks took place in the high priced industrial specialties. American Can broke from 23b 1-2 to 227 1-2 and then rallied to 230 1-4, off 5 1-4. Du Pont, General Electric, Mack Trucks, Otis Elevator, Sears-Roebuck and West Penn Company fell 4 to 5 1-2, and International Telephone, Kelsey Wheel, National Lead, Otis Steel preferred United Railways, Investment preferred, United States Cast Iron Pipe and Universal Pipe preferred showed net declines of 3 or more points.

A break of over 7 points in Briggs Manufacturing, which touched a new low for the year at 27 1-2, was associated with unconfirmed rumors relating to the omission of the dividend and cancellation of contracts. The decline in this issue unsettled other motor and accessory shares, American Bosch Magneto, Hudson, Packard, Pierce-Arrow, Spicer Manufacturing, Studebaker, White, Willys-Overland and several others showing net declines of 1 to 3 1-2 points.

Tobaccos were in brisk demand at the opening, but the rally soon petered out except in Lorillard, which closed over a point higher at 38 1-4 after establishing a new top one-half a point above that figure. American Tobacco dropped from 118 3-4 to 115 and then rallied to 116 1-4, off 1 3-8 while the "B" stock fell from 117 1-2 to 114 1-8 and then rallied to 115, off 1 1-4.

Among the few issues to move against the current trend were Coty, Inc., Detroit Edison, Fleischmann, International Cement, Liggett & Myers B, New York Shipbuilding, and Sweets Company of America, all up a point or more.

Call money renewed at 4 3-4 per cent., dropped to 4 1-4 and thence to 4. Time money rates also relaxed slightly 60 to 90 day funds being quoted at 4 1-4 to 4 1-2 instead of on a flat 4 1-2 per cent. basis, with a corresponding reduction for the longer dates. Commercial paper rates were unchanged.

With the exception of another break of 90 points in Polish zlotis to 18.70 cents, foreign exchanges moved within rather narrow and irregular limits. Demand sterling was slightly easier at $4.84 1-8, and French francs held firm just below 4.73 cents.

FAIR, COOLER TODAY; FAIR TOMORROW

Norwich Bulletin

1796 1925

NORWICH, CONN., FRIDAY, SEPT. 25, 1925

FULL ASSOCIATED PRESS DESPATCHES

The Bulletin.

Norwich, Friday, Sept. 25, 1925

WEATHER

Conditions

The Quebec disturbance of Wednesday night has advanced rapidly northeastward to the Gulf of St. Lawrence with a trough extending south and southward to othe Virginia coast, a secondary being central in this trough over Maine.

During the last 24 hours showers have occurred in New England.

Temperatures have risen in the middle and north Atlantic states.

The weather will be mostly fair Friday and Saturday in the North Atlantic states. It will be slightly cooler on Friday in the New England states.

Winds

North of Sandy Hook: Fresh to strong west and northwest and partly overcast weather Friday.

Sandy Hook to Hatteras: Pressure possibly strong southwest shifting to west and northwest winds and partly overcast weather Friday.

Forecast

Northern New England and southern New England: Fair and slightly cooler Friday, Saturday fair; warmer in the interior.

TAFTVILLE

Edward Lucier of North A street and Francis Murphy of South A street, motored to Springfield, Thursday, to attend the Eastern States exposition.

Court Wequonnoc, No. 88, Foresters of America held its regular semi-monthly meeting at the courtrooms in the St. Louis hall building on Dion street. Chief Ranger William Smith presided, and routine business was transacted and several important reports read.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Jemory and family who have been spending the past four months in Central Falls, R. I., and New Bedford, have returned to the village.

Mr. and Mrs. John Douglas Sharples of North Second avenue are enjoying a motor trip through Maine.

Edward Thoma and Robert Gelino of Lisbon were among the local people who attended the Eastern States exposition at Springfield, Thursday.

Castle Perilous, No. 3747, K. O. K. A. held its first regular fall conclave Wednesday evening at the Taftville Congregational church. Hartwell Zoerner presided as king and Bryon Kloss was herald. It was voted to hold a ceremonial in October, and officers for that conclave were appointed.

Louis Pgradis of South A street was in Springfield, Thursday attending the Eastern States exposition.

The Ladies Benevolent society of the Taftville Congregational church opened the fall schedule by holding the first meeting of the season in the church parlors Wednesday afternoon. The president, Miss Gertrude M. Young presided at the business session which preceded the social hour. Refreshments were served by the committee in charge of the meeting. There was a good attendance.

Will Wolfenden of Terrace avenue has resigned his position with the Ponemah company.

Miss Katherine Higgins has been called to Pawtucket, R. I. by the serious illness of a relative.

The Misses Rosalma and Annie Gadbois of South B street have returned to their work after enjoying a vacation of several weeks.

Owing to the sudden change in the temperature of the weather, the crowd attending the carnival being given on the Providence street grounds under the auspices of the Taftville Athletic association, was not so large Thursday evening. However, the affair is being liberally supported by the townspeople and there is no doubt but that the association will realize a tidy sum to add to its treasury to meet expenses of the ball team next season.

Mrs. Alfred Linderson has returned to her home on North Third avenue after spending the summer at North Stonington.

NORWICH HAD SIX AUTO ACCIDENTS IN WEEK
